Deteriorating conditions, he said, have led to pipe fractures, pipe collapses, and bacterial cross contamination of stormwater and wastewater. This contaminated water flows into the Neponset River Estuary, Wollaston Beach, and "The Bog," a wooded area bounded by Belmont, Harvard, Hobart, and Sherman Sts.

The May 6 public hearing will include presentations by both Weston & Sampson Engineering and Beta Engineering with respect to the work necessary to be performed to resolve the underlying problems.

Coughlin reports that there is MWRA funding which has been identified to fund the drain pipe rehabilitation and replacement, the first of the two projects.

Coughlin said residents will have an opportunity to present their concerns at the hearing and encouraged them to attend.

375th Anniversary Event Sunday Thomas Morton Maypole Ritual Re-enactment

The Lord of Misrule, as he called himself, and his cohorts will dance around their Maypole on Ma-Re-Mount (the hill by the sea) once again on Sunday, May 5, the 375th anniversary of their infamous 17th Century revels.

Historian Jack Dempsey will portray Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn, Gent., in a reenactment of the hedonistic ritual of long ago, sponsored by the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program and the Fore River Watershed Association.

The observance will begin at 1 p.m. when Morton (Dempsey) and his Indian friends (Sachem One Bear and members of the Order for the Preservation of Indian Culture) conduct a 45-minute walk along Black's Creek, describing life there in the 17th Century.

"Black's Creek is part of the Fore River Watershed," said Jody Purdy-Quinlan of Weymouth, director of the Fore River Watershed Association. "Since our mission includes celebrating the history and culture of the watershed, we are excited to participate in this program."

Following the walk, Morton (Dempsey) will invite the public back to Maypole Park for the crowning of the May King and Queen and for singing and dancing, accompanied by Urban Myth and the Village Circle Band. The 17th Century Matchlock Company will offer a musket salute to Morton. The Wolf Tail Singers, a Native American drum group, will also provide entertainment.

Cider will be provided by the Park Department, but nothing stronger, even though Morton exhorted his followers to "drinke and be merry, merry, merry boys. Uncover thy head, and feare no harme, for here's good liquor to keep it warm."

And from his post in Plymouth, Pilgrim Governor William Bradford described life of the Merrymount revelers as "quaffing and drinking — in great excess... inviting Indian women for their consorts, dancing and frisking together — and worst practices."

Eventually, Morton and his men turned to trading firearms to the Indians, which scared the Pilgrims so much that they sent Capt. Miles Standish with an army of eight to arrest Morton, who was too drunk to resist, and deport him back to England.

Archaeologist and painter David Wagner will display his paintings of Native American New England at Sunday's reenactment and copies of the book "New English Canaan," written by Morton himself and edited by Dempsey, will be available for sale.

The program will begin at Maypole Park at the intersection of Maypole Road and Samoset Avenue. Parking is limited so participants are requested to park at Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Drive and walk to Maypole Park, a 10-minute hike.

An optional picnic on the beach will follow the festivities. Participants are asked to bring musical instruments and their own picnic fixings. Rain date is Sunday, May 19. For further information, call Dave Murphy at 617-376-1254.

Sterling Middle School Wins State Environmental Award

State Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand will present an Excellence in Environmental Education award to the Sterling Middle School for its "Life Skills Project" at ceremonies to be held today (Thursday) from noon to 2 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Massachusetts State House.

Sterling will be one of only 67 schools to be honored at the awards ceremony, which recognizes schools from across the state for their efforts in environmental education and is part of environmental education efforts of the Commonwealth.

This is the eighth annual awards ceremony.

South Shore Mental Health Art Show At City Hall

South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) will hold an art show during May in observance of Mental Health Month.

An opening reception for the art show will be held at City Hall Monday, May 6, at 2 p.m. The public is invited to both events.

The art show is part of SSMH's Mental Health Month celebration, a nationwide event held during the month of May to recognize the value of mental health care and the impact it has on the well-being of our families and communities. To Make Health Care More Accessible Quincy Medical Center Expands Interpreter Service

To better meet the language and communication needs of its diverse patient population, Quincy Medical Center has expanded its interpreter services to include a new, 24-hour, multi-language interpretation service.

The new system, through On-line Interpreters, Inc., offers full service language interpretation and translation in 150 different languages and is available 24 hours per day, seven days a week. In addition to over-the-phone interpretation, the service offers e-mail, short message translations and visual translation.

"The expanded Interpreter Service, offering translation in 150 different languages, bridges language barriers to make our quality health care services more accessible to the South Shore's growing immigrant and international community," said Mary Sweeney, vice president of strategic services at QMC.

According to the 2000 US Census, Asians, predominately of Chinese origin, are the largest minority in Quincy, comprising 15.4 percent of Quincy's population or more than 13,500 residents. QMC has taken major steps to bridge cultural and language barriers with Quincy's Asian population.

QMC's Asian Health Services, a collaboration between QMC, Boston Medical Center and Manet Community Health Center, offers:

- The Manet Community Health Center, which is staffed by two Asian physicians who are fluent in Cantonese and Mandarin.

- A full-time program director who is committed to meeting the personal and cultural needs of Asian patients.

- Free health screenings and community activities for the Asian community, including a hepatitis B screening in collaboration with the American Chinese Medical Association.

- On-site interpretation in Cantonese, Mandarin and Vietnamese.

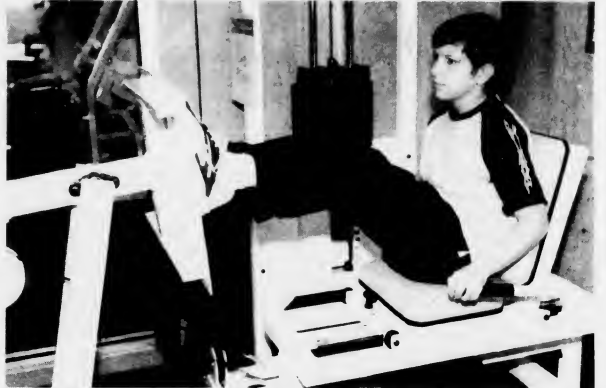

For more information about Asian Services at QMC call 617-376-5490.

Quincy Medical Center is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At QMC, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

TIE-DYEING T-SHIRTS was just one of the fun activities to be found at Healthy Kids Day held recently at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy. Here, Joseph Soricelli, age 7, and Deanna Soricelli, age 8, complete the tie-dyeing process to create their colorful, one-of-a-kind T-shirts.

Newton To Host Ward 6 Tax Relief Workshop

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton has scheduled a Tax Relief Workshop for seniors and income-eligible residents tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St.

Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the Board of Assessors, and Thomas Clashy, director of the Quincy Council on Aging, will discuss a variety of exemption programs.

In addition, the abatement process will be discussed for those residents who believe that the city has over-assessed the value of their home.

In an April 25 letter to neighbors, Newton said he organized tonight's (Thursday's) workshop in response to the significant increase in residential property tax bills that were recently sent out, attributing the increase to a combination of declining state aid and an unprecedented rise in property values.

An estimated 88,000 new cases of skin cancer will occur in the US in 2002, and 7,500 individuals are expected to die from it. That's in part because fewer than 1/3 of all Americans know the signs of melanoma, which can be cured when treated in its earliest stages.

Dermatologists Daniel Finn, MD; Mary Gibney, MD; Elise McCarthy, MD; and Kenneth Reed, MD are donating their time at this event to help increase awareness of the importance of early detection. Sponsored by Quincy Medical Center and the American Academy of Dermatology, this event coincides with Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month. Space is limited, so appointments are required.

TOM GILMARTIN (second left), Ward 6 councillor from 1946-49 and now in his 90s, dates back the furthest in service. Here he joins Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly, former Council President George Burke from Ward 5 and present Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

WARD 1 WAS well represented with present Councillor Greg Hanley and former Councillors Michael Cheney, Peter Kolson and Leo Kelly. The latter three also served as city council president.

Phelan Budget Calls For Downsizing Without Hurting Services

"significant, in the area of close to 200 employees, most of whom will be by way of attrition."

Public Safety, Phelan said, was the part of the budget reduced least "with the School Department being a close second."

Phelan said his proposed budget, using conservative financial projections, was in the area of $195 million

Under Phelan's proposed budget, the city's Traffic and Parking Department would be consolidated into the Department of Public Works (DPW). In addition, entities such as the Rent Grievance Board and the Commission on the Family would fall under a brand new department, which Phelan said would be called the Constituent Services Department.

Technological upgrades, said Phelan, including those in the Assessors Office, will allow for a more "streamlined" system where a resident's concerns can be tracked and handled more efficiently.

"When all is said and done, we will have a budget that will provide services in an effective manner and at considerably less cost to the Quincy taxpayer," Phelan said.

The mayor's budget must be approved by the City Council, which is scheduled to receive the budget at their May 6 meeting. Councilors will then hold hearings before taking a final vote.

By law, councilors can cut a proposed budget but cannot add to it.

Councillor at-Large Timothy Cahill is chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council.

Neighborhood Meeting To Discuss Weston Avenue Parking Garage

Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro will host a neighborhood meeting today (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., to discuss the demolition and restoration of the Weston Avenue Parking Garage.

The project, which has displaced many vehicles onto neighborhood streets, has created parking problems for residents of the Mellen Bray Condominium Complex at 10 Weston Ave., Whittemore Mills and other residents.

Copley Management, the Condominium Association's Management Company, has been invited to report on construction activities and efforts to minimize disruption to Mellen Bay residents and those in the surrounding neighborhood.

Jack Gillon, director of Traffic and Parking, will discuss parking rules during the construction period, and Kathy Nugent, inspector for the Department of Inspectional Services, will answer questions relative to the permitting process.

The meeting is open to all are residents and there will be an opportunity to ask questions. Those unable to attend the meeting may contact Gutro with their questions and concerns.

4 Residents On BU Dean's List

Four Quincy residents were named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Boston University.

They are Matthew S. Lebo, Martin H. Li, William Ma and Nyryan Nolido.

Raymondi Asks For Copies Of Dept. Head Budget Requests

In a letter dated April 22 and addressed to all city department heads, Council President Daniel Raymondi requested copies of initial departmental budget requests made by those department heads to Mayor William Phelan.

"As the City Council prepares for upcoming hearings regarding the Mayor's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year, it would be extremely helpful for the members of the City Council to have a copy of your initial departmental budget request that you have sent to the Mayor for his review."

Raymondi's letter requests that nine copies of the budget requests, presumably for all nine councilors, be received prior to May 6, the day Phelan's Fiscal Year 2003 budget is scheduled for presentation before the City Council.

Water Main Flushing In Houghs Neck

The city's Department of Public Works (DPW) will begin flushing the water mains in the Houghs Neck area beginning Monday, May 6 at Hibbard St. and flushing street by street out to Nut Island Rd.

The DPW anticipates that its crews will be able to flush approximately 10 to 15 blocks each day and that the entire Houghs Neck area between Hibbard St. and Nut Island Rd. will be completed within seven to eight days. DPW crews will be working between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

During the flushing program, the DPW suggests that residents try to minimize water usage while the water mains are being flushed in the vicinity of their houses and avoid doing laundry while DPW crews are flushing in the area around their houses.

If possible, laundry should be done at night or after the DPW has completed flushing for the day and faucets run clear.

Residents with any problems during the flushing program should contact the DPW at (617) 376-1910.

Quincy Community Action First-Time Homebuying Workshops In Cantonese

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. will offer free homebuying workshops in Cantonese for the first time.

Each workshop will consist of two sessions with the first workshop to be held Saturdays, May 11 and 18, and the second series to be held Mondays, June 3 and 10. They will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 11 Hayward St., North Quincy.

The workshops are open to all regardless of income or residence. Jonathan Yip, Equal Opportunity Administrator for the city of Quincy, will moderate the workshops, which will feature various real estate experts, including a broker, an attorney, lenders, a home inspector and a home insurer.

The workshops are conducted in accordance with standards set by the Massachusetts Homeownership Collaborative. Care is taken to avoid directing homebuyers to any particular product or service.

Topics include determining what price is within the buyer's budget, locating a property at that price, negotiating for the home, obtaining a mortgage, inspecting and insuring the property and, finally, closing the deal. Information is provided about special down payment closing cost assistance programs that may be available to program graduates.

Quincy Community Action Programs also conducts monthly workshops for first-time homebuyers in English.

To register in English, obtain a schedule of future programs or for more information, call Rona Goodman, housing coordinator, at 617-479-8181, ext. 115. To register or obtain more information in Cantonese, call John Chen at 617-479-8181, ext. 129 on Tuesdays only.

In Partnership With Randolph Banking Collaborative Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer's Workshop May 4, 11

Neighborhood Housing Services will hold an accredited and MHA-certified First-Time Homebuyer's Workshop in partnership with Randolph Banking Collaborative Saturdays, May 4 and 11, at the Randolph Senior Center, 16 Fencourt Ave., Randolph, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate, which is required by most lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options, such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants and other special first-time homebuyer financing options.

An approved First-Time Homebuyer Counseling

Agency, NBS is a non-profit organization that assists first-time buyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NBS helps obtain down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rebates for their clients, which are available throughout the entire South Shore area.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. Focus includes how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer and determining the best mortgage program.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

For more information and to register for the workshop, contact Debbie Ederly at 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

The Dirt On Self-Cleaning Windows

(NAPS) — If you find cleaning to be a chore, you may want to try getting your home to help with the housework. Today's homeowners have access to a variety of products, from vacuums that run by themselves to automatic pool cleaners, that can help people make a clean — and fast — sweep of their housekeeping.

For example, people who find window washing to be a pain — as opposed to a pane — can install self-cleaning windows. The windows use daylight to continuously break down, loosen and destroy dirt. When it rains, water sheets off the exterior surface, washing away any undissolved dirt and eliminating any streaks or water spots. The results are clean windows.

The windows that use Pilkington Activ Glass self-clean continuously after they have been activated (even at night and on cloudy days).

Try these tips for reducing cleaning time:

• Cut the Cleaning — Self-

cleaning glass can be used in windows, skylights, doors and sunrooms in homes, apartments and condominiums. It can also be used in commercial and institutional buildings. In addition to time, the glass can save people the cost of cleaning supplies and eliminate the safety risk of climbing a ladder to clean windows.

• Cut the Clutter — The less you have, the less you have to clean. Too many knickknacks or refrigerator magnets, for example, can collect dust and make an otherwise clean area look dirty.

Make a list of clutter objects in your house and try to throw or give half of them away.

• Cut the Confusion — When you have a big room to clean, think of it as a checkerboard. Clean each section of the board, without skipping a space. This can help you from cleaning the same spot twice and help make your progress seem more steady.

For more information on self-cleaning glass, call 1-866-88-ACTIV (1-866-822-2848) or visit www.activglass.com.

Americans More Concerned About Odors Than Germs

(NAPS) — A new survey shows that while 84 percent of Americans say they understand the difference between cleaning and disinfecting their homes, more people feel it is very important to have their home smell good than it is to have it disinfected.

A full 65 percent of those surveyed in a telephone poll rank having a fresh-smelling home as very important, while only 47 percent say having a disinfected home is very important.

"It's alarming how many people underestimate the importance of killing germs commonly found in the home," said Joseph Rubino, director of Global Surface

Care Research & Development at Reckitt Benckiser Inc. "While your home may smell and feel clean, you need to consider how germs like Rhinovirus, the leading cause of the common cold, can linger for hours on surfaces throughout your home."

More than half (58 percent) of Americans surveyed were not aware that the following could be found in their homes right now:

- Streptococcus (Strep), a bacteria that can cause throat infection.
- Rhinovirus, the leading cause of the common cold.
- Salmonella and E. coli, leading causes of food-borne illnesses.
- Campylobacter, bacteria that can cause diarrhea, abdominal pain, fever and vomiting.

The survey also found that one-third (38 percent) of Americans believe that vinegar will kill germs in their homes. Almost one-fifth (21 percent) believe that baking soda will keep their homes disinfected. Unfortunately, according to Rubino, vinegar and baking soda do not disinfect or kill germs.

Actually, when it comes to helping protect you and your family against the spread of germs, the best defense is a good offense. Follow these tips to keep your home clean and fresh-smelling while helping to stop the spread of illness-causing germs.

- Understand the importance of disinfecting when cleaning, and incorporate an easy-to-use disinfectant spray or sanitizing wipe into your routine. While a kitchen or bathroom may look clean and germ-free, it may still be swarming with unseen bacteria and viruses.

- Wash your hands before, during and after handling, cooking and serving food.

- If you have kids, you'll want to pay particular attention to disinfecting the bathroom in order to kill germs such as Rotavirus, the leading cause of infectious diarrhea in children.

- Take advantage of the fresh-smelling scents now found in products that can also clean and disinfect. For example, the Lysol Brand family of products offers a range of appealing fragrances that will fill rooms with fresh smells while disinfecting and cleaning surfaces like sinks, countertops, floors, toilet bowls, walls and tiles.

- Frequently wash bath mats and shower curtains to help prevent the growth and buildup of mold and mildew.

For more information on killing germs and helping to prevent their transmission, call 1-800-99LYSOL.

Healthy Lawns Benefit From Environment

(NU) — An important issue facing us today is how we treat the environment in which we live. What we do today becomes our legacy for the generations who will follow us.

Healthy, well-maintained lawns have both direct and indirect benefits for our environment. The indirect benefits are those you see and feel whenever you're surrounded by well-kept lawns and landscapes. These aesthetic effects, which contribute to an overall feeling of tranquility and relaxation, are increasingly important in a world so often ruled by stress and strain.

But the truly marvelous environmental contributions made by healthy lawns and landscaping can be seen in an examination of their direct benefits — the ways in which green, growing plants interact with the world around them.

Grass plants live by removing carbon dioxide from the air and producing oxygen in return. An average residential lawn of 5,000 square feet puts out enough oxygen for eight people every day. In comparison, it would take two 100-foot trees to produce the same amount of oxygen.

Lawns also are proven pollution fighters. The leaves of grass plants absorb harmful pollutants such as sulfur dioxide. In one year's time, an acre of healthy grass absorbs hundreds of pounds of pollutants, including those blamed for acid rain and the greenhouse effect.

In addition, grass controls erosion by knitting the soil together, trapping runoff water and eliminating many of the problems caused by dust and mud. Plus, it's one of the more efficient water savers you'll find in nature. A healthy lawn absorbs rainfall six times more effectively than a wheat field.

Clouds of wind-blown dust make for uncomfortable breathing, irritated eyes and reduced visibility. But grass is a great air cleanser. Grass slows the wind, allowing dust particles to settle on the leaves and eventually be washed back into the ground. Every year grass traps millions of tons of dust that would otherwise be blowing around.

When the heat is on, grass helps you keep your cool. Studies show that when street or sidewalk temperatures are at 100 degrees Fahrenheit or higher, grass remains at a cool 75 F. That means that the front lawns on a block of eight houses perform the same cooling work as 70 tons of air conditioning — enough to cool off 23 homes.

And, a healthy lawn can be a pretty good insurance policy against unwanted pests. Properly mowed, residential lawns aren't inviting to pests like rodents, snakes, mosquitoes, ticks and chiggers.

If you have lawn care questions call the Scott's Helpline at 1-800-543-TURF or visit www.askashon.com.

Quincy Softball Wins 3

By CHRIS POISSON

If you had a chance to check out the high school standings in Monday's edition of the two Boston papers, you noticed the Quincy High softball team stood atop the Atlantic Coast League and had two players among the league leaders.

It's been a while since the Quincy team has been mentioned among the elite. And head coach Mike Sedar hopes the Presidents remain there for the rest of this season and in the future.

After playing 500 ball through the first six games, the Presidents picked up the pace last week with three straight wins at Pageant Field. They won 3-1 over Stratham and 4-0 at ACL. Wednesday's home game against the host team, the Presidents, ended in a 3-2 victory.

Junior pitcher Dennis Yarnum (14-2) has 13 strikeouts and a 0.44 ERA through the first six games. Sedar said the team's success was due to the pitching staff and the defense. "We hit all week long," Sedar said. "And we don't have all nine on the same page yet. We're getting better every game. We're just playing really good ball right now."

The Presidents hosted Plymouth North (7-1) yesterday and today. Thursday at 3:30 p.m. they travel to Randolph, which was postponed Monday due to rain. Tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 3:30, they face city rival North Quincy.

In its perfect run last week, Quincy's offense finally heated up as the team batted .451 with 31 runs scored. Senior second baseman and quad-captain Michelle Pilalas led the assault, hitting a sizzling .571 to raise her season average to a league-best .640.

"We hit all week long," Sedar said. "And we don't have all nine on the same page yet. We're getting better every game. We're just playing really good ball right now."

The Presidents were also propelled by their pitching. Junior Stacey Andrew won two games to improve to 3-0 with a 1.60 ERA, which ranks third in the league. She also has 35 strikeouts in 20 innings. Sophomore Rachael Sorenson won the other game to even her record at 3-1.

In last Thursday's win over Notre Dame, Quincy rode the right arm of Andrew, who gave up two runs on six hits in the complete-game effort.

Junior first baseman Liz Campbell and sophomore catcher Rose Bell powered the offense to cap off huge weeks in which they batted .556 and .455, respectively. Campbell went 2 for 3 with a pair of doubles and two RBI, and Bell went 2 for 3 with a triple and an RBI.

"Liz Campbell had been thinking too much," Sedar said. "She's probably our best hitter. She missed a home run by a couple of inches when she hit the center field fence. She spanked it."

The Presidents also received another boost from freshman Katie Walsh, who stroked a two-run triple.

In last Wednesday's win over Sandwich, Quincy evened the score at 2 to send the game into extra innings.

In the eighth, Sandwich grabbed a 3-2 lead but Quincy rallied in the bottom half with its underclassmen.

With one out, freshman third baseman Rebekka Sorensen stroked a single and scored the tying run when sophomore Courtney Alongi crushed a triple. Walsh came up to the plate and executed a perfect bunt that scored Alongi for the game-winner.

"Alongi is a big, powerful kid," Sedar said. "She blasted that triple. And Walsh has just been unbelievable. She has done nothing to hurt us. She's playing really well."

"It's the same old, same old," he added. "We kind of retool every year, we don't rebuild. We're getting two or three freshmen every year that can play at the varsity level. We're lucky."

Rachael Sorensen tossed all eight innings, scattering eight hits, walking one and striking out nine. Offensively, Pilalas went 3 for 4 with a stolen base and junior rightfielder Jen Grogan added a pair of hits.

In last Tuesday's rout of Dennis-Yarmouth, in which the game was called after six innings, Andrew picked up the win by allowing just four hits.

The real story, though, was the offensive explosion. Junior shortstop Shannon Paine continued to produce at the plate by going 3 for 5 with a single, double and triple. She batted .364 last week and has a .419 average. Junior center fielder Diane Gilbody also added three hits and Bell went 2 for 4 with a double and triple.

Better Defense Key For Quincy Baseball

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High baseball team has one of the top pitchers and one of the top hitters in the Atlantic Coast League, but its defensive lapses continue to plague them.

In three straight games last week, the Presidents fell at Dennis-Yarmouth, 8-2, last Tuesday and dropped a 6-3 decision to Sandwich last Wednesday before suffering a tough 10-7 loss to Sturgis last Thursday at Adams Field.

"All three games were within our reach," said head coach Mike Drancich. "We were almost good enough to win the games, but we just continued to make mistakes in the field. It certainly hasn't been the pitching or producing runs, it's been the mistakes in the field. If we can start to make some plays, we'll be a different team in the second half of the season."

Quincy (12-6 overall, 0-4 ACL) traveled to Plymouth North yesterday and today (Thursday) hosts Randolph at 3:30 p.m., which was postponed Monday due to rain. Tomorrow (Friday) night at The Presidents Ladies Association participated in a tournament Saturday at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

Member Alice Miller scored a hole-in-one on the fourth hole using a 5-iron. Witnessing the event were members Sue Katchpole, Sandy Kleiner and Carol Mather.

The Presidents Ladies Association was founded in 1981 to promote greater interest in the game of golf, with due attention to all rules governing play of the game, course rules, and to provide social activities for the membership.

The association is currently made up of more than 200 members who share a common interest in furthering the game of golf and at the same time enjoying it among themselves at a competitive and social level.

The next major tournament scheduled for the association will be a mixed tournament May 5.

Here are the results:

Stearns stroked a two-run triple to score Matt Goodrich and Adam Nazzaro. Dan Gould knocked in Paul Gould.

Cain struck out seven to pick up his first win and he also finished 3 for 3 at the plate. Jake Daly, Chris Keogh, Pat Gould and Chris Connelly all chipped in.

For Donovan Brothers, Matt Layden went 3 for 3, while Nick Yotts, Ryan Patterson and Matt Doyle all went 2 for 3. Philip Toomey, Bryon Camardella and Matt Decilio played well.

71 squares off against neighboring North Quincy.

In last Thursday's loss to Sturgis, Quincy held a 6-4 lead after five innings, but came out flat after a 45-minute rain delay as Sturgis scored a pair of runs in the sixth and three in the seventh for a 10-6 lead.

In the bottom of the seventh, junior Francis Orlando walked, stole second and scored on junior Jarne Chiochio's RBI single.

Quincy grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second when junior Anthony Boyle knocked home junior Matt McNeil with a sacrifice fly. Sturgis scored two runs in the third, but Quincy responded with a pair of runs in the bottom half for a 3-2 lead.

Junior Liam Powers ripped an RBI triple that scored Chiochio (single) and later scored when senior Dave Grogan reached on an error. Powers, in his first year on varsity, is fourth in the league in hitting, with a .464 average (13 for 28), one home run and 10 RBI.

In the fourth, junior Craig Keenan walked, junior Shaun

Gibbons singled and Chiochio walked to load the bases with no outs. After junior Ryan Conley lined out to the third baseman and Powers made an error out, Grogan belted a three-run triple for a 6-2 advantage. Sturgis added two runs in the fourth and one in the fifth before the rain delay.

In last Wednesday's loss, junior Jeff Tam and Conley pitched effectively as all six runs Sandwich scored were unearned. Powers went 2 for 3 with a double and a run scored to lead the offense.

In the loss to Dennis-Yarmouth, the game was tied at 2 in the fifth inning before the Presidents unraveled.

Boyle continued to impress on the mound, giving up six hits and striking out six in four innings. The southpaw has a 1-3 record, but ranks second in the league with a 1.09 ERA and 21 strikeouts in 16 innings.

Chiochio (3 for 4) and Grogan (2 for 4) knocked in Quincy's only runs, as the offense loaded the bases three times and failed to score.

Red Raiders Defeat Duxbury, Plymouth South

By CHRIS POISSON

The good and the ugly from the North Quincy High baseball team's game against Duxbury last Friday night.

The good: the Red Raiders' resiliency, erasing a four-run deficit in the bottom of the seventh inning to win the ballgame, 7-6, on a balk.

The bad: their defense, which was about as sharp as butter knife. All six Duxbury runs were unearned, quickly drudging up the defensive horrors against Milton earlier in the year.

On Monday, however, North Quincy rebounded with a well-rounded performance, bating Plymouth South, 12-0, on a cold and rainy afternoon.

Senior John O'Connell mesmerized the Panthers, allowing only four hits and one walk while striking out 10 to post the shutout. And to top his day off, he blasted a solo home run in the seventh inning.

"John has been consistent all year," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "He pitched a heck of a game against B-R (last Wednesday). It was another solid performance. He throws the ball over the plate and moves it in and out."

"And we made the defensive plays," he quickly added. "If we play like that, we're a tough team."

Earlier last week, North Quincy blew a lead against Barnstable last Wednesday in a 7-5 loss. A day earlier, it also lost a lead late in the game but was able to pull out a thrilling 6-5 victory in nine innings.

North Quincy (to-3 overall, 4-1 Old Colony League) hosted Silver Lake yesterday (Wednesday) and tomorrow (Friday) might at it faces city rival Quincy at Adams Field.

In the rout of Plymouth South, senior Wayne Moynihan powered the 14-hit offensive attack, going 4 for 4 with two RBI, four runs scored, two walks and a stolen base.

Senior Mike Feetham (1 for 3, double) had three RBI and senior Dennis Thomson knocked in two runs. Senior Pat Bregoli and senior John Fidalgo had two hits apiece, while senior Dan Duggan stroked a double and junior Gary Dalton singled in his first varsity at bat.

BASEBALL

In the Duxbury game last Friday, North Quincy trailed 6-2 when it staged its miracle comeback. Feetham led off with a triple and senior Mike DeAngelo reached on an infield hit. Bregoli stroked a single to center to score Feetham with the first run.

With runners at first and third, Moynihan reached on another infield hit and DeAngelo scored on the play to make it 6-4. Thomson moved Bregoli to third on a sacrifice fly to center. O'Connell then walked to load the bases with one out and Dalton pinch ran for him. Senior Neal Gavin followed with a shot off the pitcher that rolled to the third base side and Bregoli scored on the play. With the bases still loaded, Fidalgo knocked in Moynihan with a fielder's choice to tie the game at 6. And Dalton crossed home plate with the winning run when the Duxbury pitcher was called for a balk.

In his first varsity start, junior Dom Delgado allowed four unearned runs and five walks in 4 1/3 innings. Gavin picked up the win in relief, giving up two unearned runs over the final 2 2/3 innings.

In the Barnstable game last Wednesday, the Red Raiders overcame a 2-1 deficit in the sixth inning with four runs to seize a 5-2 lead.

After an exhilarating win the day before, North Quincy appeared to be in position for another pulsating victory. "It's a good thing I shaved my head," Taglieri quipped.

But the Red Raiders unraveled in the seventh inning once again, giving up five runs behind some costly miscues. And that was the ballgame.

Although he picked up the loss, senior Steve Pizzi turned in a strong pitching performance, allowing three earned runs in the complete-game effort.

"Pizzi pitched outstanding," Taglieri said. "I told him that was the best game he has pitched in a North Quincy uniform. I felt in the seventh inning it was his game to win or lose. Unfortunately, we came out on the short end."

In last Tuesday's thriller, North Quincy blew a 5-3 lead in the seventh as B-R scored two unearned runs to send the game into overtime.

Fortunately, OT proved to be OK for the Red Raiders. In the bottom of the ninth, Bregoli was hit by a pitch to lead things off and moved to third on a wild pitch after attempting to steal second base.

After B-R intentionally walked Pizzi (2 hit, 3 RBI) and Moynihan to load the bases with no outs, Feetham (two hits) stepped up to the plate and blasted one over the center fielder's head for the game-winner.

O'Connell pitched all nine innings, scattering 12 hits and giving up three runs. The defense bailed him out with a couple of double plays. Fidalgo went 2 for 4 with two RBI and Gavin walked twice and scored twice.

North Quincy Girls' Golf Season Underway

The North Quincy High School girls' golf team recently began its second season.

The Red Raiders lost to Boston Latin Academy and Braintree earlier last week, but they were able to rebound last Friday to win a closely contested match against Brookline on the last hole.

Returning starters include seniors Darcy Fay and Shelley Cheung, juniors Alyson Griffin, Kathleen McCarthy and Emily Haskins and sophomore Jennifer Baszkiewicz.

A strong turnout this year has added freshmen Christina Forde, Marissa Deegan, Julia Berberan, Shelly Donovan, Katie Quinn, Caitlin Wilson and Keri Rogers.

Baszkiewicz and Haskins, the captains, anchor the team and provide excellent leadership on and off the course. In its inaugural season last spring, the inexperienced North Quincy squad fielded a competitive team and won several matches against teams that have been in the league for a longer time.

Head coach Janet Coleclough and assistant coach Jane Cotter believe this year's team is very talented and should provide some exciting moments in upcoming matches against Mt. Alvernia, Fontbonne, Ursuline and Notre Dame.

A CHECK OF THE COOLING SYSTEM

If you have ever been stranded by an overheated engine, you know the value of thoroughly inspecting your vehicle's cooling system to avoid failure. The radiator and cap should be pressure-checked for signs of leakage. Then, if necessary, the antifreeze should be flushed and refilled with a 50/50 antifreeze and water mixture. All hoses and belts should be checked for signs of wear (bulges or cracks) and replaced if they are more than three or four years old. Hose inspection includes the smaller heater hoses and the two large hoses that lead from the engine to the radiator. The thermostat, which regulates the flow of coolant throughout the engine, should also be checked and replaced if necessary.

Engine overheating? It could be something simple or more serious. Bring it to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern equipment and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and re-trained. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E., Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: The water pump is a critical part of the cooling system that should be regularly inspected and replaced as needed.

May Is Mental Health Month

Recognizing The Value Of Mental Health Services

By HARRY SHULMAN

As we recognize May as Mental Health Month, it is evident that there is a greater appreciation for the value of mental health services and less stigma attached to the illness.

The Academy Award-winning movie, "A Beautiful Mind," educated the public about severe mental illness and the hope for recovery by telling the story of John Nash, a Pulitzer Prize-winning mathematician who lives with schizophrenia.

Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun Times writes of this movie: "The movies have a way of pushing mental illness into corners. It is grotesque, sensational, cute, funny, willful, tragic or perverse. Here it is simply a disease, which renders life almost but not quite impossible for Nash and his wife, before he becomes one of the lucky ones to pull out of the downward spiral."

We have come along way since Alfred Hitchcock's movie "Psycho" that helped shaped people's perspective on mental illness in such a negative way. Breaking down the barrier of stigma is essential to assure appropriate access to professional care and help people to return to a productive life.

FOR TEETH... AND GUMS

Calcium is not only good for teeth and bones, but it has other benefits as well. Adults who consume at least three servings of calcium each day have significantly lower rates of periodontal disease, which is a leading cause of tooth loss. An analysis of government data on calcium consumption and periodontal disease in nearly 13,000 subjects shows that men and women with calcium intakes below 500 milligrams were almost twice as likely to have periodontal disease, the loss of attachment of the gums from the teeth. The association between calcium intake and gum disease was particularly evident for people in their 20s and 30s. This finding should lead us all to drink more milk and other calcium-rich products.

This column on the benefits of calcium has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Periodontal disease approaches silently. It may progress painlessly, producing few obvious signs. We believe oral health is key to overall health and well-being. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer complete dental care for the entire family. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. You can trust your dental health to our experience and knowledge. We want to keep you smiling. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Gums that are red, swollen, or bleed easily are in the early stages of gum disease.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA), a leader in the fight against Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), announces May is ALS Awareness Month.

During May, MDA is observing scientific achievements made against ALS to increase the community's awareness of this fatal, progressive neuromuscular disease.

ALS destroys the nerve cells controlling muscles in healthy adults, ultimately causing complete paralysis while leaving mental function intact. Survival is typically two to five years after diagnosis, and no cure exists.

MDA has been vitally active in ALS research and services for more than 50 years, and has invested more than $135 million in its ALS program to date, thanks to donations from the American public.

MDA funds leading ALS researchers worldwide. The Association also offers medical care at some 230 hospital-affiliated MDA clinics, including Mass General Hospital, Brigham & Women's Hospital and The Lahey Clinic. MDA also assists people with ALS through help with purchase and repair of wheelchairs, support groups, expert led seminars, an ALS Web site (www.alsmdusa.org) and ALS-specific chat rooms (www.mdusa.org/chat).

The Association's programs are funded almost entirely by individual private contributors.

For more information, call the local MDA Healthcare Services Coordinator at 800-730-0318 or MDA national headquarters at (800) 572-1717.

Jimmy Kennedy Race For ALS June 8

The fifth annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS will be held Saturday, June 8, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The five-mile run is also known as the New Balance "Squirrel Run" in honor of Jimmy's childhood nickname.

Jimmy Kennedy's battle with Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, ended April 6, 1997 when he was 31 years old.

All proceeds from the event go directly to ALS research. Last year's race raised approximately $50,000 for the Cecil B. Day Center for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, also this year's beneficiary.

"Our goal this year is to raise at least another $50,000 to benefit ALS research," said Richard Kennedy, Jimmy's brother. "This race continues to be instrumental in building local awareness and funding for this devastating disease that strikes thousands of individuals every year."

have organized the race together since 1998.

The road race will start at 10 a.m. and will include a 2.5-mile Fitness Walk beginning at 9 a.m. The event also includes special children's events and awards in 15 age divisions. Race day registration will begin at 8 a.m. The entry fee is $12 before May 31 and $15 after and on race day.

For donation information or to pre-register, contact The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, 5 Norman Todd Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025; call 781-383-6008.

Cancer Recovery, Exercise Topic Tonight

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It seems a great many people these days complain that their work is boring. The tendency is to blame the job for lack of challenge. What usually makes work drudgery, however, is a person's attitude -- not the work itself.

No task need be boring, for the simple reason that every job contains within it a hidden challenge. What is this challenge? That challenge is this: How can it be done better?

Could anything be more boring than sweeping floors? ... Many years ago Murray Spangler, a department store janitor in Canton, Ohio, didn't think so, even though the dust made him cough and wheeze. Many men would have given up and quit. Instead, Spangler set out to find a better way to clean floors. ... "Why not eliminate the broom," he wondered, "... maybe something that would suck up dust ...?"

Spangler's question led to a crude but working vacuum cleaner, which he induced an old friend in the leather business to finance. ... You guessed it! ... The friend's name was H.W. Hoover. ...

Salome's Stars
 ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.
 TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.
 GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.
 CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.
 LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.
 VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.
 SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.
 SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.
 CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.
 AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.
 PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.
 BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

Joseph Connolly Candidate For Norfolk County Treasurer

Joseph A. Connolly of Weymouth announces his candidacy for Norfolk County Treasurer.

Tim Cahill of Quincy, the current county treasurer, is vacating the office to run for state treasurer.

"The residents of Norfolk County deserve to have a treasurer that will proactively manage and safeguard the county's finances and its pension fund, particularly in light of the tight economic times we are facing," Connolly said.

"I firmly believe that government at all levels should be accountable and accessible to the people it serves. My philosophy is to think long-term and see the big picture when addressing issues that will impact the fiscal health of Norfolk County."

Connolly noted he has worked for large and small businesses, state government and as a small business owner, and said he believes his diverse work experience and educational background provide him with a unique perspective on how to get things done.

JOE CONNOLLY

Connolly previously served as a legislative aide in the late Congressman Joseph Moakley's office, owned his own small business for several years and currently serves on the Weymouth Town Council as a councilor-at-large.

"I think my life experiences will serve me well as Norfolk County Treasurer," Connolly said. "I know first hand what it means to have to make a weekly payroll. I am acutely aware of the fiscal constraints and struggles of communities throughout Massachusetts, and, perhaps most importantly, I understand the importance of providing honest, accessible service to the client — the taxpayer of Norfolk County."

A resident of Weymouth for 11 years, Connolly is active in community service. He is a member of the Weymouth Lions Club, the Weymouth Elks, the Pond Plain Improvement Association and the High School Building Committee. As a councilor-at-large, he serves as chairman of the Weymouth Town Council's Education Committee and the Committee on Public Works.

Connolly received a master's degree in public affairs from the McCormack Institute at the University of Massachusetts at Boston and a bachelor's degree from Boston State College.

Connolly and his wife, Elaine, have two daughters, Taylor and Bridget.

100-Year Storm Designed Wollaston Beach Sea Wall Reconstruction Underway

Reconstruction of the sea wall at Wollaston Beach with a 100-year storm design and catch basin rehabilitation are underway.

The sea wall project runs between Rice Road and Black's Creek.

State Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers jointly announced the project's start.

"The MDC has begun preparation for the project and is expected to begin work by early May," Morrissey said.

The MDC awarded the sea wall project to the Cashman Construction Company, the low bidder at $2.8 million.

"The sea wall has continued to deteriorate after years of storm damage and these repairs are much needed,"

Tobin said. "The contract period is for 24 months but the work could potentially be completed by this winter. The rehabilitated sea wall will be at 100-year storm design standard and should be able to withstand severe coastal storms."

"Bringing the sea wall to 100-year design standards is very important to protect residents on Quincy Shore Drive from severe storms that occasionally batter the coastline," Ayers said. "Also, as part of the project, the sidewalks along Wollaston Beach from Rice Road to Fenno Street will be repaired."

Morrissey noted the MDC is currently undertaking two catch basin rehabilitation projects. The MDC is working on repairing 17 catch basins along Wollaston Beach with more to be completed in the coming months. The MDC will begin the second rehabilitation project in May and will also be working on sidewalk repair according to MDC Commissioner Balfour.

"Wollaston Beach is a valuable resource to the community and we will continue to work with the MDC and local officials on getting these projects completed," Morrissey said.

Morrissey and the legislative delegation pledged to continue to work closely with Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro on the project.

"We will work together reducing the disruption these projects may have on neighbors living along Quincy Shore Drive," Morrissey said.

building and willful and malicious destruction of property valued at more than $250.

Both pleaded innocent at their arraignment. The trial date has not been set.

The City Hall break-in was at the office of former Personnel Director Kevin Madden, where a door was removed and damaged and replaced by another.

Maher retired from his $57,414 job in January after being implicated in the city hall break-in.

Special Prosecutor George R. Jabour indicated the break-in was motivated by letters critical of Maher written by Walter White, his boss and head of the city inspectional department, and thought to be in the personnel office file.

The letters reportedly were not in the office file the day of the break-in, however, having been sent to the Attorney General's office.

117 Teacher Lay-Offs Seen Police, Fire Attrition Downsizing

Phelan $195.2M Budget Preview Of 'A Not Easy Year'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor William Phelan Monday night presented his proposed Fiscal Year 2003 budget of $195,256,540 to the members of the City Council.

The proposed budget reduces funding for education and police by roughly five percent from last year's budget and reduces funding for the city's fire department by around one percent.

The measures, Phelan said, will translate into a downsizing, through attrition, of one captain, two sergeants, and between 10 and 12 patrolmen from the Quincy Police Department and roughly a dozen firefighters from the Quincy Fire Department.

The reduction in the budget of the School Department is expected to result in the layoff of about 117 teachers.

"I would suggest that it's not going to be an easy year in the city," said Phelan, who said the reductions were necessary to address the city's financial crisis and fixed cost increases which were $14.4 million more than the previous fiscal year.

Phelan's proposed budget contains a variety of unique features, including: a $1.8 million purchase order to legally pay bills from the previous fiscal year; a bonding of the city's debt regarding what is now Quincy Medical Center; and a multi-year agreement with Harvard Pilgrim Healthcare to pay off the city's health benefit debt. All three measures require approval by the City Council.

Outside Auditor Reports

$700,000 In Unpaid Past Bills At DPW

By CRAIG SALTERS

An outside auditing firm hired by the city has informed Mayor William Phelan that roughly $700,000 in past unpaid bills with no identified sources of funding has been discovered in the city's Department of Public Works (DPW).

Said bills were for work performed during the tenure of former DPW Commissioner David Colton, who served under then Mayor James Sheets. Colton, currently the director of Public Works for the town of Milton, said Tuesday he would no longer comment on allegations made by Phelan but that he was "very proud" of his accomplishments while working for the city.

Some of the unpaid bills, said John Sullivan, a principal with the Andover-based firm of Melanson and Heath, are for work done as far back as 1999. More importantly, he said, none of the bills has an identified funding source. "We're finding that various vendors are sending bills that are going unpaid because there's never been any funding identified," said Sullivan. "If the city chooses to pay these bills, it will have to be provided."

The $700,000, Sullivan said, is "over and above" the recently discovered $4.6 million in Fiscal Year 2001 bills improperly paid using Fiscal Year 2002 funds.

"No department head or city official can obligate a city without an appropriation but that's what was being done," Sullivan said.

Specifically, Sullivan said, bills included: roughly $100,000 owed the engineering firm of Weston and Sampson for engineering work on a city soccer field; an estimated $200,000 in unpaid bills for work done along the Washington St. corridor; and an unpaid balance of $242,000 owed to Mass Electric for work performed in the area of Norfolk Downs.

Complicating matters somewhat, Sullivan said a purchase order of $199,000 did exist for work on Washington St. but that those funds were used to process a

Director: ACLU Also A Law Enforcement Agency

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) may not appear to be a law enforcement agency, but it is, said John Roberts, executive director of the ACLU of Massachusetts, during his Law Day address at Quincy District Court.

Roberts began his remarks by acknowledging that his selection as keynote speaker, at first glance, seemed an odd choice given the ACLU's often adversarial role on issues concerning police officers, prosecutors, district attorneys, and others involved in law enforcement.

But it made more sense, he said, if one defined the ACLU "as a law enforcement agency also," one concerned with the primacy of the United States Constitution, the limits of government, and the rights of the individual.

"We always talk about it that way," said Roberts, who will retire in September after 32 years with the 12,000-member ACLU of Massachusetts.

The balance between the government's duty to protect citizens and an individual's right to basic freedoms, Roberts said, is being constantly defined and re-defined "on a case by case basis" by the nation's legal process.

"We're all in that struggle together," Roberts reminded his audience. "If each of us does our job well, then the balance will be struck and we will be a society that's both safe and free."

But the horror of Sept. 11, warned Roberts, has put the nation in crisis and threatens to tilt the balance too far towards protection, as has happened in times past.

"It's in times of crisis that we need to be most vigilant (of our rights)," said Roberts, pointing to Abraham

Sets Oct. 1 Deadline Board Issues Ultimatum To Sprague On Odors

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Sprague Energy Corp. on Southern Artery was given an ultimatum by the License Board at Tuesday's meeting: that they either have a solution to stop obnoxious odors by Oct. 1 or lose their license to distribute No. 6 fuel oil.

After a plea from Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond, who said he was "frustrated" because he said it's difficult to represent people who have the "same complaints" about the "same odors" and that a system should be in place because there have been "no solutions," a motion was made by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

That motion ordered Sprague Energy, who the board said is in violation of state law, to resolve the problem of odors by Oct. 1. It was voted unanimously by the board.

Raymond said that Sprague had been given a citation from the Health Department, and that the operation of the company has become a "nuisance."

Two neighbors who live on River Street, Matt Ward and Bob Jackson both complained of strong odors. Ward said the odors are strong in his back yard especially on damp days. Noting that he pays a large amount of rent to live in his home, he said he has even had to call the police on certain

Jackson said he thinks the odors have worsened in the past five years because the oil is now transported in barges rather than ships as in previous years. He said he has a heart condition and that doctors have told him that the odors which are making him nauseous are worsening his condition. Jackson said when he complained about the odors, he was told to leave his home. He said "how can I leave my home when it happens three or four times a week?"

Raymond said there seems to be "no temporary solution that are working and no long range solutions."

During the lengthy meeting in which Steve Cipullo, internal manager of Sprague and Jeff Chandler, environmental manager addressed the board on the issue of odor.

Chandler told the board that No. 6 fuel oil is used in large institutions, hospitals, schools and that the oil arrives in heated compartments, which have to be kept at warm temperatures causing vapors as a cause for the odor.

Drew Sheely, sitting in for health commissioner Jane Gallahue, suggested that a meeting be held as soon as possible between the Department of Environmental Protection, the Health Department, the City of Quincy and Cynthia DeCristofaro, city sanitarian, to discuss the issue and then have a neighborhood meeting.

Sheely said since the neighbors in the area aren't "going any place and Sprague isn't going any place," there should be a solution that would satisfy all concerned.

Chandler said that a masking agent for the odors was introduced in a letter to the city in February, but was opposed. He said however, that the state regulations did not, causing him he said to be "stuck in the process". However, Chairman Joseph Shea said that the meeting between the departments, would be able to address those issues.

The problem of combustion which would entail the construction of a large receptacle has been used in another city, but the noise from the machines have also caused problems Chandler said.

Sheely said maybe the neighbors could live with the noise instead of the odors.

• On May 8, 1541, south of present-day Memphis, Tenn., Spanish conquistador Hernando de Soto reaches the Mississippi River, one of the first European explorers to ever do so. In 1542, he died of a fever. So that the Indians would not learn of his death, and thus disprove de Soto's claims of divinity, his men buried his body in the Mississippi River.

• On the afternoon of May 7, 1915, the British ocean liner Lusitania is torpedoed without warning by a German submarine off the south coast of Ireland; 1,198 people were drowned, including 128 Americans.

• On May 12, 1938, "The Adventures of Robin Hood," starring Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone and Olivia De Havilland, premieres at New York's Radio City Music Hall. The movie cost $2 million, an extraordinarily large budget at the time.

• On May 6, 1954, in Oxford, England, 25-year-old medical student Roger Bannister cracks track and field's most notorious barrier: the 4-minute mile. His world record in the mile did not stand long, and the record continued to be lowered.

• On May 9, 1978, the body of former Italian prime minister Aldo Moro is found, riddled by bullets. He had been kidnapped and killed by Red Brigade terrorists after the Italian government refused to negotiate with the extreme left-wing group.

• On May 11, 1987, Klaus Barbie, the former Nazi Gestapo chief of German-occupied Lyon, France, goes on trial in Lyon more than four decades after the end of World War II. He was charged with 177 crimes against humanity. He died of cancer in a prison hospital in 1991.

• On May 10, 1994, in South Africa, former political prisoner Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela is sworn in as the first black president of South Africa. In his inaugural address, Mandela declared that "the time for the healing of the wounds has come."

McCullough: An Honorary Adams?

David McCullough who recently won the Pulitzer Prize for his best selling biography, John Adams, may have another honor coming his way.

This one would be pretty special, too: being made an honorary member of the Adams Family.

Members of the family who are delighted with McCullough's biography of the second president and have taken to him as a person, reportedly are considering making him an honorary member.

If they do, the official announcement would probably be made at a family reunion at the Adams Mansion on Adams St. with McCullough the guest of honor.

The mansion was home to four generations of the illustrious Adams Family and was the summer White House to John Adams and his son, sixth President John Quincy Adams.

It is affectionately known to family members as the Old House.

McCullough, who lives in West Tisbury on Martha's Vineyard, spent considerable time here researching material for the biography, a more than six year labor of love.

The Stone Library at the historic Mansion is the site of the oldest Presidential library in the nation. It has approximately 13,000 volumes that belonged to the two presidents and other family members -- a research treasure for an author-historian.

McCullough started out to write a book about John Adams and Thomas Jefferson and their friendly-thorny relationship.

But during the research he found Adams more fascinating and the book turned out to be the prize-winning Adams biography. Jefferson is in there, but Adams has top billing.

Jefferson may have written the Declaration of Independence, McCullough noted speaking at a fundraiser for the Thomas Crane Public Library new addition in June, 2000 but it was Adams "who drove it through Congress."

It was Adams, he also said, who nominated George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army.

"A man of extraordinary integrity and a life-long passionate patriot," he said of Adams. "He was a man of the people."

And, unlike Jefferson, Adams never owned a slave. McCullough, speaking in a folksy, captivating manner charmed his audience that night.

And especially endeared himself to the women when he added: "And most importantly, John Adams was the husband of Abigail Adams."

The Adams Family must have liked those observations.

And, a more recent one.

McCullough won his first Pulitzer Prize for his biography Truman in 1992.

When informed of his second Pulitzer last month, he RICHARD NIXON's name appeared on the national ballot five times -- more than any other 20th century president. He was on the national ballot three times as a presidential candidate and twice as a vice-presidential candidate.

Have A Quote...
Always government can be no better than the public opinion which sustains it.
- President Franklin Delano Roosevelt

McCULLOUGH

indicated that in researching and writing the two biographies he found himself "getting closer" to subject John Adams than to subject Harry Truman.

Being made an honorary member of the Adams Family would be a most deserving recognition.

He'd get our vote.

TOM KOCH has turned to an old friend and old political pro to head up his bid for Norfolk County treasurer.

County Commissioner and former city clerk John Gillis will serve as his campaign manager.

Gillis has been active on the political scene for more than a half-century. Back to the days when there were so few Democrats in Quincy, they used to kid they could hold a rally in a telephone booth.

Gillis in his own campaigns in recent years has established key connections throughout the county.

He makes a big plus for Koch's campaign.

KOCH

WHEN MAYOR William Phelan named Laurie

Allen as his executive secretary it was thought she was the first woman to hold that post. She's actually the second.

That "first" honor goes to Louise Brabazon, who was executive secretary to Mayor James McIntyre back in the mid-1960s. She later served in the city council office.

Louise attended the recent City Council Reunion at the Neighborhood Club as guest of former Ward 3 and City Council President John Lydon.

SENATOR JOHN KERRY, who was been moving around looking like a potential Presidential candidate, will be the speaker at the annual meeting of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Monday, May 13, 11:44 a.m. at Lantana, Randolph. Tickets are $30 for Chamber members, $40 non-members.

A CAMPAIGN FUNDRAISER for Patrick McDermott, candidate for Norfolk County Register of Probate, is set for Thursday, May 16.

Congressman Stephen Lynch and Register of Deeds Paul Harold are co-hosting the 6 to 8 p.m. event at the Wollaston Country Club, Rte. 28, Milton. Suggested donation $49 per person.

ANN McLAUGHLIN, director of the Thomas Crane Public Library, now has a permanent reminder of that serious accident at her Falmouth home last January.

She tripped over her dog and fell down the stairs suffering compound fractures of the left wrist and other injuries.

She recently returned to the hospital to have a metal plate implanted so the wrist would function properly.

It's working fine but now she has a new concern. "I don't know what will happen at an airport or court or other high security places," she says. "The implant will probably set off metal detectors."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920'S postcard view of the statue of Scottish poet Robert Burns at its original location at the junction of School and Franklin Streets in South Quincy. Dedicated in November, 1925 it was a gift to the city from the Burns Memorial Association. Clan MacGregor hosted the dedication ceremony followed by an elaborate banquet and concert at their nearby hall. The featured speaker was Colonel Walter Scott, the famous Scottish-American philanthropist and humanitarian for whom the Clan's hall was named. The statue was designed by Quincy sculptor Gerald Horrigan and was carved from Westerly granite by his father, John, a Quincy statue cutter. The base consists of three pieces of Quincy granite from the Granite Railway Quarry. In 1971 fears of Red Line bridge construction on School Street resulted in the statue being moved to its present location at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Granite Street.

'Adams Coliseum' Proposed For City

By PAUL HAROLD

City Councillor Charles Shea this week won the support of both the city council and the park board for the construction of a city coliseum.

Shea said the facility would be a combined sports and convention center that would pay its own way through fees and rentals.

He also proposed that the facility include a museum highlighting the contribution of the Adams Family to our nation's history. He added it would appropriately be called the "Adams Coliseum."

DELLA CHIESA VETOES CHANGE IN ZONING BOARD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa vetoed a proposed ordinance change that would require the mayor's appointments to the Zoning Board of Appeals be confirmed by the city council.

The mayor called such a change the beginning of the breakdown of good government in Quincy. He said the confirmation by the council was an encroachment of the power of the executive and was in conflict with the Plan A charter.

POSTMASTER PLEDGES INVESTIGATION OF QUINCY DELIVERIES

Boston Postmaster Ephraim Martin promised Mayor Della Chiesa that he would investigate complaints of delivery delays in the city following a test mailing by the mayor's executive secretary Edward Lewis.

To document claims of slow deliveries Lewis had mailed a letter from the post box in front of city hall, to the mayor's office on the second floor. The delivery took 36 hours.

One of the issues to be examined was the policy of sending all Quincy mail, except those mailed at a Quincy post office, to the South Postal Annex for processing.

The Creche: A Vital Part Of Christmas

Concerning the "Creche Issue" (Quincy Sun, 4/4/02), please permit a comment from a former resident of the solid city of Quincy.

It's distressing to think that a beautiful display marking the birth of the Christ Child would be insulting to anyone, especially in a city where, judging from the number of Christian churches, there must be a predominance of residents who are Christians. And the display is all the more meaningful because it was brought about as a memorial tribute to Fr. Cornelius Heery, the well loved former pastor of Sacred Heart Church.

We have to keep in mind that without the creche there would be no Christmas. And, in this secularized world, we have to keep asking "Whose birthday is it anyway?" The creche has to remain a vital part of the joyful Christmas celebration.

Teacher Layoffs A Short-Sighted Solution

It is ironic that just before teacher appreciation week the city of Quincy announced the projected laying off of 119 teachers. This bitter turn of events follows the recent publication of statistics revealing that the city has trouble with new teacher retention! Could it be that our young educators can envision their heads on the chopping block from the very beginning?

Why should new teacher blood be spilled to make up for the greed and mismanagement of political fat cats at both the state and local levels?

Mayor Phelan says the largest cuts are being made in the school budget because it represents half of the city's operating costs. Someone should tell his bean counters that the schools represent all of the city's hope for the future.

Paying "contract wage hikes" and cut throat insurance premiums while dumping teachers is a blasphemy that only proves that Quincy is living up to its reputation for having a weak school system.

There is a shortage of textbooks in the Quincy Public Schools and now it appears as if there will be a shortage of teachers. This is a deadly combination signaling a sick system from which those with means will flee and those without means will throw up their hands in despair.

The City Council and the School Committee must forcefully object to teacher dismissals or reap the distrust and disrespect of the public.

Remembering Our Mothers

Sunday, May 12 is the day to honor all mothers, both living and deceased. It is the day, set aside out of the year, to bring gifts, flowers, and to remember our mothers in special and personal ways.

Sunday, May 12 is also the first day of National Nursing Home Week. Residents in nursing homes across the nation will be participating in festivities and celebrations from May 12 through May 18. During this time, staff of nursing facilities will also be recognized for the special work that they do, and the care that they provide to those who have been entrusted to them.

Honoring those in nursing homes, just as paying tribute to our mothers, does not have to be limited to one day or one special week . . . it should be done throughout the year. A gentle touch of the hand, a kind spoken word, or a smile to let someone know they are loved have no time frame and make the day in someone's life more meaningful.

Releases First CD Of Classical Music For Patrick Coughlin A Lifelong Passion For The Piano

By CRAIG SALTERS

At the age of six, Quincy's Patrick Coughlin was caught making paper airplanes out of his concert program during a Christmas musical performance held at Boston's Wang Center.

Typical behavior for children, perhaps, but not so typical when one considers Coughlin's name was on that very same aerodynamically enhanced program, listed as a guest piano soloist of the Jazz Pops Ensemble.

Of course, by that age Coughlin had already been playing the piano for almost three years, beginning at age three and winning a Beethoven competition at the age of five.

"We had an old piano and I used to play," recalls his mother, Marta Coughlin. "and by two he was sitting at it, wanting to play too."

At the age of three and a half, she said, Patrick asked for lessons and began study under Dr. Clara Carmichael of Quincy, embarking on a path that would see two to three hours of practice nightly as well as study at the New England Conservatory of Music and private lessons.

Now, at age 18, the prodigy has become a prodigious talent, releasing his first CD of classical music featuring the works of Bach, Debussy, and Rachmaninov, to name a few.

A copy of the CD, which was recorded at the Boston University School for the Arts Recording Studio, was recently presented to the now retired Dr. Carmichael at her home in Marina Bay.

"She was thrilled," said Paul Coughlin, Patrick's father, who added that Patrick and his younger brother Christopher were almost as proud of the CD's graphic design, which they did together, as they were of the music recorded on it.

Mastering and editing of the CD was done by another talented Quincy resident, Mark Dailey of Sagamore St.

At 18, Coughlin, a graduate of North Quincy High School, is already a junior on full scholarship at the University of Massachusetts at Boston thanks to a dual-enrollment program with NQHS. He majors in both English and classical literature and intends to pursue an advanced degree in computer animation upon his graduation from college.

Coughlin's musical credits include performing at the Wang Center's ArtSmart at the age of six and an appearance on Channel 5's Good Day Show at the age of seven.

Locally, Coughlin, who attended Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School and Central Middle School, entertained "Winterfest" audiences at the Snug Harbor School at the age of four and performed works of Mozart and Bach with his brother at the inaugural First Night Quincy. He still performs in Quincy as part of his involvement with the PATRICK COUGHLIN, a graduate of North Quincy High School and current student at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, is a classical pianist who has recorded a CD featuring the works of Bach, Debussy, and other musical greats. Coughlin, still only 18 years old, has been playing the piano since the age of three.

HOW DO YOU get to the Wang Center? Practice, goes the old joke, but it didn't take long for Quincy's Patrick Coughlin, shown here performing at the Wang Center at the age of four, to achieve that goal. At age two, Coughlin was trying to sit next to his mother Marta as she played the piano in their home. By age three, he was asking for lessons. "He's been playing ever since," said his father Paul.

Fort Square Presbyterian Church.

"I'm extremely amazed and proud," said his mother, "not just of what he's accomplished but for the type of person he is."

Brother Chris is also a classical pianist, having recently performed Beethoven's Concert No. 3 at a concert at Boston University. He has been accepted at Berklee College where he will study film scoring.

The Coughlin family lives on Brook Rd.

As proud as he is of his two sons and as much as he credits his wife for her constant encouragement of the boys' musical abilities, Paul Coughlin offers no explanation as to why Patrick and Chris are so gifted in that area.

"I'm not musically inclined myself," he said.

Coughlin's CD is available at www.cdbaby.com and also at the gift shop of the Wang Center.

Dom's Stuffed Peppers

One day as I was wondering what to cook for dinner, our son Dom called me and said he had made some stuffed peppers for part of our dinner. It seems he had some left over meatballs and being the creative cook he is, decided to make the stuffing for the peppers with the leftovers and some rice.

They were so delicious that I immediately called him to get the recipe to share with you. Of course if you don't have left-over meatballs, ground beef may be used with a little added tomato sauce.

Dom's Stuffed Peppers
6 small meatballs
1 cup rice
1 small onion chopped glove of garlic (chopped) olive oil for sautéing fresh parsley
a smidgen of balsamic vinegar

3 peppers cut in halves grated cheese for topping shredded cheese for topping about 1 cup of tomato sauce (there will be some left on the meatballs, but if using ground beef, add a bit of sauce to it also.)

First boil the rice according to directions. In a frying pan, heat the oil, onion, garlic and parsley. Add the vinegar. After the rice is cooked and drained, add it to the onion garlic mixture. Blend a bit of the tomato sauce in the mixture.

After the peppers are cut in half, layer the inside with the crushed meatballs, then the rice mixture and then shredded and grated cheese and a bit of sauce for the topping.

Bake in a 350 degree oven uncovered for about 25-30 minutes. We ended up serving the peppers with baked sweet potatoes and a tomato salad. It always tastes better when someone else cooks it, doesn't it?

Council Urges Mayor To Install Traffic Lights At Captain's Cove Condos

The City Council Monday night unanimously adopted a resolve requesting Mayor William Phelan to "proceed forthwith" with a project to install traffic signals at Southern Artery at the entrance to the Captain's Cove Condominiums.

The project, which was scheduled to begin in April, was recently postponed by Phelan, who said the city needed to re-assess the project both in terms of available funding and its priority among other city projects.

Addressing the issue Monday night as part of a larger presentation on the Fiscal Year 2003 budget, Phelan noted the concerns of residents but took issue with the "find the money" attitude of the resolve given the city's financial crisis.

"I suggested merely that we make sure that the funding is there for the bills that we've already incurred before taking on more bills," said Phelan, noting existing unpaid bills as well as the city's recent discovery of $4.6 million in Fiscal Year 2001 bills paid with Fiscal Year 2002 budget money.

Several residents of the 300-unit condominium complex addressed councilors at the Monday night meeting, calling the project a long overdue matter of public safety. They noted the illegal but not uncommon left turns at the Cove Way entrance and the relatively high speeds of Southern Artery traffic.

"You risk your life every time you cross that street," said condo resident James Doyle, who said many did so anyway while trying to reach a nearby bus stop.

William Connors, president of the condo association's Board of Trustees, said residents had been advocating for a traffic light at the site for more than a decade. "We ask that you let this project proceed solely on its own merits," he said.

Connors' comments were echoed by fellow condo resident Arlene Lewis, who said she didn't care who received political credit for the lights, so long as the lights were installed.

"This project has been studied to death," said the resolve's author. Council President Daniel Raymond, who pointed to documents from former DPW Commissioner David Colton and Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon that a contract to install the lights had been awarded as well as a letter from Auditor Michael McFarland that the city had earmarked funds for the project.

Phelan responded that the city's financial crisis necessitated "an honest and realistic look at what the city can afford" and said some of the questions raised at the meeting "should have been asked of the previous administration."

"Had they been asked," Phelan said, "we wouldn't be talking about laying off teachers and downsizing other departments."

Phelan and Raymond traded barbs several times during the discussion. At one point, Raymond called into question Phelan's leadership on the issue, prompting Phelan's charge that Raymond was guilty of "political grandstanding."

Quincy Temple Corps Helping Those In Need Since 1895

Mayor's Proclamation Honors Salvation Army's 107th Year Here

Mayor William Phelan has proclaimed May 13-19 as Salvation Army Week in Quincy in honor of the Quincy Temple Corps helping those in need here for the past 107 years.

The Quincy Corps, now located at 6 Baxter St., off Elm Street, was established in May, 1895, just 30 years after the Salvation Army itself was founded.

And, like the Salvation Army the world over, has built a reputation for always being there to help those in need.

Major Doug Jones, who, with his wife, Major Linda Jones, are co-commanders of the Quincy Temple Corps, estimates more than 13,500 people were assisted here last year.

"While the future may look bright for many Quincy residents, there are those who struggle due to rising rents and utilities costs," Jones said.

"The problems people we assist with social services face include underemployment, loss or lack of sufficient benefits and short-term crisis intervention needs.

Commission On Disability To Meet May 13 At Crane

The Quincy Commission on Disability will meet Monday, May 13 at 6:15 p.m. in the conference room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The public is invited. For more information, contact Jonathan Yip at (617) 376-

QHS Parent Advisory Council Meeting Tonight

The Quincy High School Parent Advisory Council will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7:15 p.m. in the QHS Pride Room.

"The Salvation Army stands ready to do what we can to assist those in need here as we have for 107 years."

The Quincy Corps provides emergency food and utility assistance, clothing and other crisis services.

Other services include a pre-school, an adult day health program for seniors and the handicapped, and a full gym-related community center.

Character building activities include children's programs, athletics, music instruction and spiritual guidance as requested.

The Quincy Temple Corps began operations in 1895 in a building on Canal Street known as "the Old Hook and Ladder House Hall."

In 1899, the Corps moved to 5 Franklin St., and then to 150 Granite St. in 1906.

A few years later, a site was purchased at Baxter and Elm Streets to construct a new building. Because of a lack of resources, plans were put on hold until 1968 when Captain James Watson and a group of civic-minded citizens headed by John Blake got the project underway.

Edgar Wood volunteered his firm as architects. Groundbreaking was held in September, 1969, under the administration of Major Walter Douglas. The new home and community center was dedicated June 6, 1971.

May 13-19 is also National Salvation Army Week.

Last year in the country, more than 200,000 adults reclaimed lives lost to substance abuse through the efforts of the Salvation Army. More than 185,000 children and adults were provided with healthy camping experiences.

And, more than four million shut-ins annually receive visits from Salvation Army volunteers.

The Salvation Army has been committed to serving the disadvantaged and those in need in the Quincy area for these 107 years and pledges to continue to do so.

To learn more about the programs or to find out how you can help them to continue, contact Majors Doug or Linda Jones at the Quincy Corps location or by calling 617-472-2345.

A PROCLAMATION DESIGNATING May 13-19 as Salvation Army Week in Quincy is issued and signed by Mayor William Phelan as Majors Doug and Linda Jones, commanding officers of the Salvation Army Quincy Temple Corps, look on. Salvation Army week is also being observed nationally. (Marilyn Manning Photo)

Quincy Career Center A Good Resource In A Troubled Economy

Quincy and surrounding communities are not immune to the effects of the nation's current recession as more and more clients are seeking the "collaborative one-stop" services offered by the Quincy Career Center, 152 Parkwayway.

"Yes, we have been busier," said Mamie O'Connor, director of the Quincy Career Center, which represents a partnership between South Coastal Career Development and the Department of Employment and Training (DET), a state agency.

"The biggest difference," O'Connor said, "is that it's taking people a little longer to find a new job." She also added that job seekers may be settling for less than "the ideal job," which was not the case during the recent boom years.

The Quincy Career Center offers a wide range of services to job seekers and employers alike, O'Connor said, and all free of charge.

Job seekers have access to such services as career counseling, resume workshops, information on occupational training, job databases, unemployment claims, and specialized employment services for veterans.

Employers can make use of such services as on-site recruiting, job fairs, and employer account representatives who keep tabs on the employment needs of particular businesses.

Currently, O'Connor said, Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse is using the Quincy Career Center to recruit personnel for its new store in Weymouth and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce has scheduled a job fair at the center for May 21.

In addition, the center is now open until 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays to accommodate those job seekers who have "9 to 5" jobs and may be unable to access the center during its regular hours of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"We have great services here and those services are free," O'Connor said. "Come on in."

Literary Journal 'Indigo' Reflects Arts Rebirth At Quincy College

Quincy College recently unveiled the premier edition of Indigo, the college's first arts and literary journal.

The publication is named for the often-elusive color in the spectrum of light, a metaphor for the works featured in the journal.

The idea for Indigo was the result of a movement to recognize the growing humanities department at Quincy College. Last spring, President Sean Barry consulted with Student Life Dean Susan Bossa and discussed the thought of a literary journal.

According to Barry, it was a natural extension of a trend at the college: enrollment in English classes was growing by 15 percent; arts courses alone quadrupled in enrollment; the college acquired new gallery space; studio space was dedicated at Temple Hall; and a state-of-the-art dark room was installed.

There was a rebirth of arts at Quincy College, Barry said, and the time was right to showcase student talent and foster campus creativity.

According to Tom DeSantes, executive director of Marketing and Recruitment, whose department produced the publication, a call was posted throughout the campus last fall seeking poetry, short stories, essays, photography, cartoons, painting, and drawing from all members of the college community. A journal committee gathered over 100 submissions to present to section editors representing all corners of faculty and administration. The committee met several times in the fall semester to discuss the works and select the entries that would become the collective work of Indigo.

The final pieces, anonymously selected, represent a wide range of people at Quincy College. Students -- half full-time and half part-time -- were from Quincy, Weymouth, Duxbury, and Boston as well as international students from Korea, Nigeria, and Nepal. Works from two faculty members were also chosen to appear in Indigo.

Linking the visual concept with the literary component of Indigo, Scott Conlin, designer of the 50-page, 10 by 10 indigo-colored book, incorporated color chapters in which he grouped relevant pieces. Periwinkle represented spring with subjects of birth and renewal; marigold evoked summer with stories of life and vitality; sienna signified fall with items of comfort and reflection; and ivory represented winter with works of despair and death.

Said Conlin: "All works, both visual and literary, were carefully positioned in the journal to take the reader on a journey through the human condition."

Quincy College English Professor Barbara Welch, a journal committee member, expressed her enthusiasm for the project. "There is a fervor among students and, for those of us on the faculty, there is an excitement that we can now enhance what we do," she said.

"Indigo is a chance for us to stop and enjoy being open to all the beautiful engagement that comes about when you look at the arts."

Indigo, featuring new, juried works, will be produced at the conclusion of each 15-week semester.

Contest Offers Seniors One Year Rent Free At River Bay Club

Got advice on successful aging? If it's great advice, it may be worth a free year of residency at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., or any of the 58 other Brookdale Living Communities across the United States.

Brookdale's "Advice Worth Giving" contest may be the first of its kind for senior living communities, according to Katherine Erickson, senior vice president of sales and marketing. "We're seeking wisdom on aging from the experts: seniors 75 and older," she said. The best advice will be compiled into a booklet on successful aging and given away by Brookdale communities.

Entries, which must be 75 words or less, can be written by family members or friends, but the information must come from the entrants themselves.

To enter, participants must physically qualify to live in one of Brookdale's independent living or assisted living apartments. The grand prizewinner may choose to live in any one of the 59 Brookdale communities, which include such diverse locales as East Mesa, Arizona; San Marcos, California; New York City; West Palm Beach, Florida; and Chicago's Lake Shore Drive. "We think we have a lifestyle to fit everyone's taste," Erickson said.

Runners up in Quincy won't go away empty-handed. They win a catered dinner for six in the dining room of River Bay Club.

Brookdale Living has provided exceptional senior living since 1988, starting with retirement communities in Texas and Illinois. Headquartered in Chicago, Brookdale today has 59 properties in 24 states.

After serving older adults for 14 years, President John P. Rijos said Brookdale has learned much about the process of aging. "We thought this contest would be a great way to compile advice from a wide audience and reward people at the same time," he said. "We'd like to have it down in black and white, what works and what doesn't, and share it with others."

"Advice Worth Giving" contest forms are available on the Internet at www.brookdaleliving.com or can be picked up at River Bay Club located at 99 Brackett St.

Entries must be submitted no later than July 31, 2002. Winners will be announced in August of 2002.

AMONG THOSE HELPING in the city-wide Cleaner, Greener Quincy clean-up Saturday were state Rep. Bruce Ayers, Park-Forrest Executive Director Tom Koch with sons, Cornelius, 5, and Thomas, Jr., 3, and Ron Donovan, administrative assistant to Mayor William Phelan.

Clinical Services Lab At QMC Granted 'Unconditional Accreditation'

Quincy Medical Center's Clinical Services Laboratory was recently granted "unconditional accreditation" by the College of American Pathologists (CAP).

The distinction places QMC's laboratory in a select group of laboratories nationwide that have been evaluated and designated in compliance with CAP accreditation standards. Often laboratories will receive a small number of deficiencies that must be corrected within a certain timeframe in order to receive CAP accreditation. QMC's laboratory was granted immediate, "unconditional accreditation."

During the accreditation process, inspectors examined the education and qualifications of QMC lab staff and management, the facilities and equipment, and the records and quality control measures in place for the preceding two years.

"CAP accreditation is the gold standard of lab accreditation processes," said Tony Richard, director of the clinical services laboratory at QMC. "The 'unconditional accreditation' is a tribute to the lab staff's diligence and commitment to quality standards every day."

Quincy Medical Center, affiliated since 1999 with Boston Medical Center, is a 282-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

Plans Moved To Pembroke

Hanley To Complete Term As Ward 1 Councillor

Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley -- who is planning a move to Pembroke with his family -- has decided not to seek re-election in 2003 but has also decided to complete the remainder of his existing term.

Hanley's decision to finish out his second term in office means there will be no special elections or appointments to fill a vacant Ward 1 seat; however, many names are already being mentioned across the city as possible successors to the 37-year old councillor.

"The possibility of leaving is a reality," said Hanley, who has made an offer to purchase a home at 18 MacKenzie Orchard in Pembroke and whose 32 Shed St. home is "under agreement," with the passing of papers set for June 28.

Hanley, who said he and his family had looked unsuccessfully at homes both in the ward and in the city, said the decision to move was a tough one but was a case of family over politics.

"I'm sorely going to miss the community and it's really not something I considered at the last minute," he said, "but the fact remains that I have a three-bedroom Cape with a wife, four children, and a dog and we've simply outgrown the house."

Hanley said that he had been considering such a move since Christmas time of 2001 and had sought the legal opinion of then City Solicitor Stephen McGrath as to the residency requirements of his position; McGrath, he the law looks at a person's address at the time of election.

That decision is moot, however, as Hanley has already secured an apartment on 75 Palmer St. to retain residency and to have a place to stay while conducting ward business.

Hanley's situation is similar to that of Richard Koch, Jr., a councillor at-Large in the 1980's.

of a Responsible Employer Ordinance and his work representing the interests of police and firefighters as chairman of the Public Safety Committee.

But those days as a councillor will be over after the election of 2003. "Right now it's my family first, politics second," Hanley said.

Names being mentioned as possible Ward 1 candidates in the 2003 election include former Ward 1 Councillors Leo Kelly and Peter Kolson. Also being mentioned, among others, are: Gretchen Grant; P.J. Foley; Robb Ross, James Bottary; Sean McArdle; William Ryan; William Weed; Richard Monahan; Joseph Monahan; and Joanne Bythrow.

Koch, after serving two terms, was re-elected to a third term in 1985. He finished the first year of that term and the family relocated in Brewster where he joined the police department.

He completed the last year of the term, establishing a residence in an apartment on West Elm Ave. in Wollaston.

Hanley thanked former Council President Michael Cheney for his guidance and for Cheney's advice "to give 100 percent effort all the time," something Hanley said he's tried to do.

"Honestly, I never intended to be a career politician," he said. "I wanted to make a contribution and I'm very proud of the work I've done as a ward councillor."

Hanley called the city's passage of an inclusionary zoning ordinance one of his proudest moments as a councillor, also noting the city's passage

Coughlin Resolve Supports Local Control Over Wireless Communications Siting

The City Council Monday night unanimously adopted a resolution authored by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin in support of a bill sponsored by state Sen. Michael Morrissey to reaffirm local control over the siting of wireless communications and antennas.

If approved, the bill would remove the Department of Telecommunication and Energy from administrative review of local zoning board wireless decisions, thus returning local authority and control. In the past, Coughlin said, it has reportedly been the DTE's practice to rule in favor of the telecommunications industry in appeals brought before them.

In a related matter, Coughlin introduced a proposed ordinance for the city with respect to the siting of wireless communications facilities and antennas. The goal of the city's first-such ordinance, Coughlin said, would be to make the permitting of such facilities "a public process" taking into account the city's character and appearance, public safety, and any potential adverse impacts.

Coughlin's proposed ordinance was referred to the Ordinance Committee which will hold a public hearing on the matter Saturday, June 8 at 8:45 a.m. prior to a scheduled budget hearing by the Finance Committee.

Quincy, North Quincy, Wollaston Post Offices Participating Letter Carriers Annual Food Drive Saturday

In an attempt to curb summertime hunger, the Quincy, Wollaston, and North Quincy letter carriers will participate in the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) Branch 34's Annual Food Drive Saturday, May 11 to stock local food pantries and the Greater Boston Food Bank.

The NALC, in conjunction with the United States Postal Service, AFL-CIO, United Way of Mass Bay, Saturn, Campbell's, and the Greater Boston Food Bank, is continuing its campaign to "Stamp Out Hunger."

Postal customers simply leave non-perishable food by their mailbox to be picked up and delivered to local food pantries.

The food drive involves thousands of letter carriers from across the United States who collect non-perishable food and deposit it at local food banks.

Last year's effort produced 45 million pounds of food nationwide and the event has turned into the nation's largest one-day food drive.

The NALC Branch 34, an affiliate of the AFL-CIO, represents 3,500 letter carriers who deliver mail in approximately 65 communities in the Greater Boston area.

This is the tenth anniversary of the food drive.

Secretary Galvin To Present Preservation Award To Crane Library May 16

William Francis Galvin, Secretary of the Commonwealth and Chairman of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, will present the 2002 Massachusetts Historical Commission Preservation Award to the restoration of the Thomas Crane Public Library in an upcoming ceremony.

The awards presentation will take place Thursday, May 16 at the Massachusetts Archives, 220 Morrissey Blvd., Dorchester from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

"As one of the 12 award winners for 2002, this project restored a national historic landmark," Galvin said. "The Massachusetts Historical Commission is proud to recognize the Crane Library among this year's group of outstanding projects."

The Thomas Crane Public Library, designed by noted architect H.H. Richardson, was built in 1882. In 1939, the Works Projects Administration (WPA) produced an addition to the library. It was declared a National Historic Landmark in 1987.

Pets' Importance Focus Of Nursing Week At John Adams Care Center

The John Adams Continuing Care Center, 211 Franklin St., will celebrate National Nursing Home Week -- which runs May 12 through May 17 -- in a unique way: by focusing on "Animal Awareness" and the importance of animals in a person's life.

Pets provide unconditional love and bring a great source of comfort to people's lives, including those who reside in nursing homes. To celebrate that fact, two very special programs will be presented to residents of the center as well as anyone from the community who would like to visit.

On Monday, May 13, and through the week, Ce-Ce & Friends Humane Society, an all-volunteer organization, will have photographs of cats and kittens that are available for adoption. Ce-Ce & Friends is a non-profit transitional shelter which provides any necessary veterinary care for stray, feral, and abandoned cats and kittens until permanent homes are found. Students at the Ross School in Braintree are helping to collect needed items for the shelter.

On Tuesday, May 14 at 2 p.m. Helping Hands, Monkey Helpers for the Disabled, will be coming to the center. Helping Hands trains Capuchin monkeys and places them throughout the country with quadriplegics. These trained monkeys enable disabled individuals a way to accomplish many chores of everyday living, learning to do the tasks that make a difference in the lives of their human partners. They are taught to respond to a beam of light that the disabled individual directs from a mouth-operated laser pointer. Toy monkeys will be on sale at the event will proceeds going to Helping Hands.

Other programs during National Nursing Home Week will include: The Brenner Family Magic Show, featuring Oreo, America's only singing pig, Wednesday, May 15 at 10:30 a.m.; a slide presentation on people and their pets, Wednesday, May 15; and a visit from Farm Friends, Thursday, May 16 at 1 p.m.

The week will conclude with recognition of staff and residents with a pizza party and prizes to contest winners from Petco.

To learn more about these programs or to join the festivities at the center, call (617) 479-0837.

Spaghetti Dinner First Event May 17

Parents Seeks To Raise $30,000 To Equip Adams Shore Playground

All Janet Kirby, Maureen Sullivan and Natalie Tucker want is a decent place for their 12 children to play.

That's why Adams Shore Area Playground (ASAP) is holding a fund-raising Adult Spaghetti Dinner Friday, May 17, from 7 p.m. to 12 midnight at the Quincy Yacht Club on Sea Street in Hough's Neck.

Tickets are $10 per person and the proceeds will go to restoring and reequipping the Adams Shore Playground, a city-owned park that has fallen on to lean times on the municipal budget.

The goal is $30,000 raised by Labor Day.

"We met with Tom Koch in September on new equipment," says Janet Kirby, spokesman for the group. "The city has a catalogue of what is needed. It will cost about $30,000."

The spaghetti dinner is the group's first attempt at fund-raising although they passed the hat at the at the last minute at the Adams

Shore Community Association's Valentines Day dinner and raised $150.

Right now Kirby, mother of five; Tucker, mother of four; and Sullivan, mother of three, are reluctant to send their kids to the nearest playground in Merrymount because of the traffic on busy Sea Street.

"The park is there already," says Kirby. "The residents raised money and rebuilt it 10 years ago. We can do it again."

Human Rights Commission To Receive $5,000 Grant

The Quincy Human Rights Commission will receive a $5,000 grant from the United Way of Massachusetts

The Unity Fund, to promote religious harmony and an appreciation of difference, was established following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

SCHOOLED IN THE FACTS

Unless you are interested in buying a home in a retirement community or a vacation area, it pays to investigate the quality of the local schools. Even if you do not have children, it is quite possible that you are going to eventually sell your home to people with a vested interest in good schools. Quality schooling is one of the top criteria by which buyers evaluate homes and neighborhoods. Usually, homes in areas of good schools sell for higher prices than similar homes elsewhere. Buyers are encouraged to discuss this matter with real estate agents and contact the local school board to investigate how much is spent on each pupil, SAT scores, and what percentage of students enter college.

The quality of the schools in your area will have an impact on the market value of your home. If you're interested in selling, CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can provide you with a market analysis. Our goal is to help sell homes quickly and for full-market value. We implement an aggressive marketing strategy that includes adding the home to the Multiple Listing Service and local papers and coordinating open houses. We sell on purpose -- not by accident! Call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway for personal service for your area specialist.

HINT: Sellers should take the time to talk with prospective neighbors and other people in the surrounding area to get a realistic picture of what life is like in the community.

REAL ESTATE

Rebounding Real Estate Market Will Require Cooperation

By DANIEL J. FLYNN III, CEO

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. With the economy struggling over the last year, the real estate market in Quincy and the rest of the South Shore has taken its share of the hit.

In the South Shore office sector, vacancy rates rose and rental rates dropped, but as the economy starts to show signs of strengthening, the area can look forward to a renewed vigor in the real estate market.

DANIEL FLYNN

During the recent economic decline, office vacancy rates throughout the South Shore rose to over 19% by some estimates by the end of 2001. Leasing rates, which began to rise to record levels during the real estate boom that preceded the recession, also peaked and started to drop, standing now at around $20 per square foot.

We are now beginning to experience a return to normalcy that we haven't seen since before the big real estate boom. Back then, the market was greatly skewed in a positive direction. Then, the recession distorted it with an opposite force. Soon, we will see a more healthy, balanced real estate conditions, the likes of which we haven't experienced in quite some time. Once the market recovers, Quincy should see some exciting developments take shape, provided the city is united toward a common goal.

We've heard much about pending residential projects in and around Quincy that will have a significant positive impact on the area once completed. Major residential projects include the Highpoint development, a 1,040 unit apartment complex along Quarry Street, as well as a 111-unit development planned in the heart of downtown Quincy. An increase in apartment inventory will capitalize on the city's convenient commuter location, will feed existing businesses and will create a solid customer base that will help attract new businesses. The result will be a stronger, more resilient city economy.

Even in a less-than-perfect economy, the area's multi-unit residential market remains strong. Average selling prices for two-families in Quincy fell just 4 percent below their respective asking prices, showing that residential investment properties are attracting a spirited group of buyers. Recognizing the sound investment, those who have been holding their money during the recession are taking advantage of low interest rates to invest in high-return real estate.

An influx of residents in and around the downtown area will bring about additional foot traffic that could potentially bolster the area's demand for retail. From there, positive effects could trickle down, improving upon other sectors of Quincy's commercial real estate market.

The South Shore, and Quincy in particular, offer tremendous benefits to the businesses that call the area home. Quincy's transportation convenience -- access to major highways and state routes, bus lines and MBTA trains -- is a huge selling point. Improvements to downtown infrastructure will only strengthen it.

While rejuvenated real estate like the former Woolworth's and Patriot Ledger buildings make the downtown area a more attractive and economically viable location, other property owners could be inspired to conduct similar renovations. More modern real estate will attract higher-paying Class A tenants.

In the wake of a struggling economy, there is no shortage of commercial space. But the economy will mend and businesses will start to regain confidence. The real estate market will pick up momentum as nearly 1.5 million vacant square feet of South Shore office space begins to fill up.

It will be a long, arduous road back to for Quincy, and there will be many factors that could contribute to or detract from the city's long term economic strength. Most importantly, it will require cooperation between state and local government officials, property owners, leasing agents, and the general public. We all need to move forward with the best interests of the city in mind.

$188,000 check to pay for work in Norfolk Downs.

Sullivan, who said there was no reason to believe that the bills were not valid, said the bills were brought to the city's attention by newly appointed DPW Commissioner Jay Fink.

"The DPW came forth with these bills," said Sullivan, who noted that Auditor Michael McFarland also indicated that he had heard of the possibility of unpaid bills in the DPW. "No other department has come forth with such bills and we have no reason to believe they would."

Phelan said the next step would be to determine the city's legal obligation with respect to the specific bills but that his administration had already ended such practices.

"We're cleaning house and we're going to move forward in a responsible manner," said Phelan.

Speaking to The Sun Tuesday, Colton said he had responded to specific allegations made by Phelan during the first few months of his administration but that he no longer saw the point in doing so.

"I've decided not to respond to individual comments, charges, or off-the-cuff remarks," said Colton.

"Mayor Phelan ran for mayor because he did not agree with how the city was being run. He won the election. I've moved on and that's that."

Pointing to projects such as the Marshall Elementary School, the addition to and renovation of the Crane Library, and the Quincy Concourse, Colton continued: "I'm very proud of what I've accomplished and all you have to do is look around the city. I think I've left a positive legacy and the mayor doesn't agree. So be it."

"The election should be over and I don't want to be responsible for continuing the vitriolic rhetoric. It serves no useful purpose."

In addition, Phelan said he is considering using $1 million of the city's stabilization account to further close the budget deficit, expressing his hope that another $1 million of the budget deficit could be solved through the city's existing austerity measures.

Phelan's budget plan also calls for bringing the existing Traffic and Parking Department under the heading of the Department of Public Works and the creation of a Department of Constituent Services which, Phelan said, would save money by avoiding "duplication of services" in the city.

In his presentation to councillors, Phelan emphasized that the School Department's budget contains roughly half of the city's operating costs, making reductions in that area an unfortunate necessity.

"That (reduction) is significant to the schools. There's no way to sugarcoat it," said Phelan, who committed himself to restoration of that budget in the future but emphasized that the city would close no schools and maintain required class sizes under his plan.

At the request of its chairman, Councillor at-Large Timothy Cahill, the Finance Committee has scheduled three meetings to discuss the mayor's proposed budget with the city's department heads, part of the council's regular approval process. Beginning at 9 a.m., Finance Committee meetings will be held Saturdays, May 18, June 8, and June 15.

By law, the city is allowed to cut from a mayor's proposed budget but is not allowed to add to it.

SPRING CAR CARE

Spring Car Care Key To Trouble-Free Summer Driving

Spring is the perfect time to help your car recover from the brutal winter and prepare it for the rigors of summer driving, according to AAA Southern New England.

"After a long winter, most people are eager to get out and enjoy the warmer weather," said AAA Car

Doctor John Paul. "The time spent preparing your car can keep your spring and summer road trips from being interrupted by expensive and inconvenient breakdowns."

To prepare for warm-weather driving, AAA suggests motorists have their cars thoroughly inspected by a certified technician. At minimum, you or your technician should:

- Inspect antifreeze/coolant level and condition, making certain the proper 50/50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

- Check motor oil and condition. If driving under extreme conditions — such as very hot temperatures or towing a heavy trailer — switch to a motor oil with higher viscosity. Check the owner's manual for specific oil recommendations.

- Inspect and replace worn or cracked belts as well as worn, cracked, blistered or soft hoses.

- Examine tires for uneven or excessive tread wear. Make sure all tires, including the spare, are inflated properly.

- Check the air conditioning system for leaks and have it serviced using the refrigerant R-12 in older systems or R-134A in new or modified air conditioners. Do not use non-approved substitute refrigerants.

- Hot weather can shorten the life of a car's battery, so weak or old batteries should be tested and replaced if necessary.

- Check fluid levels and tire pressure before, during and after a long road trip.

Communication Promotes Quality Auto Repair

Even if you don't know the difference between a fuel injector and an oxygen sensor, there are still things you can do to help your auto repair technician properly service your vehicle, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Consumers can help by accurately describing the problem and by asking questions until they understand the work being done on their car," said AAA Manager of Approval Auto Repair Alfred Ruggiero. "Accurate communication between the repair shop and the customer is one of the most important contributors to trouble-free auto service."

The first step is to make an appointment for repairs whenever possible. If the shop management knows you are coming and has an idea of the problem, they can assign the right person to the job and allow enough time to get it done properly.

When you arrive at the shop, don't tell the service advisor what you think needs to be fixed or replaced unless it's obvious. Instead, describe the problem and its symptoms. Let the technician determine what needs to be fixed.

To avoid misunderstandings, always get an estimate in writing. Oral estimates can be disputed or forgotten. Most written estimates contain a clause allowing the actual cost to exceed the estimate by a certain percentage, such as 10 percent or $10 in Massachusetts.

Carefully read the work order before you leave your vehicle at the shop. Be wary of broad statements such as "check and correct transmission noise" or "repair engine." You could wind up with a new transmission or engine and a bill higher than you expected. Also, never sign a blank work order, and never tell the shop personnel to "do what's necessary" or "just fix it," unless the problem will clearly be covered by warranty.

Make sure you understand the shop's warranty. It should be printed on the bill. If not, ask for it in writing.

Finally, take a test drive. If the car isn't running right, don't take it home. If you discover that the problem is not solved after you leave the shop, make an appointment to bring the car back as soon as possible.

To further ensure quality auto repair, AAA recommends motorists take their vehicles to shops recognized by AAA's Approved Auto Repair program.

MANUAL OR AUTOMATIC?

Sometimes the old-fashioned way of doing things is at least as good as the newer, more technologically advanced way. Such is the case with the manual toothbrush. According to the American Dental Association, manual toothbrushes can be just as effective as electric toothbrushes as long as you take the time and care to brush all tooth surfaces for at least a few minutes. Electric toothbrushes certainly have their place -- especially among those with manual dexterity problems, such as those with arthritis. They may also cultivate enthusiasm for brushing among young children. For everyone else, electric toothbrushes do not necessarily pose an advantage over manual brushes as long as care is taken to stimulate the gums along with brushing teeth.

We strive to teach you good oral hygiene. In the long run, you will have better dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress that health depends on healthy teeth and good dental care. A thorough examination and detailed explanation of all findings and treatment needed are routinely given. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problems after they occur. We're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self esteem. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. It is the mechanical aspect of brushing teeth that inhibits tooth decay by disrupting plaque formation and removing food particles.

Don't Treat Springtime Allergies Lightly

Differences Between Hay Fever And A Cold

As the first signs of spring spread across New England, most of us look forward to getting out of the house to enjoy the warm weather. For millions of us, however, springtime not only marks the return of robins and warm spring nights, it's also that time of the year when we welcome the return of allergic rhinitis, more commonly known as hay fever.

More than 50 million Americans have some form of allergy, and nearly 36 million suffer from hay fever. In fact, the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology (AAAAI) estimates that allergic disorders are the sixth leading cause of chronic illness in the country.

"Allergies can cause significant discomfort and disruption of normal activities," said Stuart Rhein, M.D., president of the Massachusetts Allergy and Asthma Society, a Fellow of the AAAAI, and a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. "If left untreated, they can lead to more serious health problems such as asthma."

Allergies are a reaction to ordinary substances called allergens, which can be inhaled, swallowed or can come into contact with the skin. These allergens trigger the white blood cells to produce antibodies, which cause the body to release substances that cause allergic symptoms.

There are times when hay fever sufferers may confuse their allergic symptoms with a cold. The difference between the onset of hay fever and a cold include the following:

- Allergy symptoms usually include runny or stuffy nose, sneezing, wheezing, and watery and itchy eyes. Cold symptoms may include allergy symptoms plus fever and aches and pains.

- Allergy symptoms begin almost immediately after exposure to allergens. Cold symptoms develop gradually, and increase in severity over a few days.

- Allergy symptoms last as long as the exposure to the allergen. The common cold usually runs its course within several days to a week.

Many allergy sufferers try to get through their allergic bouts without medical attention. Dr. Rhein said this is not a good idea for long-term health and it's also unnecessary.

"With the range of medications available to allergy sufferers today, there is no reason for a person to suffer with the symptoms," he said. "If your symptoms are interfering with your work, school or leisure time, treatment is available that will improve your quality of life."

If you have allergic symptoms, Dr. Rhein recommends that you see your physician, who may be able to prescribe medications that will alleviate many of them. If the symptoms persist, ask your primary care doctor about referring you to an allergy specialist.

"A specialist will have a wide range of possible treatment and is also able to conduct a skin test for certain allergies that may be the cause of your symptoms," Dr. Rhein said.

Before testing is done, the specialist will take a full medical history and inquire about when and where the symptoms manifest themselves. Skin testing can help to pinpoint the triggers of allergic reactions, which can then be eliminated or treated with allergy injections.

Dr. Rhein also recommends these common sense steps to limit the symptoms of allergies such as hay fever:

- Limit outdoor activities between the hours of 6 and 10 a.m., since this is when plants and trees release most of their pollen.

- Don't hang bed linens outside to dry. Pollen will settle on them and be transported into your home.

- Listen to news reports of pollen counts. When the count is high try to stay indoors and limit your outdoor activity.

- Antihistamines work best as prevention. If your physician has prescribed regular use of antihistamines, be sure to take them as prescribed to prevent the onset of symptoms.

Most important, Dr. Rhein said, is to seek help of a physician if the symptoms persist.

For more information about allergies visit the AAAAI Web site (www.aaaai.org).

SPORTS

Quincy Softball Struts Stuff In 11-3 Win Over North

By CHRIS POISSON

It's only his second season as the Quincy High softball coach, but Mike Sedar truly understands the Quincy-North game.

"I told the girls before we played that it's always a scary game," he said.

Indeed, the powerful Presidents strutted into last Friday afternoon's bout with their crosstown rivals as the heavy favorites. They had won four straight games to move atop the Atlantic Coast League and all phases of their game seemed to be clicking.

North Quincy, on the other hand, staggered into the show down with just one win in midweek through the season. However, that one win came last Monday so maybe the Red Raiders had a little more swagger to their step.

Well, those pesky Red Raiders scratched and clawed to keep the game close, but they self-destructed in the sixth inning to turn a 5-3 game into an 11-3 loss. The final score may indicate a one-sided affair, but it was really a scary game for Quincy.

"That's a good ballclub," Sedar said. "You can't take them for granted. They're a tough team. They have good base runners. They hit the ball. They're always scary. They never give up. They're a quality ballclub and that's nice to see. We're happy to get it out of the way because we have a big week coming up."

"I'm extremely proud of my team," said head coach Bob Doyle. "Unfortunately, we kind of got rattled there in the last inning and it just kind of opened the floodgates. I was proud the way the girls held things together in the early going."

Quincy (8-3 overall, 4-1 ACL) traveled to Randolph Tuesday and to Whitman-Hanson yesterday (Wednesday), which it lost to 9-0 earlier in the season. Tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 4 it returns home to take on Nauset.

North Quincy (1-10 overall, 1-5 Old Colony League) headed to Marshfield Monday, hosted Taunton yesterday and will travel to Falmouth today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

After winning their first game of the year last Monday, the Red Raiders jumped out to a 2-0 lead against Silver Lake last Wednesday but fell, 9-2, as several miscues led to seven runs in the third and fourth innings.

Clearly, they carried some momentum from those game into the first inning against Quincy. Senior tri-captain Kathryn MacRitchie led off the game by ripping a pitch from junior Stacy Andrew down the third base line for a double. Two outs later, sophomore first baseman May H'lined a double to the left-center gap for a 1-0 lead.

Quincy answered with four runs in the bottom half. Sophomore Kim Walsh, who pitched North Quincy to its first win, yielded a single between two walks as Quincy loaded the bases with no outs.

Junior centerfielder Diane Gilbody drilled a single off shortstop Lisa Schifone's glove to tie the game and junior first baseman Liz Campbell stroked a two-run single for a 3-1 advantage. Sophomore Courtney Alongi knocked in the fourth run with an RBI groundout.

But North Quincy continued to peek away with single runs in the next two innings. In the second, sophomore catcher Beth Goodrich reached on a bunt, stole second, moved to third on an error, moved to third on a single and stole second. After an out, junior tri-captain Casey Lorman grounded out to third and Quincy tried to gun down Schifone who was breaking for third base, but the throw got by the fielder and Schifone crossed home plate to trim the lead to 4-3.

In the third, Schifone led off with a single and stole second. After an out, junior tri-captain Casey Lorman grounded out to third and Quincy tried to gun down Schifone who was breaking for third base, but the throw got by the fielder and Schifone crossed home plate to trim the lead to 4-3.

The North Quincy High School boys' soccer team will hold a car wash for Mother's Day Saturday from 9:30 a.m.

In the fourth, Sedar lifted Andrew from the game and inserted sophomore Rachael Sorensen, who had tossed the first three innings in the JV game. The move proved to be a moment of crisis as Sorensen allowed just one hit and a walk over the final four innings.

"Sorensen is a harder thrower and her mechanics on the mound got our hitters a little off-balance," Doyle said.

Meanwhile, Walsh was tossing a pretty good game for North. After a jittery first inning, she breezed through the next four innings giving up an unearned run in the fifth as Quincy took a 5-3 lead.

"Kim Walsh pitched a very admirable game for us," Doyle said. "I was very proud of her. She was all over the strike zone and I think she kept Quincy hitters off-balance for most of the day with pop-outs and groundballs."

Said Sedar: "We've been facing a couple of kids that have been really throwing hard and this girl [Walsh] was a little different speed for us. We had trouble with her. We were off-balance. Our timing was off."

In the sixth, the Presidents adjusted to Walsh's pitching style and also capitalized on several North Quincy errors to totally six runs. Perhaps a bit fatigued, Walsh walked the first two batters, freshman Rebekka Sorensen and junior Kelly Gropp.

Senior Michelle Pilalas, the league's top hitter who was 0 for 2 with a walk, belted an RBI double but North Quincy gunned down Gropp heading to third on the play. After freshman Katie Walsh reached on an infield hit, junior Shannon Paine poked an RBI single for a 7-3 lead, but North Quincy nailed another runner at third for the second out.

And then North Quincy received an unfortunate bounce. Gilbody hit a fly ball to right field, but junior Cristina Conley lost it in the glaring sun and the ball hit her in the head and two more runs scored. Conley left the game but there was no serious injury. North Quincy committed two more errors that led to Quincy's final two runs.

"We get two outs and it you give them one little inch, they just take it and run with it," Doyle said. "Unfortunately, we're still kind of a young team and from a mental aspect we make mistakes and it kind of snowballs."

"Mike has done a great job over there," he added. "Quincy is having a great season. Like I said, I'm very proud of my girls even though we came out on the short end of the stick. I thought we competed and it proved that we can compete against these other teams, and we're really looking forward to the second half of the season."

SAFETY RATINGS

Law dictates that all cars sold in the U.S. offer a mandated minimum amount of protection for a crash at 30 mph. To come up with its ratings, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), which issues the government ratings, crashes new cars at 35 mph head-on into a wall to determine the level of safety beyond the minimum. It also tests for crashes from the side and calculates a vehicle's rollover tendency based on such factors as weight and height. Its lowest rating (one star) suggests that occupants would suffer serious, or even life-threatening, injuries in a crash. Drivers of cars with at least a four-star rating can expect a 20% or less chance of serious injury.

New cars are safer. Whether you are leasing or buying a new

Raiders Bow In Rams' Showdown

By CHRIS POISSON

The anticipated league showdown between North Quincy High and Marshfield Monday afternoon at Adams Field may not have lived up to its billing, but the Rams' Chris Martin certainly did.

The senior right-hander baffled the Red Raiders all afternoon, mixing a fiery fastball and a nasty curveball with pin-point control as Marshfield (12-0 overall, 7-0 league) cruised to a 10-1 victory to remain in first place in the Old Colony League.

In a complete-game effort, Martin yielded one run on three hits, walked none and struck out 14 to improve his record to 6-0 with 59 punchouts in 42 innings. Martin, who also entered the game as the league's top pitcher with a .541 average, went 1 for 2 with an RBI and two runs scored.

"He's outstanding," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "He's the best pitcher we've faced all year. He struck out 14 and didn't walk a batter. You have to tip your hat to that kid. If we played our best game, I'd still be nervous."

The loss halts North Quincy's four-game winning streak, which included three wins last week over Plymouth South, Silver Lake and Quincy.

North Quincy (8-4, 5-2) traveled to Taunton yesterday (Wednesday) and this afternoon (Thursday) at 4 it hosts Falmouth.

After a scoreless first inning, Marshfield reached senior John O'Connell for a pair of runs in the second and four more runs in the third for a 6-0 advantage. Two of the runs came on errant pickoff attempts.

In the fourth, O'Connell walked the leadoff batter and Taglieri brought in junior relief pitcher Dom Delgado, who quickly induced a beautiful 6-4-3 double play and got out of the inning unscathed. In the fifth, though, the Rams tagged him for two runs to build an 8-0 lead.

Although it made several defensive blunders, North Quincy also made some sensational plays in the field. Senior center fielder Wayne Moynihan ended the fifth inning with a routine defensive play for him—a diving, shoestring catch on a flare into shallow center.

"Heck of a catch," Taglieri said.

Junior Gary Dalton, in his varsity debut, pitched a scoreless sixth, receiving help from the defense as it turned another 6-4-3 double play.

"We were a little sloppy in the field, but we also had two double plays that were big," Taglieri said. "Charles Vidoli has been outstanding at third base. He's probably been our most reliable and consistent fielder this year. And Dennis [Thomson] is doing a great job of turning them."

In the bottom half, the Red Raiders, who were finally making contact against Martin, put a run on the board to spoil his shutout bid.

Senior Mark Maher singled to left to lead off the inning. After two fly outs, Moynihan crushed a two-strike pitch off the base of the right field fence for an RBI triple to make the score 8-1. Marshfield added two runs off Dalton in the seventh to close out the scoring.

Last Friday night, North Quincy didn't overlook crosstown rival Quincy for the upcoming Marshfield game and scored an impressive 8-0 victory.

Senior Mike Feetham, who missed a couple of starts with some shoulder problems, tossed four strong innings, allowing one hit, walking one and fanning six. Senior Neal Gavin pitched the fifth and sixth innings and Delgado took the mound in the seventh.

North Quincy took a 3-0 lead in the first inning off junior southpaw Anthony Boyle. Senior Pat Bregoli reached on an infield hit and Moynihan singled to left. Feetham's fielder choice moved Bregoli to third and he scored the game's first run on a wild pitch.

After an out, Gavin walked and Thomson reached on an error that allowed Feetham to score. Senior John Fidalgo followed with an RBI single.

In the fourth, Boyle recorded the first two outs but the Red Raiders responded with five straight hits for three runs and a 7-0 lead. Feetham, Gavin and Thomson had RBI singles.

"Anthony pitched pretty well," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "He was pretty devastated coming off the field. He took it to heart. I said, 'Look, you did a good job. I told you before the game to work on your pitching. People are going to make mistakes behind you. It happens. Don't let it get you down.'"

Junior Bob Ritchie relieved Boyle and pitched a scoreless fifth and allowed one run in the sixth.

"Bobby Ritchie came in and did a great job," Draicchio said. "He's done that this year. He's been hard to hit because your going from a fastball pitcher to a guy that throws junk."

The Presidents only had two hits in the game, but it was the defensive miscues that continued to haunt them.

"We're doing the job at the plate," Draicchio said. "That's not an issue. We have to sharpen our skills defensively and we're working on it."

"I'm proud of my guys," he added. "I tell them that every time. If we stay positive, we'll get some wins in the second half of the season. They have nothing to be ashamed of. There are a lot of good things going on with these guys."

Volunteers are needed to help pick the donations up from the Quincy Post offices and then sort and box the food back at the Crisis Center.

The Quincy Crisis Center has been providing emergency food assistance to homebound families throughout Quincy and the South Shore for the past 20 years.

Through volunteer help, Quincy Crisis Center has made 24% more deliveries of emergency food assistance in the first four months of 2002 compared to the same period last year. Deliveries are also up 68 percent compared to the same period in 2000.

The food that comes from the community through the Letter Carrier Food Drive helps tremendously, since deliveries are up and pantry shelves need replenishing.

For more information or to volunteer, call Kathi at 617-847-6967.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

MOTHERS! There's nobody like a mother! She is a very special kind of person! One can always tell who's a mother, because she... kissed your cuts and scrapes to make them better (or well); she cried at your wedding and she regales your little ones with stories of "olden days." She goes shopping for herself and comes home with something for her child. She promises herself she won't spoil a grandchild -- then decides it is one of her privileges as a grandmother...

She's Mom, Mama, Mother, Nana, Ma, - your Grandmother, your Mother, Daughter, Aunt, Mother-in-law, daughter-in-law, even the Mom next door who watches your kids for you...

You can always tell a mother, because she is constantly changing - and yet never changes at all...

To all mothers on this special day, we at the Deware Family Funeral Homes wish you a very happy and joyous day...

Dolan Funeral Services Providing Memorial Trees

Dolan Funeral Services of Milton and Dorchester have renewed their affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a Bethlehem, NH, organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firms arrange to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall.

This program is part of a large endeavor to restore the landscape and the environment with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged by the staff of the Dolan Funeral Services. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Car Seat Checkpoint At Executive Auto Glass May 21

Free car seat safety checks will be held Tuesday, May 21 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Quincy Executive Auto Glass, 165 Quincy Ave.

Certified technicians, who will adjust car seats or replace them for free, based on safety guidelines set by the National Highway Safety Administration, will perform the BuckleUp Inspections.

the risk of death by as much as 71 percent for infants alone.

The free car seat safety check is sponsored by the Greater Boston Safe Kids Coalition and Executive Auto Glass.

For reservations and more information about the Quincy checkpoint, call Roxanne Fuller at 781-438-8855.

Jeffrey Clifford Promoted In Suffolk County DA's Office

Quincy native Jeffrey Clifford, an Assistant District Attorney for Suffolk County, was recently promoted to the position of Rapid Indictment Prosecutor in the Juvenile Unit.

In his new position, Clifford is involved with the indictment and prosecution in Superior Court of juvenile violent offenders from Boston's Roxbury and Dorchester neighborhoods. Many of the cases he prosecutes involve the illegal use of firearms and defendants who are affiliated with gangs.

"Jeffrey's well-deserved promotion comes as no surprise to those who work with him," said Acting District Attorney Elizabeth Keeley. "He is an effective, diligent prosecutor engaged in the important work of holding violent young offenders accountable for their crimes and making the neighborhoods he serves safer places to live and work."

JEFFREY CLIFFORD

Clifford, a Hanson resident, most recently served as supervisor of prosecutors in Charlestown District Court. Before that, he was assigned to East Boston District Court. He joined the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office in 2000.

Prior to coming to Suffolk County, Clifford was an assistant district attorney in Norfolk County, assigned to Quincy District Court, as an assistant regional counsel for the state Department of Social Services.

A Quincy native, he is a U.S. Marine Corps veteran of Operation Desert Storm and a graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Boston and Catholic University of Law.

Clifford and his wife, Jeannine, have two young children, Juliette and Jacqueline.

Undergoing 30-Day Observation In Grisly Murder

Accused Slayer Pleads Innocent, Held Without Bail

A former Walpole man who recently moved to Quincy Point is under observation at Bridgewater State Hospital accused of murdering a woman and dismembering her body at his apartment.

Gregory Wall, 39, of 16 Sumner St., was ordered held without bail by Judge Mark S. Coven on a first degree murder charge in Quincy District Court Monday and sent to Bridgewater State Hospital for 30-day evaluation.

Wall pleaded innocent in the grisly slaying of Catherine F. Menkello, 51, who investigators said was stabbed to death and her body dismembered with a saw Friday night.

Authorities, meanwhile, are checking to see if there could be a link to the unsolved murder of a woman in Walpole Dec. 1, 1998.

Irene Kennedy, 75, was stabbed, beaten and sexually assaulted after she and her husband became separated while walking in Bird Park.

Wall is a native of Walpole and the son of a retired Walpole police sergeant, William Wall.

He is scheduled for a pre-trial conference May 24 in the Quincy murder.

The slaying was discovered by neighbors who saw a man, identified as Wall, carrying a trash bag of body parts and trying to stuff them into a shopping cart in the backyard of the apartment, which had been his home since March.

Police, summoned by the neighbors, found the woman's body parts in the plastic bag in Wall's apartment and Wall himself cowering in a closet under a pile of clothes. He surrendered without resistance.

Wall, Menkello and her boyfriend, Evan Baker, 41, had been drinking at the Quincy Adams Pub at Sumner and South Walnut streets, where Baker and Menkello got into an argument. The three left together at about 4 p.m.

Baker returned about 10 minutes later seeking his girlfriend, said the bartender, Tina Craig, and again around 8 p.m. Neighbors heard some sound of thumping from Wall's apartment at about 10 p.m. and saw a man in the yard with the trash bag at 11:30 p.m.

City To Receive $484,716 In Road Construction Funds

The Quincy legislative delegation has announced that they have secured an additional $484,716 for the year's construction season as part of a $250 million statewide investment in local road projects.

This allocation brings the total amount for statewide local road aid, or Chapter 90 funding, to $100 million for this year, according to Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Bruce J. Ayers.

Chapter 90 funding allocates money to cities and towns based on a formula which factors in the number of local roadways, population and the employment rate in the community. This funding is reimbursed to cities and town on pre-approved transportation projects.

The Massachusetts Highway Department and the city or town will enter into a Memorandum of Agreement before the municipality can submit invoices to draw down those funds for the various roadway improvement projects.

"The money can be used to address a community's maintenance issues such as potholes and repaving," Ayers said. "The money can also be used in conjunction with municipal funds for larger scale local projects."

Given the tight financial situation all cities and towns are facing, the legislative delegation made it a priority to secure the highway funding," said Morrissey.

"The legislature has recognized the need for roadway improvements due to the significant damage."

"Properly kept roadways are important not just for transportation but for public safety," Mariano said. "The legislative delegation will continue to work on ensuring that Massachusetts roads will be safe and accessible by continuing to fight for additional funds to help local communities meet their obligations to the citizens of the Commonwealth."

Sen. Kerry Visits Bernazzani School

Taxpayers' Group: City Should Demand Its Money Back From Audit Firm

Allan H. Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA), has called on Mayor William Phelan and the City Council to demand a refund from the accounting firm that audited the city's books for Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001.

"In both 2000 and 2001, there were bills illegally carried over to the following fiscal year, but Deloitte & Touche apparently didn't notice," Cousin said. "As our independent auditors, they were responsible not only to

Not Going To Squantum Point

USS Salem Will Stay At Shipyard

By CRAIG SALTERS

The USS Salem is alive and well and planning to remain at its current location next to the Fore River Bridge in Quincy Point, said Joanne Condon-Walsh, executive director of the museum ship.

"We're not going anywhere for the time being," Condon-Walsh said of the Salem, which until recently had plans to move from its berth inside the Fore River Shipyard to Squantum Point Park near Marina Bay, a proposal that sparked controversy among Marina Bay residents.

Condon-Walsh expressed the Salem's current plans to stay put during recent remarks before the Fore River Redevelopment Committee, but she also told listeners something they might not have expected: that the Salem's enhanced programs were experiencing remarkable growth and the museum ship as a whole was doing quite well.

"We're alive and well," Condon-Walsh told The Sun Tuesday, "and we're busy."

As evidence, Condon-Walsh pointed to a tripling in size of the ship's Overnight Adventure Program, which runs from September to June, from 1,500 sleepovers last year to more than 5,000 this year. That program alone, Condon-Walsh said, will generate $200,000 in revenue, or roughly half of the ship's operating budget.

Condon-Walsh credited much of that success to her son and Salem volunteer Michael Condon, who has taken over and enhanced the program, a traditional favorite for scouting and school groups. In fact, she said, Condon has been asked to make a presentation on the overnight program at the annual conference of the Historic Naval Ship Association.

Specific Dates Studied

Summer Yardwaste Pick-up Possibility

The city is considering the possibility of collecting grass clippings and other yardwaste during the weeks of July 8, July 22, Aug. 12, and Aug. 26 as it seeks to address the issue for those summer months.

If implemented, curbside yardwaste collection would be on the same day as residents' regularly scheduled trash pickup.

"That's the proposal that's sitting on the table right now," DPW Commissioner Jay Fink told members of the City Council's Public Works Committee Monday night, noting the plan provides

"some level of service" during July and August and would provide pick-up before major weekends of the summer.

Fink, joined at the podium several times by Rosemary Nolan and Thomas Fabrizio of the DPW, said the issue was a matter of reallocation of resources given the city's current fiscal crisis. He fielded questions from councilors who said they had been receiving calls from residents on the matter.

"This is definitely a front-burner issue," said Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin. Prior to Monday night's meeting of the Public Works Committee, the Oversight Committee met to discuss a very similar topic concerning BFT's pick-up of construction materials.

Although construction materials are banned in landfills, it was explained that transfer stations can accept deliveries if they contain less than 10 percent of said materials. Therefore, DPW officials said, construction materials broken down small enough to fit into bags and barrels would be accepted.

The DPW plans informational mailings to update residents on both issues.

Kenneth Tarabelli Named To Council On Aging

Mayor William Phelan has appointed Kenneth Tarabelli to serve as a member of the Quincy Council on Aging.

Phelan said the decision to appoint Tarabelli was made at the recommendation of John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging.

KENNETH TARABELLI

"Ken already does so much for the community of Quincy that were grateful that he's willing to serve in another way with the city's elderly population," said Phelan.

Tarabelli serves as executive director of Bay State Community Services, 15 Cottage Ave.

Board Rejects Extended Patio Hours At The Chantey

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After a lengthy meeting between abutters of The Chantey at Marina Bay who urged the License Board not to grant a request for an extension of hours on the outdoor patio, the board Tuesday unanimously rejected it.

The Chantey, according to their neighbors is located about 100 feet from their residence. Owners wanted to extend their outside hours from 10 p.m. to midnight.

Neighbors said they were virtually "locked inside" their apartments because of "excessive noise and rowdy behavior."

Charging that the noise from the 25 to 30 motorcycles were the real culprit as they all seem to leave together revving their engines, neighbors also complained of loud music from a juke box, doors never closed at The Chantey, and saying it was "impossible to sleep."

Chairman Joseph Shea said that the problem of noise from motorcycles is city wide and hard to deal with. He noted that last year, motorcycles were gathered at a restaurant in South Quincy. He said they left there and are now at Marina Bay.

Bill O'Connell, a spokesman for Chantey owner Gail Morash said there were trying to direct the motorcycles to park in a restricted area after 6 p.m. He said that motorcycles are not the only noise issue at Marina Bay.

He said they have made an attempt to show good faith and asked the board to give The Chantey the same consideration as they did Captain Fishbones in an extension of hours.

However, neighbors and Shea said there is no comparison between the two places, as one is at the far end of the Marina and not a threat to the residents, as The Chantey's proximity being much closer.

Shea said it's "impossible to try to treat everyone the same."

Fire chief Thomas Gorman said last year it was suggested that a sound barrier be installed at The Chantey but was told it was "too late in the season." He noted that there has been no barrier installed this year and called the plan "unsuccessful."

Gorman made the motion that the Chantey's hours remain the same as last year - that the patio will be closed at 10 p.m. and if there is any entertainment, then it will close at 9 p.m. Those hours are from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Gorman said "a lot of good people ride motorcycles -- they love the noise and are a different breed." He then suggested a different traffic flow with one way traffic exiting the Marina at night so that residents won't be exposed to the noise. He said if O'Connell "can convince his neighbors" that things can change, he can come back to the board."

Police Chief William Falco said that the problem at Marina Bay has been the "most difficult controversy that I have ever been involved with".

He said last month when O'Connell first came before the board for the extension of hours, he thought all businesses should be treated the same, but after hearing so many opponents, he said his primary concern is with the citizens.

One abutter, Diane Holbrook presented a petition to Shea with 40 names opposing the hours.

Another resident, Frank Glynn suggested police cruisers on weekends, and added the bulk of the noise is not from the Chantey.

Walter White, director of inspection services, said last year, there were noise control officers that were on duty four nights a week at Marina Bay registering decimal readings. He said however, The Chantey was not included in the study.

MARAD Official: No Ship Scrapping At Fore River Shipyard

A top official of the United States Maritime Administration (MARAD) has assured the city that the potentially dangerous and environmentally unsafe practice of ship scrapping will not be a future use of the Fore River Shipyard.

"We are not pursuing that proposal," said Jean McKeever, associate administrator of Shipbuilding for MARAD, during last Friday's visit to the yard accompanied by Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor William Phelan, Council President Daniel Raymond, and Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000.

McKeever explained further that a recent legal advertisement exploring the possibility of ship scrapping was simply MARAD attempting to explore any and all options for the yard as it proceeds with the foreclosure process on the multi-acre parcel.

"It was intended merely as a trial balloon," said McKeever, adding, "We have put that proposal to rest and do not intend to pursue it."

McKeever's message that MARAD would work collaboratively with the city to obtain "a good situation for the federal government and the city of Quincy" was welcomed by officials.

"I'm satisfied MARAD understands the profound interest of the community and will factor that into the development," said Delahunt, who urged patience in development of the parcel given the current economic downturn.

Phelan praised MARAD

for its "forthright" handling of the situation and emphasized that selling price would not be the sole criterion in development of the parcel.

Calling the former shipyard "the last frontier" for major economic development in the city, Raymond highlighted for McKeever the emotional attachment many residents feel to the shipyard and urged consideration of a development study put together in the early 1990's by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), which is currently in the process of selling its 12 to 13-acre parcel of shipyard property.

MARAD was allowed to begin the foreclosure process in March of this year after a US Bankruptcy Court judge dismissed the reorganization plan of failed shipyard developer Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), whose defaulted loans were guaranteed by MARAD funds.

THE FUTURE OF the Fore River Shipyard, which is currently being foreclosed upon by the United States Maritime Administration (MARAD) following the loan default of failed shipyard developer Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), was the topic of discussion during last Friday's tour of the yard by, from left: Congressman William Delahunt; Jean McKeever, associate administrator for Shipbuilding, MARAD; Mayor William Phelan; Council President and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond; and Joseph Mannarino, executive director, Quincy 2000. Alba Has Her Eye On The Ball

Here we go again.

Now, it's Alba Tocchi with her eye on the ball. The granite ball at the Fore River bridge traffic rotary. The one that was originally outside City Hall.

ALBA TOCCI

And the one a lot of us think should be back there.

Alba is trying to get it there.

She is circulating a petition she plans to present to both Mayor William Phelan and the City Council urging that the ball be moved back.

She has collected 61 names on the petition and is looking for more. Most of the names are those of present or former residents of Southwest Quincy where the city's famed granite industry once flourished.

Alba, who lives on Rodman Street, South Quincy, and comes from a family of granite stonecutters, says: "Those who have signed the petition feel as strongly as I do that the ball should be brought back to City Hall where it belongs."

The polished granite ball — six feet in diameter and weighing almost 11 tons — was presented to the city June 25, 1925 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy in 1625.

It was a gift to the city — the entire city, not one section — by the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association, whose members selected the spot where they wanted it to be: outside the city clerk's office at old City Hall.

But 12 years later, in 1937, the ball was moved from there to the Fore River traffic rotary officially dedicated as the Richard B. Wigglesworth Circle in honor of the late Congressman from Milton.

Politics may have had a hand in the move. Quincy was a Republican town back then and so was Wigglesworth.

It might have been a pretty good idea at the time, if visibility and not politics was the reason for the move.

But Route 3-A is no longer a major highway into the city. Much of the traffic is the same cars traveling back and forth over the bridge each day. To them the ball is old hat — if they even notice it.

Anyone in a car trying to get a good look at the ball is flirting with a bad accident going around the rotary or coming off the bridge.

You can't park and walk out to it for a close-up look unless you like to live dangerously dodging cars and trucks.

Children used to love seeing their reflections in the mirror-like "Gazing Ball," as it was known when it was at City Hall. But today's children are cheated of that fun. They can't get near the ball now.

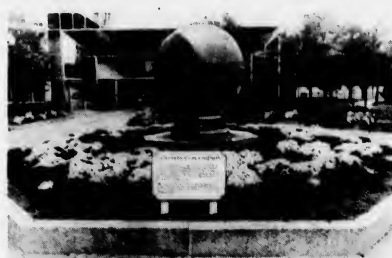

"The only way to get across the rotary to see it is to have a police officer stop the traffic," says Alba. "You could get killed trying to get across by yourself."

She's determined to see the ball back at City Hall "because it belongs there." There's also some personal family pride involved.

Her late father, Alessio DiBona, and her two late brothers, Attila and Aldo DiBona, were stonecutters. Her husband, Edmund, is a retired granite worker as was his late father, Anthony Tocchi.

That pride in her family's link to the world-famed Quincy granite industry, made her one of the spearheads in bringing about the Granite Workers Memorial Statue and the beautification of Shea Park on Copeland Street, dedicated in October, 1994 with Senator Edward Kennedy the keynote speaker.

At least two others who played major roles in that campaign — Stephen Cantelli, fifth-grade teacher at the Lincoln Hancock School, and Linda Montilio of Monti Granite — are with Alba in the campaign to bring

THIS IS HOW the granite ball would look on Constitution Common outside City Hall as created in this Quincy Sun composite photo. There it would be seen close-up by residents — especially children — and thousands of tourists, a crown jewel tribute to Quincy's famed granite industry and workers.

AND THIS IS how little motorists now see of the ball as they approach the Fore River bridge traffic rotary from North Weymouth. Three signs and traffic obscure the view. (Quincy Sun photos/Robert Noble) the ball back to City Hall.

So is Elmer (Mike) Fagerlund, retired city assessors chairman, who has long advocated its return. A former president of the Granite Manufacturers Association, he says:

"The ball is misplaced. It was a gift to the city from the Granite Manufacturers Association who designated City Hall as its location. Those wishes should be respected today."

Alba, meanwhile, is trying to get in touch with people who purchased memorial bricks placed around the Granite Workers Statue at Shea Park.

Most of them or their families have connections to the Quincy granite industry. Alba hopes they would be willing to sign her petition or write a supporting letter to her at: 15 Rodman St., Quincy.

A concert is being planned for this summer at Shea Park and says Alba: "We will have a table there to collect more signatures."

As Fagerlund puts it, the ball is "misplaced" at the Fore River rotary.

Quincy Point is not known for granite. It is known for ships.

We've said before: What would be much more appropriate at the rotary is a model of one of those great ships like the USS Quincy, the Massachusetts or the Lexington. Or, a large anchor or something else nautically appropriate.

A fitting tribute to Quincy Point's great shipbuilding past.

And the granite ball back at City Hall would be a fitting tribute to the city's great granite history.

It would be, as we have also said before, the crown jewel in Constitution Common where it would be seen close-up by thousands of tourists and visitors each year. And all year by residents. And children who could have the fun of seeing their reflection in it once again.

That's where whose who gave it to the city wanted it to be. And that's where it belongs.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1940's postcard view of the Picturesque Queen Anne style Winfield House restaurant at 853 Hancock Street in Wollaston. Situated on nearly three acres of land the house was built about 1880. It had been owned by a succession of prominent Quincy families when in 1937 Winfield and Lena Strout bought the property and moved their Rendezvous Cafe' here from Wollaston Center. Widely known and very popular the restaurant had been open for 50 years when Mrs. Strout closed it in 1987. For a while after that she ran a gift shop there and later the property was purchased by Eastern Nazarene College. Ambitious expansion plans, since abandoned by the college, led to the demolition of this Quincy landmark in the 1990's. Later plans to build a hotel on this site have also been abandoned and the property is once again for sale.

Quincy Kids Deserve Good Schools

Virginia Byrnes' letter last week made some salient points but it mistakenly asserts that Quincy has a reputation for having a weak school system.

Baloney. I've spent my entire career here, and I'd say that Quincy has a reputation for having a better school system than it is willing to pay for; one could say it's a system that is better for the kids of Quincy than the adults of Quincy deserve.

Quincy's had small class sizes, the glory of the school system, and a factor teachers readily admire. But those classes were in crumbling buildings that were only now being updated. And the classes were staffed by underpaid (compared to neighboring school districts) teachers, causing, as Ms. Byrnes points out, an exodus to towns actually willing to pay for good schools.

With the layoffs in the Phelan budget, our only point of attraction for teachers (and parents, I might add) small class sizes, is being gutted.

Ms. Byrnes rightly points out the irony here, National Teacher Week brings Quincy layoffs. There are others. A Sterling Middle School teacher wins a state award and is laid off in the same week. And, of course, the much higher property tax bills come out (I got mine!)

and then the Mayor's budget does the one thing that guts property tax values. I can't even say it's penny wise; but it's surely pound foolish.

But the fact is, Ms. Byrnes, and Quincy residents, that we have wonderful schools. Enjoy them for their last month or so. The kids deserve good schools. It seems Quincy's pots don't.

Work Together On Getting Through This Together

As someone who chose to call Quincy home back in 1984, as someone who is now a Quincy Public Schools parent and as someone who works part-time inside the city's public school classrooms as a substitute teacher, I know the City of Quincy has found itself recently in dire straits thanks in part to a former mayor who ran out of time before certain bookkeeping problems were seemingly straightened out. However, when I hear our new mayor talking about draconian cuts inside the school budget, it reminds me of the pacification program the American military used back in Vietnam. Saving a village by destroying it.

Yes, I know that the school budget makes up half the city's budget but some of the cuts I've heard are horrendous. Quincy is a livable city because it offers good quality of life services for its families. Among those quality of life services high on my list is a public school system that educates our children, the city's future.

Dumping 117 teachers. Creating bigger classes. Ending school bands at elementary schools. Ending world languages at middle schools. Dropping ROTC for our high school students. These are cuts that will demean the value we place on public education, and on our children's hopes and dreams.

The pots appear caught between a rock and a hard place. The City Council know has the mayor's budget in their hands. The school committee proposed a number of godawful cuts in services.

These are not good times. The state has its own budget crisis. State aid to schools is being slashed. Speaker Tom Finneran on the state level. Mayor Phelan here. The City Council. The School Committee. Parents. Taxpayers. Citizens. Cuts will come but let us be careful not to destroy all that is good in public education and drive families away to other communities that place a much higher value on public education. Don't go to the schools as a first option. Make it the last.

Offer parents some hope that even in bad economic times, we as a community understand that the foundation of society is in education. Our children's futures are being mortgaged to pay yesterday's unpaid bills.

Now is the time for our elected officials to work with the residents, taxpayers, parents, and yes, the children. Offer us some hope that our values remain high. Work together on getting through this together.

Butler's Pond Debate Continues

By PAUL HAROLD

The debate on the future of Butler's Pond continued this week as PTA leaders urged that the city take the pond and fill it for playground use by students at Central Junior High School.

Neighbors, however, led by Elmer Fagerlund, favored a city taking, but for the purpose of maintaining the pond in its natural state. The pond was privately owned.

The issue remained unresolved with school committee members and city councillors lined up on opposite sides.

DYNAMITE LICENSE ISSUED FOR W. QUINCY

Following an extensive debate by the city council for two public hearings conducted by the licensing board, the board voted unanimously to grant a dynamite license to James Shea for use in the quarry district off Willard St.

Shea, an agent for the Hercules Powder Company, had to relocate from Ames St. because the construction of the Southeast Expressway. Board Chairman Chief Thomas Gorman noted that the license had severe restrictions on it, including prohibition of transporting dynamite to Swingle's Quarry via Grove St.

CRONIN PROTEST DISCONTINUANCE OF ADAMS STAMPS

Secretary of State Edward Cronin protested to postal officials the continuance of the 1938 series two-cent John Adams stamp and the six-cent John Quincy Adams stamp.

He said that in these troubled times in the nation and the world we needed reminders of the Adams legacy of courage and love of freedom. The ending of the stamps he said helped hide the Adams' role in the history of the republic.

The Adams stamps were replaced with ones honoring Presidents Thomas Jefferson and Theodore Roosevelt.

Laura's Pretzel Surprise

If you think you have tasted or heard of every salad combination in the book, here is one for you...my friend Laura gave me this while on our recent trip to Florida. It's made with pretzels, but it's not a tossed type of salad, but a combo of things...anyway that's what the recipe is called and it's quite good, especially if you like pretzels.

Pretzel Salad

- 1 cup crushed pretzels
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 stick unsalted butter

Cream butter and mix with the sugar until smooth, add the pretzels and mix until well blended. In a slightly greased baking dish, press down making a crust and then chill while you make the filling.

Filling

- 8 ounces cream cheese
- 1 small container Cool Whip
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 can crushed pineapple, reserve juice
- 2 teaspoons corn starch

Mix the cream cheese, the sugar, corn starch and pineapple juice, and cook until smooth. When cooled, place on top of crust, and then add the pineapple and Cool Whip. Chill until jelled before serving.

There'll be "Cruizin' at the Cruiser" Sunday, May 29 (Memorial Day weekend), when the U. S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum sponsors a car show, rallye and barbecue at the USS Salem.

The event, a fundraiser for the non-profit Salem, starts at 9 a.m. and includes car show, a road rallye, an awards ceremony, a tour of the ship and a windup barbecue on the fantail of the Salem.

Cost of the barbecue, sponsored by the Outback Steakhouse, is $5 per person with advanced registration and $8 the day of the event. Registration for the rallye is $30 per car.

Some 50 cars, some from as far away as Ohio and Delaware, have been registered for the road rallye, which will take the motorists through Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate.

At certain intersections, drivers in three classes --- mild, wild and stock --- will be asked questions. Prizes will be awarded for most correct and timely answers.

The rallye will take two hours with time taken to ask and answer 20 questions and have a snack along the way.

The awards ceremony will take place on the USS Salem followed by the barbecue. Tours of the ship will also be available. The rain date is Monday, May 27.

'Gavin's Way' Winds Up Church Film Series Season

"Gavin's Way," a film that is described by its author as "anti-dating," will be the final presentation of the South Shore Independent Film Series season Thursday, May 23, at 7 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St.

Admission is $5.

D. R. Farquharson, the Winchester man, now a Salem resident, who wrote and directed the film, will be present at the screening.

The Gavins are a close-knit Irish family with three 20-something cousins at a crossroads in their lives and relationships.

Eric is a highly unmotivated salesman who is dumped by his English-major girl friend; Nic is a wise-cracking mechanic who can't commit; and Ralph, a recent mortician school grad, comes out by bringing his boy friend home.

"I don't see it as a romantic comedy," said Farquharson. "I see it more as an anti-dating movie."

Suggests Other Budget Cuts

Taxpayers' Group Praises Phelan

Alan H. Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association this week praised Mayor William Phelan and his staff for producing what he called a far clearer municipal budget than the city has had in years past.

But he also noted areas where cuts are still possible, and raised questions on a few specific items.

"We were very surprised to see that the mayor budgeted $200,000 for Social Security contributions for seasonal and temporary workers," Cousin said. "We brought this up months ago as a way the city could save $200,000 a year — by adopting a deferred compensation program that is actually required by state law."

"Employees would lose nothing by adopting this plan, and the language in the budget actually acknowledges that this option is available and would save the city $200,000 a year. So why isn't the city doing it?"

Cousin also noted that the budget for celebrations had been cut 5 percent from last year, from $100,000 to $95,000, but said that further cuts are possible.

"Sixty thousand dollars of that budget is for miscellaneous events and refreshments. We suggest that the City Council cut everything but the Flag Day and Christmas parades, leaving a celebration line item of only $35,000. In tough budgetary times, the taxpayers can't be paying for parties."

Cousin also recommended a few small cuts, such as the $700 each for the Mayor's Commission on Disability and on the Status of Women.

"These commissions don't actually accomplish anything," Cousin said.

He also suggested eliminating $94,326 for the Recreation Department's cerebral palsy, winter handicapped, boating and canoeing, and winter recreational pool programs, $8,000 from the Recreation Department's special needs transportation line, and an additional $1,100 in transportation costs to the Recreation Department.

The Parks Department's beautification program could also be cut, Cousin said, from $7,000 to $3,500 or $5,000. He suggested the implementation of user fees for the Fore River Clubhouse and the meeting rooms at the Thomas Crane Public Library, and said the city should find a way to stop paying the $111,700 property tax bill for the Furnace Brook Golf Course.

Cousin also questioned some items in the budget that are still unclear. In three departments — police, traffic and public works — there were a total of $650,784 in negative line items in the departments' personal services budgets, apparently representing cut or frozen positions.

"Boh Haley (QTA vice president and research director) tells me he's never seen that in 18 years of municipal budgeting," Cousin said. "Why weren't those positions just left out of the budget in the first place?"

Although the budget contains a lot of explanation for various programs and line items, he said, the police and fire department offered very little explanation for their budgets, and there was an explanation for the current expenses in the Emergency Management Department.

"We think the mayor and his staff had their work cut out of them for their just getting city departments to use the new budget forms," Cousin said, "but it almost looks like once they were submitted, no one looked at them. Not only is there a lot of explanation missing, but some of what is there is pretty sloppy."

"We will take a closer look at this budget and compare it more closely with previous years," Cousin said. "When we're done, we hope to be able to offer more insight. But I want to stress that the mayor has made an excellent start at moving the city in the right direction. We think the shortcomings in this year's budget simply underscore the need for a permanent fulltime finance director for this city."

Mosquito Control To Begin June 3

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that early morning application of the pesticide Resmethrin for the control of nuisance and/or disease-carrying adult mosquitoes is scheduled to begin during the week of June 3 and will continue (weather permitting) until Sept. 15.

Applications in Quincy will be made on Thursday mornings, weather permitting. Not all areas of the city will be entirely treated on a given date. Attempts will be made to treat as large an area as is deemed necessary and a weather permits.

The fogging operations will occur between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m., only if mosquito populations warrant an application. If inclement weather occurs (i.e., high winds, rain or low temperatures) or equipment fails the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

Resmethrin is used due to its compatibility with the environment, very low toxicity to mammals, low irritation levels and the fact it does not harm other wildlife. It is applied in ultra-low volume sprayers at the rate of one half ounce per acre of finished spray.

For further information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project via telephone at 781-762-3681, Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Residents may also call the Project's main telephone line 781-762-3681 after 3:30 p.m. Wednesdays to hear a recorded message detailing the streets/areas to be treated in the city Thursday morning.

New Name: The Holy Ground

1600 Restaurant Changes Hands After 30 Years

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After more than 30 years, the Colonial 1600 Restaurant, 1600 Hancock St., will have new owners, and a new name which was granted Tuesday by the License Board.

The board granted a common victualer all alcoholic license and then granted a cabaret license subject to a 90-day review.

The new owners are Diane Hill and Jerry Hanley, who also own Patty Barry's. The 156 seat restaurant will now be called The Holy Ground.

According to Atty. James Murray, the restaurant, which will be open next month will be a family style moderately priced eatery with low key Irish music playing in the background. On weekends, there will be entertainment after 9 p.m.

Murray said the owners have "confidence in downtown Quincy; and want to create an atmosphere." In addition to serving lunch and dinner, they also plan to serve breakfast on weekends.

Marilyn Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said she told the new owners, that there weren't many places in Quincy Center that you can get breakfast seven days a week.

Murray said the owners plan to serve breakfast on weekends to start with, and then extend it to seven days if there is a need.

Atty. Carl Johnson, representing the former owners, Vicky and Charlie Kakaris told the board that the restaurant which was formerly Murphy's has always had "excellent reputation."

Chairman Joseph Shea commended the former owners on their "responsible service, especially in the serving of alcohol."

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, liquor inspector and license board agent, suggested that the new owners hire a doorman on weekends, and said he wanted the option to have a police detail if needed.

Hanley said he supports the idea of a doorman, a tradition he has from Patty Barry's.

Perchard said last call for drinks would be 12:40 a.m. and everyone off the premises by 1:30 a.m.

On weekends, for breakfast the hours are from 7 to 11 a.m.

May Fest Saturday At Covenant Church

A May Fest will be held Saturday at the Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St.

The family oriented event in the parking lot will include a free car wash, children's activities, a bake sale, a yard sale and food from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Rain date is Saturday, May 25. Proceeds will help support the ministries of the church. For more information, call the church office at 617-479-5728.

SPRING CAR CARE

Warm Weather Drivers Have New Challenges

You've survived winter's ice-covered roads and frigid temperatures, but spring and summer bring unique driving challenges.

To help motorists handle the primary seasons of auto-travel, AAA Southern New England offers the following information:

Flooded Roads

The heavy rains of spring and summer can quickly lead to dangerous flood conditions. AAA offers the following tips for motorists dealing with such conditions.

- Check traffic reports for the location of flooded roads.
- Approach standing water with extreme caution. Do not attempt to drive through deep water or on bridges and roads that are heavily flooded.

- Even if you are confident that your car can make it through the flooded area, it is still possible that water could be forced into your engine compartment, damaging or destroying your engine.
- If there is a risk of flash flood, avoid traveling on roads that run along streams or drainage ditches.

Pothole Blues

With spring comes baseball, flowers, and potholes. A direct hit to a pothole can cause vehicle alignment to be thrown off and can damage steering components, tires and wheels. To prevent or minimize damage from potholes:

- Drive slowly on pothole-filled roads.
- If there is sufficient time and space, maneuver around the pothole but do not swerve wildly.
- Slow down as you approach a pothole, but when directly over the hole, do not brake. Applying the brakes causes the car's weight to shift to the front wheels and can increase damage from the impact.

- When driving on pothole-filled roads, hold the steering wheel firmly to avoid losing control.
- Be aware that a puddle could be a pothole in disguise.

Construction Safety

Warmer weather signals the start of many road construction projects. To safely navigate through construction zones:

- Slow to a safe speed, which is usually posted through the construction area.
- Obey all signs and signals.
- Watch for pedestrians and work vehicles.

- Change lanes with caution.

Heat Dangers

Under extreme heat, the temperature inside a parked car can reach more than 190 degrees in just 30 minutes. When dealing with such dangerously high temperatures:

- Don't leave children or animals unattended in a car, not even for a short period of time.
- When parked, use a sun shield to cover the windshield to minimize heat build-up and to help protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on seat belts and child safety seats to prevent burns.
- Open the vehicle's doors and let the interior cool off for a few minutes before entering.

Oil Beats The Heat

Motor oil does more than lubricate an engine's moving parts. It also plays a significant role in helping beat the summer heat. As oil coats hot engine parts, it absorbs heat caused by friction and combustion. When the oil drains to the bottom of the engine, the heat is dissipated by air flowing under the car. Maintaining a proper level of fresh oil is essential to protect a car's vital components.

Don't Get Burned By Summer Heat

AAA reminds motorists that summer weather can cause temperatures inside a parked vehicle to reach levels that can be dangerous or even fatal, especially to children and pets.

"Temperatures inside a parked car can quickly soar to near 200 degrees," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Don't leave children or animals unattended in a car, not even for a short time."

Before entering a vehicle that has parked in high temperatures, AAA says motorists should open the vehicle's door and let the interior cool for a few minutes. A sun shield can be used to cover the windshield to minimize heat build-up and to help protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on safety belts and child safety seats to prevent burns.

Some motorists opt to leave a window partially open to keep your vehicle cool. This may be appropriate in some circumstances, but it would make your vehicle "hot" by being an easy target for car thieves.

A properly working air conditioning system also will help keep motorists keep their cool in summer heat.

Proposes Satellite Probate Courts Mark Tobin Candidate For Register Of Probate

Mark Tobin, citing nearly 20 years experience in the trial court system, this week officially announced his candidacy for Norfolk Register of Probate.

Tobin, a Quincy resident and a Democrat, pledged to "make Norfolk Probate and Family Court the people's court" and outlined ideas and reforms to make the court more convenient and accessible.

Tobin proposed creation of four probate satellite courts, utilizing existing courthouses in Quincy, Brookline, Stoughton and Wrentham so residents would not have to travel up to 40 miles round trip to reach the present probate court in Dedham.

"People from the 28 communities of Norfolk County must now travel great distances to reach our old, unhealthy and overcrowded probate court building in Dedham," said Tobin, who for the past four years has served as assistant clerk magistrate in juvenile court.

"The Dedham court is inadequate, hard to get to and unsafe and once you're there, it's hard to find parking."

Tobin said that by using existing courtrooms in Quincy, Brookline, Stoughton and Wrentham regular periodic hearing could be held in places much more convenient for the majority of Norfolk County residents.

"We should bring the court to the people," Tobin said. "Those traveling to the court under the most stressful of personal conditions could save a lot of aggravation, and up to two hours commuting time at rush hour."

Tobin said that someday almost everyone will need to use the probate and family court.

"The court is where estates are probated, wills are filed, divorces and support payments are decided, guardians and trustees are appointed, and child support and visitation rights are determined," said Tobin.

"It is also where abuse petitions are heard in cases of spousal abuse, where paternity is established and adoptions are finalized, and where equity and many other matters are worked out.

"People seeking justice deserve convenient service and easy access to the court. I will fight for funding for more modern facilities, and to upgrade the existing courthouse, which is inadequate and unsafe for those who visit and those who work there."

Tobin said he will emphasize more convenient service to the public, publish more information on-line, and permit citizens and their attorneys to file documents at the four satellite locations as well as in Dedham.

In addition to his year in juvenile court, Tobin served for 14 years as head administrative assistant to the Norfolk County Register of Probate where he said he made the court more accessible and responsive to the needs of the public.

Tobin and his wife, Wendy, are parents of five sons. A graduate of the University of Massachusetts and St. John's Preparatory School, he is a member of the Democratic City Committee, the Adams Shore Association and the Massachusetts Trial Court Clerk Magistrates Association.

He also coaches in Quincy Babe Ruth League and Quincy Junior League, as well as the Quincy 12-year-old travel team. And with his sons, he is active in youth baseball, hockey, soccer and football programs in the city.

Venancio Hernandez Joins Army In Delayed Program

Venancio Hernandez has joined the U. S. Army under the delayed entry program under which he may delay entering active duty for up to one year.

He is the son of Iris Colon of 40 Butler Rd., Quincy, and Venancio Hernandez of Isabela, Puerto Rico.

He will have the opportunity to learn a new skill and become eligible to receive as much as $50,000 toward a college education.

Hernandez, a 2000 graduate of Francisco Mendoza High School in Isabela, will report to Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga., for basic training.

Conway Offers Complimentary Home Warranty Protection On All New Listings

As part of its 45th anniversary celebration, Jack Conway & Co. is offering sellers extra peace of mind by protecting their homes with a complimentary home warranty.

The warranty, which is offered at no cost to the seller during the time the home is on the market, typically covers items such as heating, plumbing systems, electrical, kitchen appliances, and hot-water heaters from breakdown due to normal wear and tear. HomeTrust exclusively offers one warranty price for unlimited square footage and multiple systems in the home.

"Every new home we list will have this protection in place," said company

President Richard Cahill. "Selling a home can be a very stressful experience, and having a warranty gives the owner the confidence that many of the unexpected breakdowns on covered items will be taken care of quickly and easily."

This type of coverage, offered through HomeTrust Warranty, is not an insurance policy and does not cover structural components such as the home's foundation or roof, Cahill said.

Sellers have the option of continuing the coverage on the home for the new owner for a year following the closing. This allows the home to be advertised with the benefit of a warranty, which could result in a faster sale.

Cahill said that in a Gallup poll, 79 percent of both buyers and sellers rated home warranties as one of the most important considerations, along with location, design, and financing options. The same poll revealed that warranties help sell a home up to 15 percent faster and at a 2.2 percent higher selling price.

"We're very happy to be able to offer this for our buyers and sellers," said Chairman Jack Conway. "The HomeTrust Warranty program is an excellent value for sellers and for buyers."

For more information about Conway's Home Warranty program, contact Jill Evans at Conway At Your Service, 800-848-1388, ext. 346.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest privately owned real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 40 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. Last year, the company was ranked among the top 100 real estate organizations in the U.S. by REALTOR Magazine, the official publication of the 750,000-member National Association of Realtors.

Neglecting Carpet Care Creates Instant Problems

By WERNER BRAUN
For News USA

(NU) — Over the last few years, there have been numerous misconceptions about mold, mildew and the role that carpet plays in it all.

The truth of the matter is that mold and mildew exist only where there is excess moisture and dirt coupled with poor cleaning and maintenance habits. Keeping carpets clean and dry is important in a healthy home.

Mold growth can occur on any surface — from windowpanes to carpet to hardwood floors — that is not properly maintained and where moisture is extreme. Eliminating sources of excessive moisture, such as water leaks, and controlling humidity greatly offset the potential for mold to grow.

To this end, a good way to start your war on allergens is by vacuuming. Heavy traffic areas should be vacuumed on a daily basis, while light to medium traffic areas need only be vacuumed once or twice weekly. Doing so will extend the life span of the carpet and keep its appearance fresh while improving the quality of air in your home or office.

While regular vacuuming will go a long way to ensuring that you are living or working in a clean environment, it is only part of a good cleaning regimen. By following a few other tips, your home or office could be mold- and mildew-free. Here are some ideas:

- Pull on those rubber gloves and be prepared to get tough on mold. When cleaning mold on hard surfaces, use a solution of one part household bleach to four parts water. Open windows while you work and wear a mask or filtered respirator.

- Clean and disinfect wet, warm areas — such as kitchen and bathrooms — weekly to stop mold growth.

- Smooth floors should be vacuumed, dusted and wet-mopped weekly. When sweeping, take care not to circulate dust from the floor into the air.

- Vacuum upholstered furniture regularly and clean hard furniture with a damp cloth. A damp cloth should be used on window treatments, window sills and window frames, ceiling fans, light fixtures and storage units as well.

- Check your vacuum. The Carpet and Rug Institute has initiated a voluntary testing program that identifies vacuum cleaners that have been evaluated by an independent testing lab and have met the carpet industry standard for soil removal, dust containment and carpet appearance.

Werner Braun is president of the Georgia-based Carpet and Rug Institute. For more information on carpet care and cleaning, visit www.carpet-rug.com.

Quincy Residents Attend 'Seminar In The Sun'

Quincy's Richard Cahill, president of Jack Conway & Co., and his wife, Carol Cahill, a sales agent in the company's Wollaston office, recently returned from an all-expenses paid trip to Key West as part of the firm's "Seminar in the Sun" incentive program.

Each year, the company hosts an educational seminar in a tropical location for its top-producing sales agents and managers. More than 70 sales agents and guests traveled on this year's trip, which featured five days of sightseeing and shopping, as well as sales-training courses and workshops on financing and zoning codes.

The group stayed at the Wyndham Casa Marina Resort in Key West.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 40 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

The Latest In Lawn And Garden Gadgets

Yard Care Experts Round Up New Products To Get Your Lawn Geared Up

(NAPS) — Now may be the perfect time to challenge your neighbors for "best yard on the block" honors. Lawn expert Lance Walheim has a few recommendations that will put you on the cutting edge.

Walheim, author of Lawn Care For Dummies and Landscaping for Dummies, has spent hours pushing, pulling and prodding dozens of the newest lawn-and-garden gadgets. To get you in shape for the gardening season, here are his top product picks.

Start Me Up

Those pesky, cold engine starts — having to pull the starter cord on your mower over and over — is Walheim's most commonly heard complaint about lawnmowers.

Now, through an innovation from the folks at MTD Products and Briggs & Stratton, your first pull-start of the season could be your last. The Yard-Man Self-Starter series of mowers virtually eliminates the starting hassle. After the first pull-start, simply push a button and hold down the safety bail. The mower will restart up to 10,000 times without any additional effort.

"The Self-Starter is one of the biggest industry innovations since the introduction of gas-powered mowers," Walheim said. "With the Self-Starter, everyone's biggest problem is now solved in the first start of the season."

Trim, Edge Or Prune In A Click

Engineers from Ryobi have taken the concept of the Swiss Army knife, added a little power and expanded it to cover the whole back yard. With the TrimmerPlus system, you can perform dozens of chores by simply changing up to eight attachments, all from one basic string trimmer.

After using the string trimmer to control weeds before mowing your lawn, simply connect the edger attachment to give your yard that finished look. The blower or blower/vac attachment can then remove all debris quickly. Other TrimmerPlus attachments include a tree pruner, hedge trimmer and even a cultivator. Attachments simply click into place in second, with no tools required.

"The versatility, not to mention convenience, of TrimmerPlus makes it a must-have tool," Walheim said. "With TrimmerPlus, you can be edging your lawn and in a few seconds and a quick click, be pruning trees, trimming hedges or cultivating flower beds. TrimmerPlus is an 'eight-jobs-in-one-tool' piece of power equipment."

Let It Ride

Historically, farmers used lawn and garden tractors to work tracts of grassy farmland. As many of these rolling meadows have given way to suburban yards, technological advancements have transformed these hard-working tractors into affordable consumer units packed with industrial-strength innovations.

Cub Cadet's new 1515 tractor is one of these workhouses. Designed to give suburban homeowners a premium tractor that is durable yet comfortable, the 1515 has many of the features of Cub Cadet's larger units.

"The new 1515 boasts a premium Kohler engine and an exclusive heavy-duty transmission. These features give the 1515 a smoother ride, more power and a car-like driving feel," Walheim said. "The on-board cup holder, deluxe seat and soft-touch steering wheel also means you'll be cutting in comfort."

Step Up To Serious Gardening

For serious gardeners who want big results from even the smallest area, the compact Troy-Bilt Super Bronco tiller busts sod, prepares seed-beds and performs light landscaping chores with ease. The Super Bronco's cast iron and bronze gear driven transmission provides durability and heavy-duty performance for a lifetime of gardening. Patented JUST ONE HAND design lets you guide the tiller with literally one hand.

"Serious gardeners will appreciate the Super Bronco's 16" tilling width. It fits beautifully between rows for easy, season-long cultivating and the power reverse feature can quickly back you out of tight spots," Walheim said.

All of Walheim's top product picks have Websites. For more information, visit: www.cubcadet.com; www.yardman.com; www.troybilt.com or www.trimmerplus.com.

One Win And They're In For North Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

Not only did senior Neal Gavin's two-run, game-winning single last Wednesday lift the North Quincy High baseball team past Taunton, it turns out the win also prevented a three-game losing skid.

The Red Raiders began last week with a 10-1 setback to Old Colony League power Marshfield and followed their come-from-behind thriller with a 4-1 loss to Falmouth last Thursday at Adams Field.

"That turned out to be a big game for us," said head coach Larry Taglieri of the Taunton victory. "You can't go 0-3 in a week."

North Quincy (9-5 overall, 6-3 OCL) needs one win this week to clinch a berth in the state tournament for the sixth time in seven years.

It traveled to Barnstable yesterday (Wednesday) and today (Thursday) it makes up Monday's game at Bridgewater-Raynham at 4 p.m. and tomorrow afternoon it returns home to take on Plymouth South at 4.

"We need one more to get into the tournament and we're holding out hopes for a home tournament game," Taglieri said. "We're trying to play for the highest seed we can."

In the Falmouth game, Mike Feetham turned in a gutsy pitching performance. The senior right-hander went the distance, allowing three runs on six hits, walking five and striking out six.

"We just didn't hit," explained Taglieri, who watched his team collect just four hits.

Trailing 4-0, the Red Raiders produced their only run in the fifth inning. Senior third baseman Charles Vidoli drew a one-out walk and scored on senior left fielder Pat Bregoli's double.

In the Taunton game, North Quincy grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second when senior Mark Maher scored on an errant pickoff attempt. The Tigers pushed across a pair of runs in the bottom half or a 2-1 lead.

In the fifth, the Red Raiders reclaimed the lead. After Bregoli and senior center fielder Wayne Moynihan reached on errors, Feetham stroked a single to center to score Bregoli and Moynihan took third when the fielder bobbled the ball. Senior John O'Connell (2 for 3) followed with a sacrifice fly for a 3-2 lead.

Once again, the Tigers answered with a pair of runs in the bottom half to seize a 4-3 lead.

After a silent sixth inning, North Quincy roared back in the seventh. Moynihan led off with a single. After one out, O'Connell singled to center and again the fielder bobbled the ball, allowing both runners to move into scoring position to set up Gavin's heroics.

In the bottom half, junior pitcher Dom Delgado allowed the Tigers' leadoff man to reach and he moved to second on a groundout. With the tying run in scoring position, Taglieri summoned O'Connell who fanned the next batters for the save.

Delgado earned the victory, his first on varsity, with 11.3 scoreless innings in relief. Senior Steve Pizzi started the game and gave up three earned runs in five innings.

Leaps 7 Feet At Coaches Invitational Meet

Quincy's Morisset Sets High Jump Mark

By CHRIS POISSON

Jean Washington Morisset of Quincy High School reached the magic mark of high jumpers at last Saturday's 28th annual Coaches Invitational in Lowell.

The junior sensation leaped an incredible 7 feet, easily winning the competition by eight inches, while also breaking the track meet record he set last year.

Morisset, who jumped 6-10 1/2 in a meet last Thursday at Dennis-Yarmouth, cleared 6-6 on his first jump and 6-10 on his second. On his third jump, he reached the 7-foot plateau on his second attempt. He missed his attempts at 7-2.

"The crowd went ballistic," said head coach Scott King of the record-breaking jump. "They went crazy. He signed autographs for some kids after the meet. It was a lot of fun. He did a great job."

"It felt good," Morisset said. "It was a nice day and I knew I was going to be able to jump 7 feet. And I tried for 7-2 and missed it. I think I was tired a little bit."

According to King, the only other kid in the state to clear 7 feet was Mel Gonzalez in 1981. He also believes Morisset ranks in the top 10 in the country as the highest jump this year is 7-4.

"The season is still early," King said. "There are still four meets to go. As a coach, I believe this is the start of great things for this kid. I think he'll jump 7-2 by the end of the year. I really do. I think he's the best jumper on the east coast. The other kids that have jumped 7-2 are in Texas and in California."

Morisset will participate in the South Shore Invitational Saturday, the Class B State Meet, the All-States and the New England championships.

Morisset's career has been climbing sky-high ever since he first took up the sport as a freshman. During his first year, he jumped 6-4 and won the Old Colony League and Freshman/Sophomore championships, placed second at the Class B State Meet and sixth at the Coaches Invitational.

Last season, Morisset jumped 6-9 twice and won the New England Championships, the Freshman/Sophomore Invitational, the Coaches Invitational, the OCL Championships and the Class B State Meet. He placed second at All-States.

Another President also turned in an impressive performance at the Coaches Invitational but his outing was overshadowed by Morisset. Senior Mike Lorenzano placed fourth in the javelin (170 feet). "To place fourth is quite an accomplishment," King said.

FILLED TO CAPACITY

Before heading off with the family to your favorite summer vacation spot, check your vehicle owner's manual for the maximum load capacity. Vehicle owners sometimes wrongly assume that a vehicle is designed to handle all the stuff they can pack into it. The fact is, though, that some vehicles have a large cargo area that is not matched by its relatively low carrying capacity (the maximum combined weight of people and cargo that the vehicle is designed to handle safely). Overloading a vehicle can compromise safety by degrading its handling, stressing its brakes, and possibly overheating its tires (increasing the risk of failure). Moreover, loading any vehicle raises its center of gravity, especially if the roof rack is utilized.

Is your car ready for that summer vacation trip? If you have any questions about anything else related to your car, don't hesitate to ask any questions when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri, 6am-9pm, Sat, 7am-9pm, Sun, 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: If you are going to use your vehicle to tow a boat or camper, check the severe service recommendations in your owner's manual.

Quincy Can Lock Up Tourney Spot With Win

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High softball team thought it would be playing Monday afternoon at Dennis-Yarmouth with a chance to lock up a spot in the state tournament.

Mother Nature intervened, however, and the Presidents (9-5 overall, 5-3 ACL) had to wait until last night (Wednesday) for a shot at win No. 10 when they traveled to Sandwich (2-10). Today (Thursday) they make up the game at D-Y (1-13) and tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 they return home to battle Randolph (10-4).

The real question, though, is not when will Quincy make the tournament but how will it fare in the postseason party. It received a good test last week and will receive another one with three straight games against tourney-bound teams beginning tomorrow.

"I really wanted to play this game," head coach Mike Sedar said Monday afternoon after the D-Y game was postponed. "We have nine wins and we need one more with six games left. There are teams left that will let us gauge how we'll do in the tournament."

SOFTBALL

Last Friday Quincy blanked Nauset, 8-0, at Pagant Field, rebounding from a 6-0 road loss to league front-runner Whitman-Hanson last Wednesday and a 15-1 loss at Randolph last Tuesday.

In the Nauset game, the Presidents scored four runs in the first inning and that was more than enough support for sophomore pitcher Rachael Sorensen (5-5). The righty went the distance to record the shutout, allowing only four hits, walking no one and striking out five.

The dynamic infield duo of junior shortstop Shannon Paine and senior second baseman Michelle Pilalas continued their sharp defensive play as well as their torrid hitting.

Paine, third in the ACL in batting with a .475 average, paced a spread-out offensive attack with two hits, including a double, two RBI and three runs scored, while Pilalas, the league's leading hitter with a .537 average, added two more hits and scored two runs.

Junior center fielder Diane

Gilbody went 2 for 3 with a triple and two RBI and sophomore catcher Rose Bell contributed with a pair of hits.

"Nauset is a tough ball club so it was a good win for us," Sedar said. "It was the first game all year that we played from the first inning through the seventh inning. It was a good seven-inning game. We had good pitching, good defense and we hit the ball."

In the loss to Whitman-Hanson, the Presidents turned in a strong effort but for the second time this season they could not solve Panthers' ace Kristen de la Campa — and not many have. She has an 0.56 ERA with 172 strikeouts in 100 innings.

Quincy, which trailed just 1-0 after five innings, had its best chance to crack de la Campa in the second inning but could not push a run home after getting two men on base. Quincy managed four hits while striking out nine times.

"We played a real good game," Sedar said. "It's tough when you don't see too many pitchers like her on a consistent basis."

Triple A Baseball

Anthony Muise struck out 17 in a complete-game performance to lead Consumer Home Mortgage to a 7-3 win over Yellow Cab in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Triple A action at Mitchell Field.

Brian Joyce and Andrew Beaton each reached base three times and scored a run. Brian Kilcullen drew two walks, scored a run and added an insurance RBI. Catcher Roger Cufaude had another strong defensive game.

For Yellow Cab, William Flaherty struck out eight but CHM's patience yielded 12 walks. Flaherty added two hits at the plate and scored a run. Chris Mariano and Michael Medeiros had hits in the last inning and Anthony Pepdjonovich added a single and a double.

In other action:

CHM 11, C.C. Auto 10 — Michael Clark led off the bottom of the sixth with a triple and scored the winning run on an error as CHM survived a seven-run rally by C.C. Auto Body that began with two outs in the top of the sixth.

Clark went the distance and struck out 14 to pick up the win. Patrick O'Donovan (2-run single) and Justin Curtis sparked a five-run fifth inning. Tom Dow added an RBI single.

For C.C. Auto Body, Brendan Murphy had three hits, including a grand slam that tied the game in the sixth.

Stephen Mahony reached base four times and scored two runs.

Encompass 13, Flavin 11 — Cody Daniels picked up the win and also smacked a home run. Brian Repetto had a couple of hits and also made a great catch in the outfield. Steven Santana played a solid all-around game and made a beautiful defensive play at second base.

For Flavin & Flavin, Joe Theodore had two hits and a walk and Allen Rand threw out a runner at the plate. Jimmy Scribi turned in a strong game.

(A team was misidentified in last week's roundup. It should have read DARE 18, Flavin & Flavin 1)

Big Victory For North Quincy Over S-L

GIRLS' TRACK

The North Quincy High girls' track team's recent victory at Silver Lake may be the biggest of head coach Geoff Hennessy's 13-year career.

In the much anticipated meet, the Red Raiders (5-1) were able to deliver the Lakers their first loss of the season with an 81:12 to 54:12 win.

And if NQ defeated Marshfield Tuesday and Silver Lake topped Bridgewater-Raynham, there would be a three-way tie for first place among those teams. NQ's only loss was to B-R. The Red Raiders captured the Old Colony League meet in 2000, but they have never won the OCL outdoors championship in dual meets.

At last Saturday's State Coaches Invitational, Makini Thompson placed fourth in both the 100 hurdles (16.08, school record) and the triple jump (35'53/4").

Against Silver Lake, Thompson proved to be the biggest star of the day with wins in the 100 hurdles, triple jump and the 4x100 relay. April Rodgers won the 100 and 200 meters and Katy Mercurio took the high jump at 5'2", having no misses until she attempted 5'4".

After the first round of field events, the Lakers held a slim lead. Lauren Sleeth won the javelin, Erin McFarland placed second in the long jump, and Katie Morgan and Caitlin Herlihy took second and third in the shot-put.

NQ trailed by five (251/2 to 201/2) after Mercurio captured the high jump, with Krystle Neves placing third, and Paula Morgan finished second in the discus (PR 85'2").

And then NQ's triple jump crew put on a show. Thompson leaped 36'61/2" — the third best in the state to date — and Jen Venuti (33'10") and McFarland (33'8") completed a rare sweep.

Katie Timmins grabbed second in the mile and Laura Wells took the 300 hurdles to give the Red Raiders a precarious four-point lead.

With a slight injury to 800-meters ace Allie Lacey, NQ put its hope on the versatile McFarland who moved up from 400. The result was a run-away 2:38.8 victory. McFarland's win coupled with Rodgers' 100 win (PR 12.8) increased the lead to six.

Brenna O'Brien and Molly Griffin finished second and third in the 400. The 100 hurdles team of Thompson, Wells and Diana Berberan completed another rare sweep for a 14-point lead and some breathing room.

Rodgers sped to victory in the 200, and Timmins and Eileen Price finished first and third in the two mile to clinch the win.

Wear Protective Gear; Learn Good Techniques

Inline Skating Safety Tips

Inline skating is rapidly becoming very popular with every age group. With warmer weather, many people will resume skating, while others will begin skating for the first time.

A skating rink provides a safer environment for skating; however, people turn to paved paths and roads for skating each year.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' (BCBSMA) Prevention and Wellness program suggests these safety tips to reduce risk of injuries:

- Always wear protective gear: an ordinary bike helmet, wrist guards, elbow pads and kneepads. The helmet must fit securely on the head and the front of the helmet should rest just above the eyebrows. The helmet's side straps should meet under the ears and the chin strap must not be loose. A helmet worn on the back of the head, like a beanie, will not protect your head if you fall forward.

- If you've never been on skates before, get a lesson from a certified instructor.

- Learn good techniques so you can stay in control: 1) Skates should fit well. If the skates are too loose, you won't have the control you need; 2) Always check the wheel bolts before you skate to be sure they are secure; 3) Rotate wheels as recommended by the manufacturer; 4) Every few sessions make sure the brakes have not deteriorated.

- The basic body position for inline skating is with the knees and hips slightly bent and the arms held loosely in front of the body. To move forward, push gradually to the side with one foot. The feet are kept directly under the hips. To reduce speed and stop, slide the foot with heel brake slightly forward.

After the foot is slightly forward, raise the toe 1-2 inches while keeping the rear wheels and the brake on the ground. Apply pressure to heel brake by lowering the body as if you are trying to sit.

Never lean backward. Always lean a little forward.

And never completely straighten your legs. Learn now to fall in a controlled way.

Lean into the fall with your knees. Let your protective equipment help you with the impact. If your body position is correct, you won't fall very often.

- Pick a smooth level ground and a wide, paved area that is clear of cars.

These safety tips for skating were provided by Jonathan J. Scarlet, DPM, chief of podiatry at the Memorial Campus at UMass Medical Center. He also is the co-president of the Inline Club of Boston and a member of the National Skate Patrol. For more information visit the Inline Club of Boston Web site (www.icbkskates.org).

BCBSMA's Prevention and Wellness program started in January 1995 with a series of initiatives designed to promote preventative health care to the company's 2.4 million members.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHAT'S CHEWING AT YOU?

New research shows that chewing tobacco users are more likely to develop tooth decay (particularly on the root surfaces of their teeth) than those who do not use tobacco. The study offers a large-scale, detailed analysis of the relationship between dental decay and the leafy form of tobacco. It showed that men who use chewing tobacco exclusively were four times more likely than those who had never used tobacco to have one or more decayed or filled root surfaces. The high sugar content in chewing tobacco is one reason for the product being associated with an increased risk for tooth decay. Moreover, both chew and snuff contribute to gingival (gum) recession, making the roots more vulnerable to decay.

Whether you smoke cigarettes or use smokeless tobacco, isn't it time to quit? We emphasize brushing and flossing daily, along with regular oral checkups. We would like to stress the importance of regular dental checkups. Identification of the types of bacteria in the mouth may be the first step in diagnosing several diseases and ailments. If you would like more information or an appointment, call 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Earlier studies have linked spit tobacco in various forms to gingival recession, oral lesions, and oral cancer.

A funeral Mass for Mary A. Reardon, 89, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, a nationally known artist who designed murals for several cathedrals, was celebrated May 11 at St. Paul's Church, 147 North St., Hingham.

Miss Reardon died May 8 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Her work includes ceiling mosaics for the domed ceilings at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, DC, as well as a series of mosaics for the domed ceilings and walls of the St. Louis Cathedral in Missouri, a work which covers 9,000 square feet.

Her large "Chapel of Our Lady of Guadalupe," also at the National Shrine in Washington, DC, has become a popular place to visit for Latin American families.

A woman of faith, she wrote in 1984: "In the case of a building for religious purposes, my efforts have been to express the faith of centuries in the light of today, with its advancing science, and theological scholarship." She added, "It is written, 'We are all born to be saints.' It is the endeavor to carry out this mandate and promise which has, gently but compellingly, directed the aim with which I have tried to employ whatever talent I possess for the highest possible use... The religious commissions have been a labor of conviction, faith, and love."

cluded landscapes in water colors or oils, true fresco, illustrations for children's books, designs for stained glass windows, and portraits, including those of such figures as Cardinal Humberto Medeiros and Dr. William Harris of Massachusetts General Hospital.

Miss Reardon received the President's Medal at the International Exposition of Sacred Art in Trieste, Italy, in 1966 and exhibited in Italy for 10 years.

A retrospective of her 60-year career was presented by the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset in 2000.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all live in a changing world. Change is constant. Facts, figures, and circumstances can change from one moment to another. At times we feel fearful about the changes occurring to us... The earth and all it contains is in a state of constant growth and change. Perhaps changes are happening to those we know -- a loved one dies, another moves away, a friend begins a new job, new acquaintances enter our lives and bring about change.

God gives each of us a lifetime to resist or welcome changes. The lifetime varies, of course. Some grow old, some don't. The questions that will be asked eventually is, "What did you do with your lifetime?" Was it spent in good deeds or was it frittered away in foolish non-essentials: needs to be proud of or to be ashamed of? Should it not be realized that it is unimportant how long we live but what we did with the time given us -- changes in time and customs notwithstanding?...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You Ewes and Rams will find your ideas cheered by a mostly receptive flock. Those few dissenters could well be turned around by your charm and powers of persuasion.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's time for the bold and beautiful Bovine to shake off the dust of the past and shape up with new ideas for the future. This could surprise some folks, but they'll soon adjust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those nagging new doubts about an upcoming decision should alert you to step back (at least temporarily) so you can reassess its potential impact from a new perspective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That unpleasant situation you hoped would go away by itself needs immediate attention before it affects an upcoming decision. Expect your supporters to rally around your cause.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're moving up and away from that recent setback. But remain cautious about finances. An exercise in thrift today helps cushion a possible end-of-the-month money squeeze.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're still dealing with overtones of pessimism that cause you to doubt your ability to make some needed changes. But the negative pressures will ease up by week's end.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be some fallout from the way you handled a recent family problem. But those who know that you were in the right won't hesitate to step in on your behalf.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Financial strains ease by week's end. Meanwhile, focus on cultivating that new relationship if you want it to blossom into something more meaningful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Health matters once again dominate the week. Be careful not to ignore recurrences of an old problem. An almost-forgotten commitment resurfaces.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The emergence of an unusual selfish streak could diminish those close to you. Defy it — don't justify it — so you can become your gracious self again.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Reassess your decision to stay with the status quo. It might seem like the sensible thing to do right now, but changes around you could make that choice a risky one.

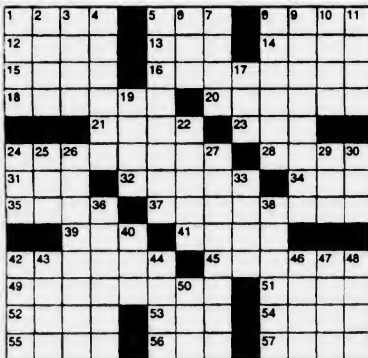

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Move decisively but cautiously when dealing with a delicate personal matter. The fewer mistakes you make now, the less likely it is that the problem will recur later on.

BORN THIS WEEK: You find beauty where many cannot. And you enjoy sharing your discovery with others.

Salem Will Stay At Shipyard

"That puts quite a feather in our cap," said Condon-Walsh, who said the ship averages 250 sleepovers per weekend and has even started Friday night program to accommodate the demand.

In addition to the overnight program, Condon-Walsh said, the Salem is beginning the third year of a partnership with the Quincy Public Schools in which William Anderson, a retired engineer and former Salem crewmember, teaches Physical Science to students using "hands-on" examples found aboard ship.

That program, which Condon-Walsh noted was at the ship's expense, has also seen an expansion from 1,200 middle school students to more than 2,000 students from Grades 7, 8, and 9.

Although a recent fundraiser event with the USS Salem Association raised $35,000, Condon-Walsh acknowledged that corporate donations to the museum ship have reduced substantially over the past year, attributing the decline to a downturn in the economy.

She also acknowledged that former Mayor James

Sheets, one of the ship's most ardent supporters in his capacity as chairman of the Board of the USS Salem — a position he still holds — has been less active in recent months.

However, she said, increased revenue from enhanced programs was helping to make up any loss in fundraising.

"The ship's support comes from the ship's activities and that's what we're trying to enhance," she said. Whether it's manning the ship's Radio Room to let eager scouts transmit messages all over the world, teaching Morse Code, or leading groups on tours throughout the Quincy-built cruiser, Condon-Walsh said the success of the ship was the result of its volunteers.

"They are absolutely terrific," she said. "They're the ones who bring the ship back to life."

New volunteers are always welcome, she said, be it "once a week, once a month, or once a year."

Finance Committee To Hold Meetings On FY 2003 Budget

The Finance Committee of the City Council has scheduled three departmental budget hearings to discuss Mayor William Phelan's proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2003.

The first departmental budget hearing will take place Saturday, May 18 beginning at 9 a.m. in council chambers. All departments -

- with the exceptions of Police, Fire, Public Works, and School Departments -- will be considered in alphabetical order.

The second departmental budget hearing will be held Saturday, June 8 at 9 a.m. and will consider the budgets of the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Fire Department, and Department of Public Works (DPW).

The third departmental budget hearing will be Saturday, June 15 at 9 a.m. and will consider the budget needs of the School Department.

Council approval is necessary for the mayor's budget for Fiscal Year 2003, which begins July 1. By law, the council can make cuts to a proposed budget but cannot add to it.

Councillor at-Large Timothy Cahill serves as chairman of the Finance Committee.

Making Their Pitch

THE FIVE DEMOCRATIC candidates for governor were on hand for the Quincy Democratic City Committee Pre-Convention Breakfast Sunday at the George F. Could Save Programs, Jobs

Phelan: $1.9M In New Funds Would Go To Schools

Mayor William Phelan announced Monday that, if new figures being proposed at the state level become a reality, he will increase funding to the School Department by approximately $1.9 million.

Citing a decrease in MBTA assessments to the city of roughly $435,000 and a projected $1.4 million increase in state aid to schools, Phelan said the new revenues could translate into the saving of "as many as 50 jobs" and that many programs projected for cuts would no longer be eliminated, including: ROTC, drama and music programs, historical society, consumer science, elementary lab, elementary security aides, and the newly funded literacy program which Phelan championed as a member of the School Committee.

Phelan cited the hard work of Quincy's state legislative delegation — Senator Michael Morrissey and State Representatives Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano, and Bruce Ayers — for making the level funding of state aid to schools a priority. Previously, Acting Governor Jane Swift had proposed a 10 percent reduction which would have resulted in an approximately $1.4 million reduction in state aid to Quincy.

Monday night's meeting of the City Council — which saw School Committee Vice Chairwoman Christine Cedrone and School Committee women Jo-Ann Bragg and Linda Stice testify before councillors on the urgent needs of the School Department, which is facing a roughly $7 million shortfall — included a successful joint resolve signed by eight of the nine councillors requesting that Phelan use the more than $250,000 in funds cut by councillors from Phelan's proposed budget to restore some of what the resolve termed "drastic" cuts in the FY 2003 School Bud-

City Expects 100 To Take Advantage Of New Package

Early Retirement Could Cut Layoffs

By CRAIG SALTERS

If enough municipal employees take advantage of an early retirement package recently authorized by the state, the city could be spared the necessity of layoffs for Fiscal Year 2003, which begins July 1.

Mayor William Phelan said the city estimates that about 100 employees will make use of the retirement incentive package, bringing the city significantly closer to its target of downsizing, either through attrition or layoffs, close to 200 city employees for the next fiscal year.

"I pray that the city doesn't have to lay off anyone," Phelan said. "I'm hoping that with this early retirement incentive, the necessity of laying folks off may become unnecessary."

The City Council voted unanimously to pass the measure locally at Monday night's meeting.

Phelan, whose recently submitted FY 2003 budget of $195.2 million reduces funding in many areas as the city attempts to address its financial crisis, said the enhanced retirement offer, although more costly in the long run, is a "win-win" situation because it rewards longtime employees while at the same time reducing the likelihood of layoffs.

"It's good news for the city," the mayor said. "I congratulate the City Council for taking swift action to implement this in a timely fashion."

According to Edward Masterson, executive director of the Quincy Retirement Board, the bill passed by the state allows eligible retirees to add a maximum of five years — be it to age, years of service, or a combination of both — when factoring their retirement pension. Under the state's guidelines, an eligible city employee must apply for retirement no later than Dec. 2 of 2002 and officially retire no later than Dec. 31 of 2002.

Although the state sets the maximum limits, Masterson said, it is the mayor who decides the parameters within the city and who has authority to reduce the number of bonus years offered, move up official deadlines, and limit the number of employees who can make use of the incentive package.

Masterson said he expected to meet with the mayor's office sometime this week to discuss specific guidelines, after which his

'A Vital Step Toward Safety And Prevention' Gutro To Host Roundtable On Bank Robberies Friday

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro will host a roundtable discussion between members of Quincy's banking community and the Quincy Police Department tomorrow (Friday) at 1 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall to update the banking community on robbery investigations and discuss preventative measures to safeguard Quincy banks.

"As chairman of the City Council Downtown and Economic Development Committee, I have an obligation to help ensure that Quincy's banks are safe for employees and customers alike," said Gutro, who noted that several banks have been robbed more than once in a short time period.

"This roundtable discussion is designed to allow the banking community an opportunity to express common concerns relative to this issue and to provide up to date information on pending cases as well as strategies to prevent or minimize future robberies in our city."

Gutro added: "Robberies and robbery attempts threaten the safety of bank employees and bank customers. Bank employees and the citizens of Quincy deserve to feel that they can work and bank safely in our city. Information sharing -- through avenues like this forum -- is a vital step toward safety and prevention."

The annual Quincy Memorial Day Parade and exercises will be held Monday, May 27, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Keynote speaker at the service following the parade will be Francis McMorrow, a retired first sergeant of the United States Army and current director of the Sheila McIntyre House-Quincy, a joint program of the Department of Veterans Services and the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition which assists homeless veterans at Father Bill's Place.

McMorrow, a 1967 graduate of Weymouth High School, enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1968 and served in the Signal Corps at the American Embassy in Paris, France during the Paris Peace Talks.

McMorrow then reenlisted in the U.S. Army Field Artillery and served in various stateside duty stations and three overseas tours, retiring as a first sergeant in May of 1992.

An Honor Graduate of the United States Army Field Artillery Advanced Leadership Academy, McMorrow's military awards include: Meritorious Service Medal 3rd Award; Army Commendation Medal 6th Award; Army Achievement Medal 3rd Award; Humanitarian Service Medal; Good Conduct Medal 7th Award; as well as numerous Letters of Commendation and Certificates of Achievement.

McMorrow served as a substance abuse clinician and advisor for the Massachusetts Parole Board and as a case manager for the New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans before becoming director of the Sheila McIntyre House-Quincy in October of 1997.

The parade will step off at School St. and proceed on Hancock St. to Coddington St. to Sea St. to Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The parade will rest at Quincy Square and wreaths will be placed on the tombs of John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

The parade marshal and honored guests will review the parade at Sea St. across from Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Memorial Day Services will be held from the World War II Podium, Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

More than 20 units will march in the parade including local veterans organizations, color guards, and high school bands. Gold Star Mothers, Boy Scouts, and Girl Scouts as well as national, state, county, and local officials will march.

Parade Marshal will be John Joyce, commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council. He will be assisted by Kenneth Menz, senior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, and Stephen Fowles, junior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

Parade Chairman is Thomas Stansbury, Quincy Veterans' Services Department and past commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council. Co-Chairman is Henry Bradley, past commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council and past state commander of the American Legion and director of Quincy Veterans' Services.

Irving Isaacson will serve as master of ceremonies.

Officer of the Day will be Thomas Eames, assisted by Kenneth Menz.

Memorial Day services will begin with an invocation by Robert LaFleur, chaplain of the Quincy Veterans Council. There will be greetings and remarks by Commander Joyce as well as Mayor William Phelan and City Council President Daniel Raymond.

General Logan's Order will be given by Stephen Fowles, Jr. Vice Commander, QVC. The Gettysburg Address will be given by Kenneth Menz, Sr. Vice Commander, QVC.

After McMorrow's keynote address and greetings from Parade Chairman Stansbury, the roll of Quincy's deceased comrades will follow.

A Memorial Day prayer will be given by Edwin Boland. Commander Joyce and others will place wreaths for all wars and the Gold Star Mothers will place a basket of flowers at the World War II Monument.

There will be a volley by the 2nd Marine Division, the playing of "Taps," and the singing of the national anthem as the flag is raised to full-staff.

Assistant Chaplain John Raeke will then offer a benediction.

The Quincy Veterans Council, which represents all Quincy veterans organizations, is sponsoring the parade and ceremonies.

In case of inclement weather, exercises will be held at 11 a.m. in the Center for Technical Education Gymnasium, Coddington St.

The License Board suspended the liquor licenses of four establishments at Tuesday's meeting for selling liquor to minors.

The four cited were: Joe's Market Place, 260 Centre St., David Schurga, manager; Mullaney's, 205 W. Squantum St., James Mullaney, manager; Presidential Liquors, 25 Scammell St., John J. Martin, manager, and Shop 'n Save, 20 Independence Ave., Melvin Limon, manager.

Joe's Market Place was given a 10 day suspension because it is their second offense within two sting operations, according to the board.

Det. Joseph Manning, assistant liquor inspector told the board that he sent a buyer in with a $10 bill marked STING and asked him to purchase a six pack of beer. The buyer returned to Manning, and then Manning went back in the store and gave back the six pack and retrieved the $10 bill that was in the cash register.

Manager David Schurga told the board that an employee asked the buyer for an ID and was told he didn't have one. She said however, that she thought he looked familiar, and asked an employee what to do and ended up by selling the beer anyway.

However, the buyer, Patrick Candelieri said she asked if he had an ID and he said no, and asked him to lift up his hat and just looked at him and sold him the beer.

Police Chief William Falco said "there is no defense" because the buyer was underage. Falco said it was the second offense for the market, and the penalty should be "substantial". He then recommended that the board suspend the license for 10 days.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that although the suspension is for 10 days, it has to do with the sale of liquor only, and not the foods and other items that the store sells. Shea will meet with the owners to designate what days the store will be closed.

Shea noted that when former Police Chief Francis Mullen was on the board he noted a correlation between stores selling liquor, bread and milk and the lottery, that those selling Keno were more susceptible to sting operations.

At Shop 'n Save, Limon said they try "very hard" and said that on the night in question, it was a "trainee" who sold the liquor to the minor because the person who was training her had "gone into the ladies room."

Falco reminded Limon that this was the second offense, the first one happened 10 years ago. At that time they were given a one day suspension. Shea said it was 10 years ago, and "not a similar case". Falco said it's difficult in these case to try to be fair, and because it was 10 years ago, he asked the board to issue a five day suspension.

At Presidential Liquors, it was the same situation where

A Risky Honorary Quincy Citizenship

An Honorary Quincy Citizenship is a pretty innocent certificate.

You don't even have to pay taxes.

For years, Quincy mayors have been bestowing honorary citizenships on visiting dignitaries, relatives of constituents, and other visitors.

The certificate, signed by His Honor, makes a nice souvenir from the City of Presidents.

But, as Paul Harold found out, it could also get you in potential trouble. If not in jail.

HAROLD with Aung San Suu Kyi in her political headquarters in Burma in 1999.

Harold was reminded of the problem he ran into in Burma by the recent news that Aung San Suu Kyi, that country's pro-democracy leader, Noble Peace Prize winner and -- Quincy Honorary Citizen -- was released from 19 months of house arrest by the military junta.

The news brought Harold back to August, 1999 when he met her in Rangoon as brief her on Massachusetts' appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court on the selective purchasing law.

The law, which forbade the state from purchasing products from companies doing business in Burma because of human rights abuses there, was later struck down as unconstitutional. Down with it went a Quincy city ordinance fathered by Harold.

Harold brought with him to Burma a copy of the Massachusetts Constitution as a model for re-establishing Burma's democracy and an Honorary Quincy Citizenship certificate for Suu Kyi signed by then Mayor James Sheets.

Officials at the U.S. Embassy told Harold that his visit with her at her political headquarters was somewhat risky.

Presenting her with a copy of the Massachusetts Constitution was not the problem, they said. It was the Honorary Quincy Citizenship.

"The officials told me that the military government might not understand what the honorary citizenship was," Harold says. "They were afraid the military might think it was some sort of an official recognition of her as the head of the Burma government."

In the 1990 election she was elected prime minister with 82 percent of the vote but was prevented from assuming office by the military junta.

Harold presented Suu Kyi with the copy of the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin here in Quincy. But on the advice of U.S. officials, the Quincy honorary citizenship certificate was held at the embassy in Rangoon.

It was finally presented to her four months later in December, 1999 by Senator John Kerry when he was in Burma on behalf of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, says Harold.

"I could have been arrested trying to present her with the honorary citizenship at the time I was there," says Harold. "In fact, I could still be there."

Suu Kyi's release from house arrest is seen as a step forward for democracy but no guarantee that the military junta is ready to embrace it or her.

A QUINCY GROUP will be off tomorrow (Friday) on a trip to China.

The group includes: Former Mayor James and Joann Sheets, School Committee Vice Chairwoman Christine Cedrone, Victoria Landers and Simon Chan.

Cedrone, a paralegal, Landers and Chan will be representing the law firm of Quincy Att. Tom Williams. Landers is his daughter.

SHEETS

CEDRONE

Cedrone says that because of Quincy's fast growing Asian population, the Williams representatives will meet with U.S. embassy officials in Beijing.

Purpose is to discuss immigration matters and establish contacts to facilitate obtaining necessary records and other papers for Williams's Asian clients whenever they might need them.

"This is a sort of Quincy-to-China mission," says Cedrone.

MITT ROMNEY will be the guest speaker at the annual joint Memorial Day luncheon of the Quincy Lions, Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs.

The luncheon will be Tuesday, May 28 at noon at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Romney is the Republican candidate for governor, but this meeting is non-political. Romney has been asked to speak about his experiences as head of the Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

A CAMPAIGN FUNDRAISER for Mark Tobin, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County Register of Probate, will be held tonight (Thursday) at Flanagan's, Parkway, Quincy Center.

His mother, Mrs. Arthur Tobin and the Tobin family are hosting the 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. event. Donation is $15.

And, speaking of the Tobin family, there was a typo error in last week's Sun. Somehow, his wife, Judy's name, appeared as Wendy.

Sorry about that, Judy.

A PRE-CONVENTION Rally for Tim Cahill, candidate for state treasurer, is set for tonight (Thursday) 7 to 9 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St.

CAHILL

The event is being hosted by Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly. Donation is $20.

Cahill is leaving his Norfolk County treasurer's post to run for state treasurer, the office Shannon O'Brien is vacating in her bid for governor.

The Democratic state convention will be held May 31-June 1 in Worcester.

HARD TO BELIEVE, but next Wednesday (May 29) would have been John F. Kennedy's 85th birthday.

At age 43, he was the youngest elected President and because of his assassination, his youthful image is frozen in time.

Taking his oath, without a coat, in bitter cold, snow blanked Washington, D.C. Jan. 20, 1961. Crucial decision making time in the Cuban Missile Crisis that October. His sense of humor at televised press conferences. And then Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963.

The Kennedy Library and Museum at Columbia Point, Boston, will mark the 85th anniversary of his birth next Wednesday with free admission throughout the day.

If you've never been there, this is a great invitation. And if you have been there, well, it well worth another visit.

Scenes From Yesterday

First Presbyterian Church, Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD view of the old First Presbyterian Church that was at the corner of Quincy Street and 269 Water Street in South Quincy. This church served its congregation for over 75 years until they moved to a new Georgian colonial building on Franklin Street in 1962. At that time they changed their name to the First United Presbyterian Church. They then sold this building to the Granite Nazarene Church, formerly of Granite Street, who occupied it until 1979 when they abandoned the property and moved to South Weymouth. This old wooden structure became a hazard and was demolished by the Duane Co. in 1982 after a fire destroyed most of it. The Quincy Housing Authority now owns the site where it maintains a multi-unit housing facility.

Maintain School Funding For The Arts

Recently I had the pleasure of seeing the Quincy High School Drama Club perform the musical Anything Goes. This was a terrific show because the students were involved in every aspect of the production. The technical crew made the elaborate sets. The students designed the wonderful costumes. Several of the costumes were made as part of a Consumer Science curriculum at Quincy High School and they were graded on their work.

The integration between the extracurricular activity of the Drama Club, and the technical courses at Quincy High School is very unique. We need to maintain school funding for the arts. Not every student is an athlete, and not everyone excels in sports. Programs such as band, chorus, drama, and Consumer Science may be the only things that keep certain students in school. Creativity and responsibility flourish when teenagers work together for a common goal.

I was shocked to learn that these programs are on the budget chopping block. I urge the mayor to reassess his budgetary priorities and provide more school funding. The success of our young people depends on it.

May Is Mental Health Month

May is Mental Health Month, an annual, nationwide observance dedicated to raising awareness about mental health.

Far too often, images we see of people with mental illness are negative. Most of us have watched movies or television programs that portray a person with mental illness as violent, less intelligent or even comical.

Because of these images, people with mental illnesses may experience discrimination instead of receiving compassion, acceptance, or, most importantly, the help they need. Mental Health Month provides an opportunity to bring recognition to the value of mental health care.

Each year during Mental Health Month, South Shore Mental Health joins thousands of organizations across the country in sending the message that the wellness of the mind is as important as the physical well-being of the body.

If you or someone you care about could benefit from talking to a licensed mental health counselor, call South Shore Mental Health at 617-847-1950 or visit our Web site (www.ssmh.org).

Bus Drivers' Union Leaders Reject Strike End

By PAUL HAROLD

The AFL union leaders for the drivers of the Eastern Mass Street Railway Company rejected the latest attempt to end the 73-day-old strike.

Thirty-four legislators from southeastern Massachusetts had endorsed a proposal to end the strike, asking that it be sent to the union membership for a secret ballot. The union leaders refused to let the membership vote on the plan.

May 23 - 29

50 Years Ago

In an attempt to mediate the strike that crippled Quincy and area towns, legislative members of the transportation and judiciary committees came up with a plan that would increase drivers' wages by 15 cents an hour (two cents more than management offered) and address seniority and other issues.

Meanwhile, the Quincy school committee was considering a plan that would have custodians drive the 650 students in the city who live more than two miles from school.

TEACHERS VOTE TO SUE CITY COUNCIL

By a vote of 540-30, Quincy teachers and other school personnel voted to take the city council to court to fund their recent pay increase.

QEA President Elizabeth McConarty noted that the five percent raise was retroactive until Jan. 1. The city council, however, only funded the retroactivity portion starting April 1.

LEONE CONFIRMED AS HOSPITAL DIRECTOR

City Manager William Deegan announced the hospital board of managers had confirmed Dr. Joseph Leone as hospital director at a salary of $9,700, including food and lodging at the hospital for the director and his wife. Leone replaced Dr. Enzo Ronka.

Leone, age 50, was selected from a field of 17 candidates. He had served before as hospital director from 1945-46 when he left to take a post in Delaware.

Two Thigh Turkey Soup

Even though the good weather is just around the corner, you know it will be awhile before we're basking in the sun. And so it was on our recent trip to the not so sunny south where the weather was cool most of the time. Of course as soon as we returned home, the weather took a turn for the better.

Anyway, would you believe that I actually made some homemade turkey soup? And it was so easy, and all it took was two large turkey thighs.

So Easy Turkey Soup

- 2 large turkey thighs (remove skin)
- 2 stalks celery (cut in small pieces)
- 3 carrots (cut in halves and then cut again in small pieces)
- 1/2 cup small pasta (any favorite) I used stars

salt and pepper to taste grated romano or parmesan cheese

In a large pot, with about 1/2 gallon or so of water (who measures water), place the turkey thighs in the water and add the celery and carrots, salt and pepper if you like and cook for about an hour to an hour and a half until turkey thighs are tender.

You can either add the paste right in the soup, or cook it separately in a pan. Add when soup is done, along with the grated cheese. Wasn't that so easy, and so tasty? I used two thighs, but you can always make more soup by adding more turkey. We also enjoy eating the boiled thighs and I've also made turkey salad sandwiches out of it.

The garden honors the memory of slain child labor activist Iqbal Masih, who visited Broad Meadows Middle School in 1994.

Sunday At Bethany Church

Rev. George Hodgkins To Celebrate 50th Ordination Anniversary

By CRAIG SALTERS

The fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. George Hodgkins will be celebrated with a special service Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St.

"I just can't believe it's been 50 years," said the now retired Hodgkins, back home in Quincy with his wife of 52 years, Constance "Connie" Hodgkins, who will also celebrate a birthday Sunday. "It just seems too soon."

Born and raised in Quincy, as a young man Hodgkins was very active in the Quincy Point Congregational Church. In fact, he and his wife were the first couple to be married in the church at its new location in a ceremony celebrated by the late Rev. Bedros Baharian.

Baharian and more than 100 Quincy residents were on hand two years later as Hodgkins was ordained June 1, 1952 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church in Wayland, where he had been serving as pastor.

In 1955 Hodgkins became pastor of the First Congregational Church in Auburn and from 1961 until 1969 served as pastor of the 1,400-member First Congregational Church in Stratford, CT.

Hodgkins' longest term of service was at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church in Scituate where he served as pastor from 1969 until 1985, when he became pastor emeritus of that church.

After that Hodgkins served as interim pastor in Halifax, Fairhaven, and Weymouth before coming home to Quincy, serving as the interim pastor of Bethany Congregational Church from 1993 to 1996.

Hodgkins, now 79, remembers with fondness the activity involved with ministry — "just being busy, all the time, seven days a week" — but adds there were also times of sadness, such as performing the funeral of a beloved fourth grade teacher, Mildred Litchfield of the Pollard School.

He refuses to name a favorite church. "They were all very nice to my family and we still keep in touch, still keep the connections," Hodgkins said.

The Hodgkins have six children — Donald, Carol, Wendy, Robert, Forrest, and Mark — and 11 grandchildren who all live within a 20 mile radius of the city.

Hodgkins' 50-year ministry reflects an active participation in some of the more important issues of the last half-century. After World War II, Hodgkins was one of four "seagoing cowboys" bringing 50 cows to needy German refugee families. Later, he traveled to New York to attend a conference on world peace sponsored by the late Andrew Carnegie's Church Peace Union and led by, among others, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of the Union Theological Seminary.

A civil rights activist, Hodgkins, then a pastor in Stratford, took part in the 1963 March on Washington and formed the Stratford Interfaith Human Relations Council. Years later, he would lead that group in a somber march along with thousands of other Stratford residents to honor the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. following his assassination in Memphis.

He arrived in Scituate in 1969 and led his congregation through the turbulent times caused by the war in Vietnam, a time when a retired military officer once walked out of a service after listening to Hodgkins' calls for peace. During his tenure in Scituate Hodgkins was instrumental in the church's decision to allow women to serve communion and also to serve on the church's board of trustees. He was also a successful advocate of affordable housing in the community.

Hodgkins said the calling to become a minister came in the summer of 1946 shortly after three years as an Army Air Corps radar instructor in Boca Raton, FL, during World War II.

"I thought I was going to be an engineer," said Hodgkins, a lifelong radio and electronics enthusiast who once installed solar panels on his Scituate parish house using almost entirely recycled materials, "but I kept getting this thought in the back of my head."

Finally, he said, on the last day before college registration, he switched his major from engineering to liberal arts and started on his path.

Hodgkins attended the Pollard School and Quincy Point Junior High School and was a member of the Class of 1941 at Quincy High School. Following World War II, Hodgkins earned degrees at Boston University and the Andover-Newton Theological School.

At the time of his "seagoing cowboy" days, Hodgkins told newspapers of the day that it was important that German families, formerly on the opposing side of a war which had devastated their nation, receive expressions of American goodwill firsthand.

"This, perhaps, is what is unique: that we should give them something to love, and that these gifts should come from individuals and churches, not from governments."

Veterans' Flags Sought For Flag Day Parade

The Flag Day Parade Committee and Keohane Funeral Homes have issued their annual call for veterans' flags to be displayed as part of the Quincy Flag Day Parade.

Each year, the parade features a float displaying the memorial flags of those who served in the nation's armed forces. This year, the 51st annual parade takes place Saturday evening, June 15.

Families of deceased veterans should drop their flags off at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston, before Friday, June 14, to be included in this year's parade.

The flags will be displayed on a float in the parade and can be picked up at Keohane's in the days following the parade.

"Keohane Funeral Homes is proud to partner with the Flag Day Committee to honor those people who have served and fought to protect the flag which we celebrate and the freedoms that it represents," said Ed Keohane, proprietor of Keohane Funeral Homes and chairman of the Quincy Partnership, a co-sponsor of the Flag Day Parade.

"I am honored to see the families come in every year proudly allowing us to borrow their loved one's flag for this moving tribute."

Following the parade, there will be a flag-raising ceremony at Pageant Field and a fireworks display over Black's Creek that will culminate the night's activities.

For more information on the veterans' memorial flag display or the Flag Day Parade, call 617-376-1254.

SPRING CAR CARE

How To Keep Cars And Drivers From Overheating

Hot summer temperatures can be as brutal on a poorly maintained automobile as the most chilling winter weather.

When the temperature rises above 90 degrees, trouble begins for many motorists. Vehicles with weak batteries may have difficulty starting, air conditioning systems can fail, and poorly maintained cooling systems can leak and overheat.

Cracked belts may snap and worn hoses can burst and begin leaking as temperatures rise inside and outside the engine compartment.

"While many motorists know the approach of cold weather signals the need for preventative maintenance, hotter temperatures also require special attention for motor vehicles," said Alfred Ruggiero, AAA's Manager of Approved Auto Repair.

To keep vehicles free from heat-related problems, AAA recommends a complete inspection by a certified technician. At a minimum, the following maintenance items should be checked.

- Inspect antifreeze/coolant level, making certain proper 50/50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

- Switch to a summer grade, thicker, motor oil that carries the certification mark of the American Petroleum Institute specifying approval for gasoline engines.

- Inspect and replace worn or cracked belts as well as worn, cracked, blistered, or soft hoses.

- Check the air conditioning system for leaks, and have it serviced using the refrigerant CFC-12 in older systems or HFC134a in new or modified air conditioners. Do not use substitute refrigerants.

It is also important to know that battery performance is compromised by extremes in temperature, whether hot or cold, so old or weak batteries should be tested and replaced if necessary.

Because even a well-maintained car can break down, it's a good idea to carry drinking water and a windshield shade that will reduce heat build-up inside a vehicle. A cellular telephone or a citizens band radio can be used to summon help.

"Becoming stranded by a breakdown on a summer day may not seem threatening," Ruggiero said. "Yet, a hot day on the side of the road without water or shade can become a motorist's worst nightmare. To help prevent a breakdown, inspect your vehicle before warm weather hits and monitor its condition throughout the summer driving season."

Summer Storms Need Special Driving Skills

Motorists caught in a sudden summer thunderstorm will be safer if they learn and practice wet-weather driving skills, says AAA Southern New England.

"Knowing what to do is important because the odds of having a collision increase in wet weather," said David Raposa, Director of AAA's Public Affairs. "A hard rain can limit visibility so that a driver can't see the edges of the road, traffic signs, or other cars."

"Whether on vacation or running an errand, a driver who knows who to manage reduced visibility and slick pavement is more likely to stay in control," he said.

AAA offers the following tips to help motorists navigate their way through wet weather:

- Turn on windshield wipers as soon as rain begins to fall. If intermittent wipers are used, be certain they are set to a speed that will clear the windshield before visibility is compromised.

- If the windows begin to fog, turn on the car's defroster and air conditioner if equipped. Use fresh air settings as opposed to recycled, if available.

- Use low-beamed headlights whenever you use your windshield wipers. This will help other drivers see your car and increase visibility.

- Slow down and increase following distances. Speed limits are set for ideal road conditions. When it rains, visibility is reduced and braking distances increase.

- If you are forced to stop in traffic due to poor visibility, turn on emergency flashers immediately and pull as far off the road as possible.

Preventative maintenance is also important in reducing wet-weather driving risks. AAA recommends the following equipment be inspected by a certified technician, especially before starting a long-distance drive: battery, ignition system, lights, brakes, tire pressure and tread wear, heating and cooling system, belts, hoses, defroster blower, windshield wipers and washer fluid reservoir.

Oversight Committee Hears Environmental Update On Quarry Hills

Although state environmental officials are actively monitoring environmental issues at the Quarry Hills Golf Course project in West Quincy, residents' concerns about the project — including runoff and the condition of wetlands — are genuine and must continue to be addressed.

That's one of the messages Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly said he received during Monday night's meeting of the Oversight Committee on the massive West Quincy project which is using dirt from the Central Artery Project to transform former quarry landfills into a 27-hole golf course.

"It's evident that the DEP is really on top of this project and that the concerns of our neighborhoods are being listened to," Connolly said shortly after the hour-long meeting, which included a presentation by Philip Weinberg, associate commissioner of the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

"But on the other hand," Connolly said, "we certainly have concerns over runoff and the condition of wetlands that must be addressed."

Weinberg's presentation emphasized that conditions at Quarry Hills did not present a health threat to neighborhoods and that testing showed contamination levels well below standards that were already more strict than mandated guidelines.

Weinberg acknowledged that the developers had received five "major enforcement actions" for non-compliance over the course of the project but stated that, overall, they had been responsive and changed practices when necessary.

The strict testing, erosion controls, and plans to address damage to sensitive wetlands were welcomed by members of the committee, which is chaired by Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton.

But Connolly added that the project still required close attention.

"That's the good news," said Connolly, referring to the encouraging test results and control measures, "but, clearly, if you look at Cunningham Brook and Furnace Brook, if you visit Sheldon St. and other streets in that area, you can see that clay does come off the site into our neighborhoods."

"What we need to do is make sure that the impact of this runoff is assessed and that a plan is implemented to remediate any damages."

Although environmental issues surrounding the capping of fill was the topic Monday night, the completion of the golf course itself is still an issue.

Speaking to The Sun Tuesday, Mayor Phelan said that Quarry Hills Associates, developers of the delayed project, had provided the city with much of the information it had requested — including a financial plan, construction schedule, and a detailed cost analysis of the completion of the project — and would meet with the city today (Thursday) to discuss the possibility of an extension on the project.

Mayor Phelan Proclaims May 'Correct Posture Month'

Mayor William Phelan proclaimed the month of May "Correct Posture Month" which was kicked off at a recent luncheon at the office of Dr. Gabrielle Freedman, 112 McGrath Highway, Quincy.

In attendance were Dr. John Hill, Dr. Jack Arpano,

Dr. Kevin Daly, Dr. Mark Jaehnig, Dr. Phil Tardimico, Dr. Martin Rigby, Dr. Bruce Indek and Dr. Bob Clark. Also joining the neighborhood chiropractors were Ron Donovan and Liz Fitzpatrick of the Mayor's office.

The mayor's official proclamation, read by Donovan, stated that regular spinal examinations with close attention to posture can reveal distortions which can be corrected.

The science of chiropractic and the doctors who practice it have contributed to the better health of our citizens by providing health care and consultation with emphasis on the spine.

Safety Tips To Reduce Risk Of Inline Skating Injuries

Inline skating is rapidly becoming very popular with every age group. With warmer weather, many people will resume skating, while others will begin skating for the first time.

A skating rink provides a safer environment for skating; however, people turn to paved paths and roads for skating each year.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' (BCBSMA) Prevention and Wellness program suggests these safety tips to reduce risk of injuries:

- Always wear protective gear: an ordinary bike helmet, wrist guards, elbow pads and kneepads. The helmet must fit securely on the head and the front of the helmet should rest just above the eyebrows. The helmet's side straps should meet under the ears and the chin strap must not be loose. A helmet worn on the back of the head, like a beanie, will not protect your head if you fall forward.

- If you've never been on skates before, get a lesson from a certified instructor.

- Learn good techniques so you can stay in control: 1) Skates should fit well. If the skates are too loose, you won't have the control you need: 2) Always check the wheel bolts before you skate to be sure they are secure; 3) Rotate wheels as recommended by the manufacturer; 4) Every few sessions make sure the brakes have not deteriorated.

- The basic body position for inline skating is with the knees and hips slightly bent and the arms held loosely in front of the body. To move forward, push gradually to the side with one foot. The feet are kept directly under the hips. To reduce speed and stop, slide the foot with heel brake slightly forward.

After the foot is slightly forward, raise the toe 1-2 inches while keeping the rear wheels and the brake on the ground. Apply pressure to heel brake by lowering the body as if you are trying to sit.

Never lean backward. Always lean a little forward. And never completely straighten your legs. Learn now to fall in a controlled way.

Lean into the fall with your knees. Let your protective equipment help you with the impact. If your body position is correct, you won't fall very often.

- Pick a smooth level ground and a wide, paved area that is clear of cars.

These safety tips for skating were provided by Jonathan J. Scarlet, DPM, chief of podiatry at the Memorial Campus at UMass Medical Center.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

CROSSING THAT BRIDGE

When there is a space to fill left by missing teeth, a fixed bridge is a good choice when implant placement is not possible. This dental appliance consists of a pontic (false tooth) and two crowns that are cemented into place on the abutment teeth (on either side of the space). Unlike removable partial dentures, fixed bridges cannot be taken out of the mouth. Typically, two appointments are required over a period of 2-4 weeks. During the first appointment, the abutting teeth are reduced to accept the crowns and impressions are made. While the bridge is being fabricated from the impressions, a temporary bridge is set in place. During the second appointment, the fixed bridge is fitted to the teeth.

Your appearance, dental health, and the proper functioning of your mouth are all important reasons for replacing missing teeth. Could your dental situation benefit by wearing a bridge? We take pride in our ability to provide quality dental care in a relaxed and comfortable environment. Your comfort during dental treatment is our utmost concern. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our trained professional staff works as a team to make your visits pleasant. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Rely on us to answer all your questions about treatments and procedures.

P.S. Because a fixed bridge will attract buildup of plaque and food debris like natural teeth, scrupulous attention must be paid to oral hygiene.

Board Suspends 4 Liquor Licenses In Sting Operation

a buyer enters and buys a six pack without an ID. Atty. Lou Cassis representing Martin said they have been in business for 27 years, beginning in the old Elks Building and then moving to the Scammell St. address eight years ago. He appealed to the board to take into consideration that Presidential Liquors only sells liquor and is unlike a convenience store that can still sell other items.

He said persons who sell liquor have to be "perfect every hour, every day." He asked that maybe a "warning" could be issued instead of a suspension.

However, Falco said they were still in violation, that that the board "can't pick and choose" and tries to be "somewhat consistent." He recommended a three-day suspension.

James Mullaney, owner

Wollaston Beach Task Force To Meet Tonight

The recently re-established Wollaston Beach Task Force will meet tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at the Squantum Yacht Club.

Mayor William Phelan, who re-established the task force, has appointed Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro to serve its chairman.

Gutro, a longtime advocate of restoring Wollaston Beach both in terms of water quality and overall aesthetic value, thanked Phelan of Mullaney's said the employee who sold the liquor has been with the store for eight years and was "mortified" when this happened.

Mullaney said "we committed a crime and you are going to punish me." He added even "Aunt Agnes Knows." He said he has since spoken to his employees and said he "prays it will never happen again."

Mullaney concluded by saying "I'm ready to accept it."

Falco issued a three-day suspension to Mullaney.

After the sting operation was heard, the proposed transfer of the retail wine and malt license held by David Schurga at Joe's Market Place to Yogesh R. Patel was continued until June 4 because Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the Keno License should not be part of the transfer.

Atty. Arthur Pearlman told the board that Patel has experience from two family businesses located in Southboro, and that if the Keno License could not be transferred, the agreement may have to be terminated.

Chairman Shea, who voiced disappointment in Pearlman's statement said he would call the lottery and meet with officials and Gorman and see what the lottery officials think of the matter. He promised Pearlman that a decision one way or another will be made by the June 4 meeting.

Shea commended Det. Joseph Manning and Det. Lt. Robert Perchard for their work in the sting operation commenting they conducted it "all in one night in a matter of a few hours."

Ward 5's Gutro Establishes Sailors Pond Advisory Board

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro announced Monday the establishment of a Sailors Home Pond Neighborhood Advisory Board.

The board will be responsible for developing recommendations on sustainable approaches to improve the health and aesthetics of the pond.

"Sailors Pond is a real neighborhood gem," said Gutro. "Through this group, I hope to harness the genuine enthusiasm of the neighborhood project and restore this natural area."

Gutro has appointed Chuck Phelan, a former councillor of Ward 5 and pond neighbor, to serve as chairman of the board.

Advisory Board Members include: Cathleen Kyle, Franklin Ave.; Patricia Farulla, Franklin Ave.; Stephen Golden, Ridgeway Ave.; John Fagerlund, Ridgeway Ave.; Mary Helen Mahoney, Ridgeway Ave.; Steve Carty, Rice Rd.; Jean Mackey, Wendell Ave.; Suzanne Dixon, a Conservation Commission representative, Dixwell Ave.; and Jay Fink, commissioner of the Department of Public Works.

The board's first meeting will take place Wednesday, May 29 at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, 225 Fenn St. The public is invited to attend.

"I'm pleased that Mayor Phelan has pledged his support and cooperation on both the establishment of an advisory board and the implementation of recommendations," Gutro said. "The city of Quincy, as well as the pond's neighbors, has a real responsibility in ensuring that safe, permanent, and sustainable efforts are instituted to protect this pond for future generations."

Mass. Housing Market Rebounds, Sales Growth Sets 4-Year High

The Bay State's housing market rebounded from a sharp downturn in sales activity in the final quarter of 2001 by posting double-digit sales growth for both detached single-family homes and condominiums during the first three months of this year, according to data issued recently by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

Low mortgage rates, mild winter weather and modest gains in consumer confidence helped trigger the resurgence in home buying demand during the first quarter, as worries about job layoffs and threats of future terrorist attacks dimmed, the MAR report said.

Across the state, the MAR housing data show sales of detached single-family homes increased 11.6 percent during the first quarter of 2002 compared to the same period one year earlier, rising from 8,222 units sold in the first three months of 2001 to 9,172 in the opening quarter this year.

In addition, condominium sales improved 16.5 percent in the first quarter over the comparable period last year, climbing from 2,595 units sold in the first three months last year to 3,024 from January-March 2002.

It's the largest percentage increase of sales of detached single-family homes and condos in more than four years, dating back to the fourth quarter of 1997 when sales rose 15.4 percent and 21.2 percent, respectively.

"We initially saw buyers begin to return to the market in mid-to-late November, and the pace of activity has been brisk ever since," said MAR President David Drinkwater. "Most of the buyers who were in the market on Sept. 11 have returned, and they helped transform the normally slow holiday season and winter months into an early spring market."

Regionally, during the first quarter, sales of detached single-family homes showed steady improvement in six of seven market areas, while sales remained essentially flat in the Greater Fall River-

New Bedford area. The South Shore observed the greatest increase in sales in the past year, with sales up 17.6 percent in the first quarter of 2002 over the same period a year ago. Elsewhere, sales gains ranged from 7.9 percent in West and Central regions to 10-14 percent in the Cape Cod, greater Boston and Northeast regions of the state.

Separately, the condo market experienced improvement in all regions of Massachusetts during the first quarter, with double-digit sales growth reported in the Cape Cod, Central, great Boston, southeast and South Shore regions over year-ago levels.

"The recession of the past year has done little to dissuade most consumers from entering the housing market," Drinkwater said. "To the contrary, there's a sense of optimism and confidence among buyers looking to purchase housing right now. In fact, in many areas buyers continue to outnumber listings and there's not enough inventory to satisfy the demand."

"Admittedly, some of the sales growth we saw in the first quarter can be attributed to latent demand from buyers who postponed their home buying decisions temporarily after last September's terrorist attacks, but it's also true that today's buyers are finding current market conditions to be more favorable than they were one year ago."

In particular, inventory levels, while still less than ideal in some communities, have risen nearly 7 percent from year-ago levels, providing buyers a wider selection of homes to choose from. Statewide, single-family listings have increased from a quarterly average of 28,441 in the first quarter last year to 30,405 in the first three months of 2002.

Interest rates also have improved in the last 12 months, declining from an average of 7.20 percent for a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage in the first quarter of 2001 to 7.05 percent in the same quarter this year, making it easier for buyers to qualify for financing.

Another positive trend for buyers is the fact that home prices in most markets are appreciating more slowly than in years past.

The MAR report found that statewide average selling price for detached single-family homes rose 7.4 percent in the first quarter, from an average from of $288,430 in the first three months of 2001 to $309,807 in the same quarter this year. That's the smallest annual quarter-to-quarter gain in selling price since the fourth quarter of 1997 when the average price rose 5.6 percent.

Four regional markets — Northeast (+4.1%), greater Boston (+4.2%), West (+6.9%) and South Shore (+7.8%) — also saw more modest price single-digit appreciation in the first quarter compared to the same period in 2001.

In the condominium market, where there is far less inventory available to buyers, selling prices are still climbing at double-digit appreciation rates in much of the state. Across the state, the average selling price for a condo rose 14.6 percent in the first quarter of 2002, from an average price of $196,418 in the comparable quarter last year to $225,089 this year.

In addition, the average selling price for condos increased 10-13 percent on the South Shore and southeastern Mass., and rose at a rate equal to or greater than the statewide increase in selling price in the greater Boston, Northeast and West regions.

"We're finally starting to see some moderation in home price appreciation and that's good both for buyers and the general health of the market," Drinkwater said.

However, he noted: "The reality is we're likely going to see a steady increase in home values for the foreseeable future, and only if we substantially increase the supply of single- and multi-family homes will the upward pressure on prices begin to ease.

"That means our local communities must begin to allow more new housing or prices will continue to escalate beyond the means of most middle- and lower-income buyers."

IN PRAISE OF THE RANCH

When postwar ranch homes sprung up across the American landscape, they represented both the great promise of postwar prosperity and the oppressiveness of postwar conformity. In any case, these tract homes in subdivisions across the country made affordable homeownership available to millions of Americans. Now, some 50 years later, it is noteworthy that the first homes that baby boomers lived in are becoming eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places. While this has created a debate over their architectural merit, few can deny their significance. Not so surprisingly, ranch houses are starting to come back into fashion among young families, who are restoring them. Thus begins a renewed cycle of ranch houses as first homes.

As a homebuyer, you have many options. Whether you prefer a ranch, cape, or Victorian, CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can help you locate the home of your dreams. We meet with you to review the type of home and features you want and help determine what you can afford based on your down payment and salary. We have expertise in residential, business, commercial, and development properties. Real estate continues to be a good investment. Call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway to experience our progressive, energetic office.

HINT: The 750-foot Levittown Cape Cod and the 1,000 square-foot ranch directly affected more Americans than few other types of homes.

Quincy Clinches Tournament Spot

By CHRIS POISSON

Mike Sedar bought the Quincy High softball team T-shirts that read "Tourney Bound" before last Wednesday's trip to Sandwich.

Nothing wrong with that. A lot of high school teams wear clothing noting accomplishments achieved during the season, right?

Except the Presidents weren't yet tourney-bound last Wednesday afternoon. They traveled to Sandwich with a 9-5 overall record, one win shy of a berth in the state tournament.

"I know that's usually a bad omen," said the head coach of his early purchase. "I thought I was going to have to carry them around for a couple of weeks."

But just like the way the season has been going, Quincy could do no wrong. Riding the powerful right arm of sophomore Rachel Sorensen, the Presidents rallied in eight innings for a 3-1 victory, locking up their first appearance in the tournament in at least 12 years.

"We're thrilled," said Sedar, who is only in his second year.

Quincy returned to the Cape the following day and demolished Dennis-Yarmouth, 16-1, and last Friday it returned home to face a surging Randolph squad, winners of seven straight. Perhaps abtitled from back-to-back journeys to the Cape, Quincy suffered a 5-0 loss.

South Shore YMCA Golf Tournament At Plymouth CC

The South Shore YMCA's annual golf tournament will be held Monday, June 24, at the Plymouth Country Club in Plymouth.

The event benefits the South Shore YMCA's annual Strong Kids Campaign, which helps children and families participate in Y programs or services that they would not be able to otherwise afford.

Last year the South Shore YMCA gave $423,000 to over 1,100 children and families needing YMCA programs.

The tourney will tee off at 1 p.m., with dinner and auc-

SOFTBALL

On Monday, the Presidents bounced back with a sensational 3-1 win against a very strong Plymouth North (13-5, 6-4) team.

Quincy (12-6 overall, 8-4 Atlantic Coast League) finishes the regular season this week. It traveled to Dedham yesterday (Wednesday) and this afternoon at 3:30 it battles city rival North Quincy at Pageant Field.

In Monday's game, Sorensen toyed with the Blue Eagles, allowing one run in the seventh inning and only two hits, while striking out seven. "She's a heartbreak away from throwing a no-hitter," Sedar said.

Quincy grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Senior second baseman Michelle Pilalas led off with a double, advanced to third and scored on junior first baseman Liz Campbell's groundout. Junior shortstop Shannon Paine scored the other run on an error.

In the fifth, Quincy went up 3-0 when Paine scored on junior Jen Gropp's bunt. And in the bottom half Quincy made the defensive play of the game when sophomore catcher Rose Bell picked off a runner at third base.

"It wasn't even close," Sedar said. "A clean pick. They were done after that."

In last Friday's game, Quincy managed only five hits against Randolph ace

Tara Rose. Junior center fielder Diane Gilbody went 2 for 2 before she left the game in the fourth inning when she injured her knee sliding into second base and Campbell drilled a triple.

Quincy trailed 1-0 after three innings, but the Blue Devils capitalized on several Quincy errors to increase their lead to 3-0 and later added two more runs to account for the final score. Sorensen pitched well in the loss, striking out nine and walking just two.

"We played pretty well this time," said Sedar, whose team suffered a 15-1 loss in the first meeting. "We made a couple of costly errors that let them score some runs. They're a good ballclub. But this was our third game in a row and we were just beat."

In last Thursday's game, Quincy overpowered Dennis-Yarmouth as Sorensen allowed only four hits in six innings. Pilalas, Paine and junior Stacy Andrew each had two hits and an RBI.

In the Sandwich game, Quincy broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning with a pair of runs. Sorensen reached base, stole second and scored the game-winner on a single by Bell. Bell advanced to second on a passed ball and scored an insurance run on Andrew's single.

In the bottom half, Andrew ended the game with a sensational diving catch in right field, stranding a Sandwich runner at second base. Campbell went 2 for 3 and freshman Katie Walsh went 2 for 4. Sorensen allowed three hits and fanned seven.

Also, a raffle will be held at the dinner, with a $5,000 grand prize and several $100 prizes. Only 200 tickets will be sold. Cost is $100 per ticket. To purchase a ticket call Jill Donovan at 617-479-8500, ext. 109.

SEN. JOHN KERRY (far left) was in Quincy last week to help promote the fifth annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, also known as the Squirrel Run, June 8 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS June 8 At Veterans Stadium

The fifth annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS will be held Saturday, June 8, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The five-mile run is also known as the New Balance "Squirrel Run" in honor of Jimmy's childhood nickname.

Jimmy Kennedy's battle with Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, ended April 6, 1997 when he was 31 years old.

All proceeds from the event go directly to ALS research. Last year's race raised approximately $50,000 for the Cecil B. Day Center for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, also this year's beneficiary.

"Our goal this year is to raise at least another $50,000 to benefit ALS research," said Richard Kennedy, Jimmy's brother. "This race continues to be instrumental in building local awareness and funding for this devastating disease that strikes thousands of individuals every year."

Richard Kennedy and Marty Levenson, a childhood friend and running partner, have organized the race together since 1998.

The road race will start at 10 a.m. and will include a 2.5-mile Fitness Walk beginning at 9 a.m. The event also includes special children's events and awards in 15 age divisions. Race day registration will begin at 8 a.m. The entry fee is $12 before May 31 and $15 after and on race day.

Several area dignitaries are planning to attend this year's race, including former Gov. Michael Dukakis, a longtime supporter, and Mayor William Phelan. Phelan will also declare June 2-9 ALS Awareness Week in Quincy.

The official starter this year is Mary Kennedy-Peretti, Jimmy's mother. Her husband, Chris, Quincy school committee member and former Dean of Students at Northeastern University, also succumbed to the disease.

RUN-FLAT TIRES

Some new cars are equipped with run-flat tires, which can be run with no air until the driver can get to a place where a flat can be repaired. The sidewalls of run-flat tires have an added piece of molded rubber near the tire bead. This reinforcing element is sufficiently stiff to prevent the rim from contacting the inside of the tire even under cornering and braking. As long as drivers observe the recommended speed limit (usually 50 MPH, or so) and limit the distance traveled (usually between 50 and 100 miles), they can count on a run-flat tire to get them to a repair site. Run-flat tires can be retrofitted to any vehicle that uses an appropriate tire size.

Need new tires? Think about the new run-flat variety. AL LEO

Successful Basketball Season For Sacred Heart 5th-6th Grade Girls

The Sacred Heart fifth- and sixth-grade girls' basketball team recently concluded its very successful season.

Undefeated in the regular season and the No. 2 seed in the state tournament, Sacred Heart reached the final but fell to top-seeded St. Adelaide's of Peabody at Catholic Memorial.

Sacred Heart came out strong with guard Kasey O'Connell controlling the tempo, but St. Adelaide's overpowered them with its inside game. Trailing by double digits late in the game, Paige Bonanni caught fire by hitting three straight 3-pointers but Sacred Heart could not complete the comeback.

Coaches Jim Bonanni and Tim Stille thanked the girls for their commitment and Dr. Mark Jaehnig and Father O'Brien for their continued support of the Sacred Heart program.

In the first game of the tournament, Sacred Heart pulled out a 16-point victory over St. Mary's of Franklin at Marblehead High School. Christine Culgin, inserted into the starting lineup, was a central figure as Sacred Heart stormed to a 20-point half-time lead.

In the second half, the girls continued to play well. The rebounding efforts of Siobhan McDonagh and Alex Nee as well as pressure defense from guards Allison Foley and Samantha Bonanni helped preserve the victory.

In Game 2, Sacred Heart ousted St. John's of Needham at CM in a thrilling, seesaw affair that was decided in overtime. Rebecca Goreham led the team in the extra session and finished with 31 points. In regulation, forwards Rachel Goreham and Mary Stille played outstanding and the defense smothered St. John's.

After the state tourney, Sacred Heart ended its season on a positive note with a victory in the Milton Tournament finals.

Earlier in the year, Sacred Heart, the top seed, captured the Vicariate Championship with a win over an aggressive and well-disciplined Duxbury team. Brianne Carnell rebounded and played defense well, while Siobhan Carnell and Catherine O'Connell provided the timely baskets.

Throughout the season, Sacred Heart received solid efforts from starters Rebecca Goreham, Rachel Goreham, Stille, Kasey O'Connell and Paige Bonanni. It also received outstanding efforts from a very deep bench that included Culgin, Brianne Carnell, Siobhan Carnell, Nee, McDonagh, Catherine O'Connell, Foley and Samantha Bonanni.

SACRED HEART CHAMPS — The Sacred Heart Parish ninth-grade girls CYO basketball team recently won both the state and New England championships. Kneeling, from left: Lisa LaPorte, Erika Djerf, Jen Doyle, Shauna Kelly and Meghan Coughlin. Standing: coach Russ Goreham, Nora Yotts, Kristin O'Toole, Kristina Penzo, Sarah Goreham, Kerry Clifford, Krysta Guerriero and assistant coach Tom Yotts.

Sacred Heart 9th Grade Girls Win State, N.E. Championships

The Sacred Heart Parish ninth-grade girls CYO basketball team recently captured both the state tournament and New England championships.

At the 42nd annual New England CYO Basketball Championship held in Burlington, Vt., Sacred Heart swept St. Mary's of Springfield in a best-of-three series.

In the first game, Shauna Kelly and Sarah Goreham led the offense with 16 points apiece. Meghan Coughlin, Kristin O'Toole and Erika Djerf contributed on the boards.

Defensively, Jen Doyle, who got the starting nod, Lisa LaPorte and Nora Yotts harassed the opposing backcourt. Their hustle kept St. Mary's from getting into any kind of offensive flow.

In the second game, Kelly and Goreham again led all scorers. But it was Krysta Guerriero's scoring that made the difference. Guerriero came off the bench midway through the third quarter, hitting three straight jump shots to spark a 10-0 run.

Doyle, one of the smaller players on the team, flexed her muscles in this physical game, setting a number of solid picks to free up the scorers. Again, the defensive speed of Kristina Penzo, Kerry Clifford, Djerf and O'Toole coupled with the rebounding of Coughlin, LaPorte and O'Toole were too much for St. Mary's to overcome.

In the state tourney, Sacred Heart knocked off St. Margaret-Mary of Westwood in the semifinals — the same team that spoiled Sacred Heart's undefeated record in the second to last game of the season.

Kelly scored a game-high 16 points. Coughlin added 12 and Goreham 11. These three, along with Clifford and Penzo ran the offense to perfection. On the defensive end, Guerriero turned in her best rebounding game of the year, pulling down 16 boards.

In the finals, Sacred Heart defeated St. Anne's of Readville in a tight contest, which was highlighted by Sacred Heart's suffocating full-court press and half-court trapping. Offensively, Kelly, Goreham and O'Toole led the team.

The team was coached by Russ Goreham and assistant coach Tom Yotts. Eight of the players were also members of the undefeated North Quincy High School freshman basketball team.

"With these eight girls in the program, NQHS will be a team to be reckoned with for the next three years," Goreham said.

The team would like to thank the Sacred Heart North Quincy Basketball Program run by Mark Jaehnig. The program has over 750 boys and girls, which generates quite a talent pool for the surrounding high schools.

It would also like to thank Father John O'Brien, pastor of Sacred Heart Parish, for his support of the basketball program all year, and Peter Williams, Diocesan Athletic Director.

Red Raiders Focus On Postseason Run

By CHRIS POISSON

Now that they're in the tournament, the seniors on the North Quincy High baseball team can focus their attention on making a postseason run without any side distractions.

Ten of the 12 seniors certainly remember last year when the Red Raiders took a 14-6 record into the tournament only to be knocked out in the first round by a powerful Catholic Memorial team.

"Last year was a tough game," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "Our team goal this year is to advance in the tournament. They're playing with a lot of confidence right now and with a lot of enthusiasm. We're getting good pitching and playing good defense."

After losing to Barnstable last Wednesday for the second time this year, North Quincy regrouped the following day with a 6-2 victory at Bridgewater-Raynham to qualify for the tourney for the third straight season.

The Red Raiders have won two more since, defeating Silver Lake, 11-5, Monday and topping Plymouth South, 7-1, at home last Friday.

North Quincy (12-6 overall, 9-4 Old Colony League) traveled to league leader Marshfield yesterday (Wednesday) and tonight at 7 it closes out the regular season against crosstown rival Quincy at Adams Field.

On Monday, senior John

BASEBALL

O'Connell went the distance against the Lakers, scattering nine hits, striking out five and walking two. North Quincy staked him to a 2-0 lead in the first on senior second baseman Dennis Thomson's RBI single and senior catcher John Fidalgo's bases-loaded walk.

Silver Lake evened the score in the bottom half and was threatening for more runs before North Quincy turned its 19th double play of the season. With runners at first and third, O'Connell struck out the batter and Fidalgo gunned down the runner attempting to steal second.

In the second, the Red Raiders scored three unearned runs on two Silver Lake errors to take a 5-2 lead. In the fourth, senior first baseman Neal Gavin stroked a two-out, two-run double to left field that scored seniors Pat Bregoli and Mike Feetham.

North Quincy broke the game open in the fifth with four runs. Bregoli ripped an RBI single. Feetham smacked a two-run single and Thomson knocked in a run on a groundout for an 11-2 advantage.

Last Friday, senior Steve Pizzi pitched five scoreless innings, allowing only two Plymouth South hits, to improve his record to 3-1. Junior Dom Delgardo gave up one run on three hits over the final two innings.

After a two-run first inning, North Quincy erupted for four runs in the second. Senior third baseman Charles Vidoli (single), senior Mike DeAngelo (single) and Pizzi (hunt) all reached to load the bases for Bregoli, who stroked a two-run single.

After on out, Feetham knocked in Bregoli with a single. Thomson brought home Feetham with a groundout for a 6-0 lead.

In the fifth, Vidoli ripped an RBI double that scored Gavin for North Quincy's seventh run.

Last Thursday, North Quincy held a 4-0 lead in the fifth inning but B-R threatened when it loaded with bases with one out against Feetham. O'Connell came on in relief and immediately induced a 1-2-3 double play to escape the jam.

Feetham picked up the win to improve to 3-2, walking six but only allowing one hit in 4 1/3 innings. O'Connell finished the game to earn the save.

Offensively, senior center fielder Wayne Moynihan went 2 for 3 with a home run and scored four of the six runs. Bregoli went 2 for 3 with an RBI and Feetham went 2 for 4 with two RBIs.

International Babe Ruth Baseball

Wollaston Post Office knocked off Noll Electric, 13-10, in recent International Babe Ruth action at Pond Street Field.

Joe Ceurvals singled twice, tripled, scored three runs and pitched two scoreless innings of relief to pick up the save for winning pitcher Dennis Rackauskas, who drove two first-inning runs.

Chris O'Brien and Mike O'Neil also had three hits apiece, while Dom Poli and Marty Rogers each had two. Mark Pepjonovich continued his hot hitting with two hits and played flawlessly in the field.

For Noll Electric, Danny Mulligan, Dan Ivy, Jake Quinlan and Wes Bigham all had hits in a six-run third inning. Bigham went the distance on the mound, striking out 10.

In other action:

Wollaston 13, State St. 5

Joe Ceurvals pitched the first five innings and struck out six to earn the win against State Street Global Advisors. Marty Rogers came on in relief and struck out five of the eight batters he faced to notch his third save of the year.

Mark Pepjonovich opened the game with a single and scored on a triple by Mike O'Neil (2 hits). In the third inning after walks to Bob Leahy and Dom Poli, Pepjonovich doubled them home and then scored on a single by Justin Boyd (2 hits).

For SSGA, Matt Mora singled and doubled and Matt Hawko reached base twice. Pat Stroud and Spencer Peterson both played well defensively.

Wollaston 24, Adv. Auto

Wollaston's Dennis Rackauskas and Advanced Auto Part's Eric Moreschi engaged in a pitcher's duel before Wollaston broke the game open in the fourth inning with 11 runs.

Justin Boyd crushed a long home run, Brendan Linnane tripled and Dom Poli (2 hits) and Marty Rogers each doubled to lead the outburst. Mike Saville scored two runs that inning.

Rackauskas went five innings to pick up the win, fanning 11 and allowing just two hits. Colin Mooney and Kellan Losi each had two hits.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A stubborn refusal to go ahead on a project mystifies colleagues who expected more flexibility. But once you explain your position, they'll understand and even applaud you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A relationship seems to be stuck in the same place. Now it's up to you, dear Bovine, to decide how far you want it to go and how intense you want it to be. Choose well and choose soon.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relationship progresses more slowly than you would prefer. Best advice: Insist on a frank and open discussion. What is learned could change minds and, maybe, hearts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's all right to be grateful to a workplace colleague who has done you a good turn. But gratitude shouldn't be a life-long obligation. The time to break this cycle is now.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's going to be especially nice to be the King of the Zodiac at this time. A recent money squeeze eases. Plans start to work out, and new friends enter Your Majesty's domain.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Before you make a commitment on any level (personal, professional, legal), get all the facts. There might be hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Personal relationships improve. Professional prospects also brighten. A job offer could come through by month's end. An old friend seeks to make contact.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your senses detect that something is not quite right about a matter involving a workplace colleague. Best advice: Follow your keen instincts and don't get involved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A prospect offers rewards, but it also demands that you assume a great deal of responsibility. Knowing you, you're up to the challenge, so go for it, and good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A favor you did a long time ago is repaid, as a trusted colleague steps in to help you with a suddenly expanded workload. A family member has important news.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new job offer could require moving across the country. But before you let your doubts determine your decision, learn more about the potentials involved.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sense of fair play doesn't allow you to rush to judgment about a friend who might have betrayed you. Good! Because all the facts are not yet in.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a romantic nature that allows you to find the best in people. You would excel at poetry and drama.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

This Memorial Day our American Flag will be flying in memory of all who served in their country's time of need. . .

"I AM OLD GLORY . . . For over 200 years I have been the banner of hope and freedom for generation after generation of Americans. Born amid the first flames of America's fight for freedom. I am the symbol of a country that has grown from a little group of thirteen colonies to a nation of fifty sovereign states. Planted firmly on the high pinnacle of American faith. My gently fluttering folds have proved an inspiration to untold millions. They have looked upon me as a symbol of national unity. They have prayed that they and their fellow citizens might continue to enjoy life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, which have been granted to every American as the heritage of free men. So long as men love liberty more than life itself; so long as they treasure the priceless privileges bought with the blood of our forefathers; so long as the principles of truth, justice and charity for all remain deeply rooted in human hearts, I shall continue to be the enduring banner of the United States of America." . . . *

office would begin implementing the mayor's program.

Masterson emphasized that the bill enhances benefits to those already eligible for retirement but does not make previously ineligible employees eligible. In order to be eligible for retirement, he said, city employees 55 and over still needed to have at least 10 years of service and city employees under 55 still needed to have 20 years of service.

Retirement packages for municipal employees factor the retiree's age, years of service, and his or her top salary for three full years.

get.

Not signing on to the joint resolution was Councilor at-Large Frank McCauley.

Phelan said the council's preliminary cuts weren't really cuts because they were made in the area of fixed costs that needed to be funded.

Referring generally to calls to restore the school budget, Phelan said

"They essentially asked me to do what I've already promised to do. It indicates that the School Committee, City Council, and Mayor's Office are all committed to education."

School Committee To Hold Public Hearings On Proposed School Budget

projected FY 2003 budget deficit as well as the budget proposal itself.

A second sub-committee meeting will be held Wednesday, May 29 at 7 p.m. in the same location.

School Committee woman Jo-Ann Bragg serves as chairwoman of the Budget Sub-Committee.

The $59.6 million proposed for the School Department for FY 2003 represents a roughly five percent cut from that department's previous budget and, coupled with mandated step increases and increased Special Education costs, could mean significant cuts in teachers, support staff, and programs.

The looming cuts prompted close to 100 people to speak before the School Committee May 15 in an attempt to stave off reductions in various areas.

Although Bragg emphasized at the May 15 meeting that the School Committee did not want to lay off one teacher or staff member or eliminate one program, she also said that the proposed budget had "the worst bottom line since the 1980's" and that changes would be necessary.

The budget process, Bragg said, was still ongoing and members of the School Committee were still receiving input—including phone calls, letters, faxes, and emails—from students, parents, teachers, and concerned residents.

Bragg added that she was encouraged by the recent decision by the state House of Representatives to restore a 10 percent cut in state educational funding to cities and towns which, if approved by the state Senate and the governor, could mean another $1.4 million in educational funds for the city.

The Budget Sub-Committee also approved and sought full School Committee approval on two resolves to establish a QPS Local Education Fund and to forward federal Medicaid reimbursement monies to the Quincy Public Schools, respectively. Both resolves were tabled by Mayor William Phelan, ex-officio chairman of the School Committee, and were expected to be voted upon at the June 5 meeting of the School Committee.

Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro will hold office hours tomorrow—Friday—from 11 a.m. until noon in the second floor conference room of City Hall.

Gutro will also hold office hours Wednesday, June

With Items From Central Middle School

Space Shuttle Flight To Carry City Flag

Mayor William Phelan and family are planning to be in attendance today (Thursday) to watch the scheduled launch of the Space Shuttle Endeavour as it blasts off from NASA Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, FL, en route to its 12-day mission involving the International Space Station.

Along with various other items, including those from Central Middle School, the shuttle will carry the city flag of Quincy. The event will be an historic first, said Kristin Priscella, executive assistant to the mayor, as it will be the first time a city seal has gone into space.

The shuttle is due to return to Kennedy Space Center June 11.

Placing the local items aboard the shuttle was facilitated by Quincy native Mary Germaine Lockhart, a colonel in the United States Air Force Reserves and chief meteorologist with the Air Force, whose husband, Paul Lockhart, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force, is piloting the craft.

While growing up in Quincy, the current Mrs. Lockhart attended Central Middle School and was a classmate of the mayor's wife, Tracey (Tobin) Phelan.

After its tour in space, Priscella said, the flag will be returned to the city for display. If it is returned in time, she added, the flag could be incorporated into the city's upcoming Flag Day festivities.

Watching the shuttle launch is only one part of the Phelan family vacation, which will also include a visit to Disney World for the three Phelan children.

The mayor is scheduled to return to the city this weekend, Priscella said.

During Phelan's absence, Council President Daniel Raymonds serves as acting mayor for the city.

Here And Nationally

Bank Robberies Show Sharp Rise Since Sept. 11

The recent spate of bank robberies in Quincy may be extremely alarming but is not merely a local issue, reflecting trends at both the state-wide and national levels.

That was one lesson to be learned during last week's roundtable discussion on the issue attended by members of Quincy's banking community, local officials, and representatives of the Quincy Police Department.

"What surprised me, not necessarily in an adverse way, was the extent to which bank robberies are a state and national problem," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, who organized the roundtable discussion at the request of Elaine duJardin, vice president of South Coastal Bank, whose branch at 1259 Hancock St. has been robbed four times in less than two years. "We are no worse or better than any other area."

Gutro said he was particularly impressed with the information presented at the meeting by Atty. Kevin Kiley, executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Massachusetts Bankers Association, who told those gathered that the number of bank robberies had increased significantly after Sept. 11, so much so that the FBI had implemented a Bank Robbery

NYPD Detective To Be Guest At Memorial Observance

New York City Police Detective Michael Meehan will be the guest of honor during the annual Quincy Police Department memorial observance Sunday.

Meehan, who lost a brother during the Sept. 11 attacks upon the World Trade Center, has two other family members who served as first responders during the tragedy. His wife is also a detective with the NYPD.

Meehan's visit to the city comes at the request of Mayor William Phelan, who met Meehan during a recent trip to New York City and "Ground Zero," in collaboration with Quincy Police Sgt. Daniel Kennedy, president of the Quincy Police Benevolent Society.

EUGENE DeSAULNIERS (third from right) of Quincy has reason to be proud after being presented the Eagle Scout Award along with four fellow members of Troop 2 in Weymouth at a presentation dinner held recently at the Immaculate Conception Parish Hall in Weymouth. DeSaulniers, son of the late Eugene J. DeSaulniers and Christine DeSaulniers, restored Safford Park on the corner of Winthrop Ave. and Beale St. for his Eagle Scout Project. Joining DeSaulniers are, from left, Eagle Scouts Nathan Johnson and Adam Murphy; Scoutmaster Ronald Parry; and Eagle Scouts Matthew Darling and Brian Downey.

Parent Opposition Mounts To Cutting Music Program

Parent opposition is mounting to a proposal that threatens the music program in the Quincy Public Schools to help avert a multimillion dollar deficit in the Fiscal 2003 school operating budget.

The plan would eliminate the jobs of three of the five music teachers in the school system and wipe out the programs in the 11 elementary schools while preserving it in the high and middle schools.

"It'll be a difficult battle," said Dana Ahern, one of the organizers of the Friends of QPS Music and the parent of an 11-year-old trumpet player at the Merrymount School.

"We want to bring the case to the School Committee and the city councillors and stress the overall importance of the music program to other subjects, like math."

The plan was recommended to the School Committee recently by a task force appointed by School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro. The committee took the proposal under advisement for a future vote.

Although the task force attached no cost-saving figure to the proposal, it was estimated that it would trim $102,000 from the school budget, based on the $34,000 cost of each teacher.

Right now, the music programs in Quincy Public Schools consist of one instrumental music teacher for North Quincy High and two middle schools and one for Quincy High and three middle schools.

Three other teachers, the ones whose jobs would be eliminated, handle music instruction at the 11 elementary schools. It's the jobs, not necessarily the individuals, who would be cut.

Dana Ahern's son, who will move up from the Merrymount Elementary School to the Broad Meadows Middle School next year, began the study of music in the first grade.

"The kids were required to take some form of music in the first grade," said Ahern. "They tried all the instruments. In the second grade, they selected one. My son studied trumpet, drums and piano."

"My wife and I will support my son's continued training in music. We have the means to pay for private lessons. Some families don't have the means. What will happen to those children?"

"If music is eliminated in the elementary schools, pretty soon there will be no high school marching band because too few of the students will have taken music in elementary school."

"All things considered, the kids who go on with their music are less likely to get into trouble."

The Friends of QPS Music got off to a rocky start a month and a half ago but is now stretching its muscle.

"We held our first meeting April 4 at the Thomas Crane Public Library," said Ahern. "Unfortunately, not many people heard about it. I volunteered to send out notices of our second meeting. That was the night there was a big meeting on the budget. Our attendance suffered."

"We sent out 470 invitations to the third meeting last Wednesday and I'm waiting for the results of that meeting to see if we will have a fourth."

"If we can get 600 passionate supporters of the music program to appear before the School Committee it will show them that if they eliminate the music program they will suffer the wrath of parents."

Memorial Day Keynoter:

‘Cost Of Independence Remains High But Americans Willing To Pay It’

BY LANCE MORGANELLI

“Make no mistake: The cost of independence remains high but Americans are willing to pay it. We will not pay it gladly, but we pay it with deep reverence and thanks to those who have sacrificed their lives for the United States of America.”

Those were the words, spoken determinedly, by Francis McMorrow, keynote speaker during the Memorial Day ceremony at the World War II Podium at Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

“It doesn’t take a 9-11 to develop patriotism. Patriotism should be an everyday affair,” John Joyce, commander of the sponsoring Quincy Veterans Council, said followed by applause throughout the crowd.

Joyce noted he questioned himself whether the children waving the flags along the parade route understood the true significance of the U.S. flag.

“I wonder if they [children] know why — why we do this every year,” Joyce said. “I think it’s incumbent upon the parents, grandparents, brothers and sisters — to everyone — to let them know why.”

Several hundred freshly placed American flags fluttered on the graves of veterans who gave the ultimate pride in defense of freedom. Still many other flags were in the hands of men, women and children who attended the ceremony.

McMorrow is a retired first sergeant of the United States Army and current director of the Sheila McIntyre House—Quincy, which is a joint program of the Department of Veterans Services and the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition that assists homeless veterans at Father Bill’s Place.

Before reaching Mt. Wollaston Cemetery the parade rested at United First Parish Unitarian Church, “Church of the Presidents,” in Quincy Square where Joyce and Parade Chairman Thomas Stanbury, with City Council President Daniel Raymond, placed wreaths on the tombs of John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

McMorrow asked a rhetorical question of all those in attendance at the ceremony.

“Why are Americans so seemingly willing to fight and die for [freedom]?”

“The answer to that question is as simple as complex as the soul of America itself,” McMorrow said. “We fight because we believe. Not that war is good but that sometimes it appears necessary.”

“These courageous men and women all different in heritage and background share the common bond of the armed forces — duty and sacrifice.”

“All of them reached a moment in their lives when race, religion, color and creed made absolutely no

Before the ceremony and speeches, a myriad of flags and uniforms marching down Coddington Street made an impressive sight. Several catchy march cadences could be heard coming from the Junior Air Force ROTC as the Quincy High School and North Quincy

An Anchor Would Be Seen

We have long been saying -- and again most recently -- that the granite ball at the Fore River bridge rotary should go back to City Hall where it originally was and really belongs.

And, that something nautically appropriate should replace it as a fitting tribute to Quincy Point's great shipbuilding history.

In the May 16 column we suggested perhaps a model of one of the great Navy ships built at the Fore River shipyard -- the USS Quincy, the Massachusetts or the Lexington.

Or, a large anchor.

Well, the anchor idea caught the eye of Frank Rogers of Bloomfield St., Squantum.

"I have just read your story about the return of the granite ball to City Hall and replacing it with an anchor," he writes. "I think that is a great idea."

Rogers, a former Navy man who served on destroyer escorts in the 1950s, also sent along a photo to give readers an idea of what an anchor would look like at the rotary.

It sure would be seen -- unlike the ball which is virtually hidden by signs and traffic trying to get around the rotary.

And, it would help attract visitors to the nearby USS Salem and Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the shipyard.

"There are dozens of the same type of anchors there painted gray and standing tall and looking great," he says.

But you don't have to go that far to see one.

Rogers notes there are two huge anchors on the site of the Family Thrift Center at 2 Hancock St., North Quincy, next to the Neponset River bridge.

"They are the property of the Jay Cashman Marine Construction Co. and have been laying there for years," he says.

"Maybe it would be possible to have one donated to the city."

Rogers says he is concerned about the granite ball's safety at the rotary.

"I'm surprised it hasn't been destroyed by some crazy driver coming down off the bridge and smashing through the rotary."

Rogers says an anchor -- similar to the one in the photo -- would be much more appropriate -- and seen.

"If donations are needed to get this done, I will write the first check," he says.

Meanwhile, the petition drive started by Alba Tocci of Rodman St. to get the ball back to City Hall is picking up momentum.

Alba, who comes from a family of granite stonecutters, started off her own petition with 61 names as reported here.

She then placed one in Joe's Market Place, 260 Centre St. "About 90 names have been signed there," she says. "And I have received eight letters from people wanting the ball to go back to City Hall."

Charles Ryder of Ryder's Home Decor and More store, 1489 Hancock St., Quincy Center, volunteered to take another petition which quickly added more than 60 names.

Ryder, a former president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, says: "I think it is time the ball came back to Quincy Center. It is not visible at all down there at the rotary. It would be a great attraction for Quincy Center where it would be seen. And the kids would be able to see it close-up like they used to."

The ball was donated to the city June 25, 1925 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy in 1625.

It was a gift to the city -- the entire city -- by the

THIS WILL GIVE you an idea of how a Navy ship anchor would stand out at the Fore River bridge traffic rotary, as a tribute to Quincy Point's great shipbuilding history and draw attention to the nearby USS Salem and Navy Shipbuilding Museum. Granite Manufacturers Association whose members selected a spot beside City Hall where they wanted it to be.

It was moved in 1937 to the Fore River traffic rotary officially dedicated as the Richard B. Wigglesworth Circle in honor of the late Congressman from Milton.

Thomas Burgin was mayor at the time.

Today's mayor, William Phelan, and the City Council are being urged by the petition signers to "bring the ball back."

That's where it is supposed to be. A crown jewel beside City Hall.

And that anchor would be a fitting shipbuilding tribute -- and one that would be seen -- at the rotary.

A nice swap.

A NOTE FROM Carmine D'Olimpio, good friend, long-time fiery labor leader, and staunch Democrat:

"Your Sunbeams (5/23/02) Re. Mitt Romney as guest speaker Memorial Day luncheon of the Quincy Lions. Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs being non-political:

"Ya, right! And I have a bridge in Brooklyn I'll sell real cheap. The speech is so important it can't wait till after the elections. So much for non-political."

Well, Carmine, they said Romney was asked to talk about his experiences as head of the non-political Salt Lake City Winter Olympics. Not as the Republican candidate for governor.

But in an election year, Democrats no doubt might be hard to convince.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 POSTCARD is a view from Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs looking east down Billings Road on the left. A Joseph Klein owned the commercial building in the center. The Klein Pharmacy Inc., on the corner bore his name, but he was not the druggist nor was he associated with the Klein Drug Store in Wollaston. This store later became the Downs Pharmacy and since the early 1960s it has been Balducci's Pizza and Sub shop. For over 30 years the old W.T. Grant Company had a store in this block which later had an addition on the right. Henry Frink of Quincy published the postcard.

Dismayed Over Proposed Cuts To Elementary Instrumental Program

I am writing as a concerned parent of school aged children in the city of Quincy. I am extremely discouraged that in an age where education is more important than ever, our elected officials are once again targeting that very area for extensive budget cuts. I am especially dismayed to hear of the proposed cuts to our instrumental program at the elementary level.

There are numerous studies and statistics to show the positive correlation between students involved in instrumental program and grades.

I have witnessed children who may struggle in school academically, participate in the instrumental program and succeed and feel good about themselves. They are then able to carry over this positive feeling to the classroom and succeed there as well.

There are students who may or may not be gifted academically or athletically and have a band to give them something to strive for, something to succeed at and something positive to spend their time doing. Not only are children encouraged to work together to perform a common musical goal, they are encouraged to practice and perform individually or in small groups, again improving their self-esteem. Everyone is urged to contribute if they want to. No one is excluded. Everyone succeeds.

I urge parents to voice their support of this program. I urge elected officials to leave this program alone. As it stands there are only five instrumental instructors to cover all elementary, middle and high school students. These individuals are extremely dedicated and spend much of their own time at school fairs, concerts and any other events on the weekends and evenings when the children need them. They do this not for themselves but for the children. There are so little programs left for our children. We cannot afford to let this be cut as well.

Let's start looking at other ways and other areas to save money and for once leave education alone. We should be increasing educational programs not taking them away.

Concerned Over School Budget Cuts

I just returned home from my 10-year-old daughter's spring concert at the Montclair Elementary School. The fourth- and fifth-grade students put on a fabulous show of music, singing and dancing.

Thank you to Principal Marks, music teachers Mr. Striano, Mrs. Scott, Mr. Dusyler, dance teacher Mrs. Ronayne and all the wonderful teachers who are so dedicated to our children.

I wish I could say the same for our mayor and some of our other politicians. I can't believe this music program and several other school programs are to be cut due to the budget. I'm so sick of all the promises we hear during campaigns and of how important our schools and our children are to our city's future. And now 119 teachers may be laid off?

My 12-year-old son is very enthused with his foreign language and consumer science classes this year at Atlantic Middle School...more classes to be cut. If we lose one of these programs and even one teacher it would be a grave mistake.

I hope the mayor's five children attend Quincy Public Schools so they will be as affected as my children will be by these cuts.

Thank you to Kevin Coughlin for supporting the Montclair School and its students. Hopefully, the rest of our city councillors will support their schools and will keep the campaign promised Mayor Phelan continues to break.

Gov's Council Meets In City

By PAUL HAROLD

For the first time in state history, the Governor's Council met in Quincy at the Quincy High School Auditorium, under the leadership of Governor Foster Fucolo.

May 30 - June 5

43 Years Ago

The Council came to Quincy so people could see close up the operations of state government. The full membership of the Council participated, dealing with routine matters of confirmation of appointment, paying bills and swearing in of individuals whose appointments had been confirmed.

The appointment of Boston Juvenile Court Clerk John Lane to the Parole Board was postponed to a later meeting by a vote of 5-4.

VARIANCE FOR BOTTLING PLANT OPPOSED

The Adams Street Associates, representing residents along Adams St., appeared before the Zoning Board of Appeals to oppose the planned conversion of the old bottling plant on the corner of Brae Rd., for professional offices. The plant was built in 1948 before the area was zoned Residence A.

Harry Paven represented the opponents while Paul Hunt represented Benjamin Kurtzman, the property owner.

ELECTRIC CO. TO SEED BROAD MEADOWS

The Quincy Electric Company announced its plan to plant grass at Broad Meadows to curtail the long standing soil problem there. After significant research they thought they had found a type of grass that would grow in the clay soil that covered much of the site. The clay was dumped there from dredging projects at nearby Town River.

The company intended to buy additional land from the city to site a major generating facility at Broad Meadows.

Beechwood Life Center Announces 8th Annual Sunflower Contest

The Beechwood Community Life Center will begin its eighth annual city-wide "Grow Together" Sunflower Contest on Saturday, announces Sharron Beals, the organization's executive director.

The annual event is designed to encourage children and families to plant and garden together.

"Families throughout the city participate each year, planting sunflowers in yards, patios, driveways, gardens, and pots," said Beals. "We expect 12 to 15-foot sunflowers will soon be growing all over the city again this year."

All Quincy families, Beals emphasized, are invited to enter the "Grow Together" contest, registrations for which will be accepted until June 15 at the center, located at 440 East Squantum St.

Seeds are available at no cost at Beechwood and also at The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St. "Our good friends at Alquist Flowerland generously provide hybrid seed packets each year," said Beals.

Families can purchase their own favorite brand of sunflower seeds, she said, but still must register by June 15 to be eligible for the contest.

The family whose sunflower is "tallest" by August 30 will win a Family Fun Basket filled with games, books, toys, gift certificates, and other surprises donated by Beechwood and Quincy businesses.

The winning family and sunflower will be pictured in The Quincy Sun.

For more information on the sunflower contest or any of Beechwood's intergenerational summer programs, contact (617) 471-5712.

Retired Nurse Wins 50th Anniversary Parade Theme Contest

A retired registered nurse, born in Quincy, is the winner of the city's 50th anniversary Christmas Parade theme contest, announces George White, general chairman of the Quincy Festival Committee.

Patricia Sagoney of South Weymouth exclaimed, "I don't believe it," when informed her entry had been selected from among several hundreds submitted.

She said she and her family had watched the parade for many years and that this year she decided to submit an entry.

"I never dreamed I had any chance of winning because of the uniqueness of this year's parade — the 50th anniversary of what I consider to be the finest family type Holiday Season parade around," she said.

Her winning theme was "Golden Jubilee of Christmas Treasures."

She also said her entry coincides with her graduation from Carney Hospital

School of Nursing a half century ago.

As a registered nurse she worked both at Carney and South Shore Hospital. She is married and has six adult children and several grandchildren.

The former nurse said her family members and neighbors are as excited as she is and plan to attend the parade as part of her cheering squad.

She will ride in an open convertible with members of her family the day of the parade.

Fr. Thomas Tierney of St. John's Church, Quincy, organized the first parade in 1952. That parade consisted of a dozen entries which processed around the block adjacent to St. John's Church on School Street.

Fifty years later the Quincy Christmas Parade is said to be the biggest parade of its kind along the East Coast. This year's parade will kick off exactly at 12:30 p.m. in the vicinity of School and Elm streets on Dec. 1. It will proceed along Hancock Street for three miles in a northerly direction to its end at North Quincy High School.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Pecan Pie Bars

Each time there is a holiday dinner at our house, and everyone wants to bring something, our daughter Nancy is always called upon to bring her famous pecan pie, a family favorite.

Well, recently I found a recipe for pecan pie bars that are a bit easier to make and if you like pecan pie, you will love these bars.

Pecan Pie Bars

2 cups flour
1/4 cup brown sugar
1 stick butter
1 1/2 cups chopped pecans

1 14 ounce can of condensed milk
3 eggs beaten
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine the flour and brown sugar and cut in the butter until crumbly. Press mixture on the bottom of an ungreased 13 x 9 inch baking pan. Bake for 15 minutes.

While that is baking, combine the pecans, the milk, eggs and lemon juice. Pour over the crust. Bake for 25 minutes until filling is set. Cool and then cut into bars. (makes about 36 bars.) Store covered at room temperature.

Gorman followed in the footsteps of his father, Tom, who also served as chief of the Quincy Fire Department.

High School Band together set a patriotic tone by playing "Anchors Away."

Along with the Quincy Police Colors, Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post and the Second Marine Division Association, the Robert Nickerson American Legion Post, Gold Star Mothers, Quincy Legion Post & Auxiliary, and state and city officials, among others, were a part of the parade.

Mayor William Phelan, who was out of state, sent a letter, which said in part, "Although I am out of town today, my thoughts and prayers are in Quincy with the men and women who served our country and their families."

"On this day, on behalf of a grateful city, I salute our veterans and their families and offer you our deepest appreciation."

"Now, America once again relies on its sons and daughters to defend her liberty and ideals," McMorrow said referring to the new war that has been waged since the "cowardly act by a cowardly group of terrorists" was committed on September 11, 2001.

In reference to the adage, "Old soldiers never die, they just simply fade away," McMorrow explained the falsity of the statement, saying they do die as can be seen by the graves in the cemetery, sacrificing family and friends along the way.

"The second misconception is that, 'Old soldiers just fade away.' In most cases they are simply forgotten," McMorrow said, adding one-third of the homeless population in the United States is comprised of the American veteran.

"One thing most of them have in common, most are not looking for a hand out, they are looking for a hand up," said McMorrow, thanking his friend, Ed, for that comment when the Quincy Veterans House opened in 1998.

Raymond said, "We have set aside this day to honor all Americans who have given their lives to protect and defend our most cherished beliefs: freedom and democracy."

"As many of our brave and dedicated soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines and a lot of American families have learned...Freedom is not free and democracy must be defended," Raymond said, adding each of the values comes with a price.

"Far too often that price has been paid with the lives...of Quincy's best of America's best."

McMorrow also highlighted the many service personnel killed in a very ironic war that was fought during peacetime crossing several decades — known poignantly as the Cold War.

"Millions of men and women of our Armed Forces served in this war; they trained very diligently and in extreme weather conditions including both blistering heat and sub-zero temperatures," he said.

"Lives were lost. Some people from every branch of the services lost their lives, not by enemy bullets but in training accidents," said McMorrow, adding many of those people are not recognized as veterans because "they served during peacetime."

"Let us remember today all those who lost their lives during this cold war. Again, let us remember all those who lost their lives in combat in all wars."

"I assure you ladies and gentlemen, there is no greater sense of gratitude than when you spend time personally reflecting on the sacrifices that these fallen comrades made for you and me."

Breast Cancer Memorial Service At Quincy Medical

Nearly 100 individuals and families whose lives have been affected by breast cancer and who have strong ties to the Breast Cancer Support Group at Quincy Medical Center attended the recent ninth annual QMC Breast Cancer Support Group Memorial Service.

The service honors the memory of friends and family members who have lost their lives to breast cancer.

At the service, memorial bricks were dedicated under QMC's Breast Cancer Memorial Tree in honor of:

Lucille C. Brochu, Joy Day, Rita Healey, Geraldine McDonough, Helen T. MacIntosh, and Marybeth Vermette

Speakers included Martie Carnie, a breast cancer survivor and facilitator of the QMC Breast Cancer Support Group, who talked about the Breast Cancer Memorial Tree and led participants in a ceremonial tying of pink ribbons on the tree. Family members of those being remembered also spoke about their experiences.

Human Rights Commission To Receive $5,000 Grant

The Quincy Human Rights Commission will receive a $5,000 grant from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay Unity Fund.

The grant will support two workshops for this public, comparing and contrasting religious differences. One workshop will focus on the Muslim religion.

The Unity Fund, to promote religious harmony and an appreciation of difference, was established following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

'Teacher Mentor' Program Pays Off For Quincy Schools

More than 90 new staff members of the Quincy Public Schools were honored recently as graduates of the fifth annual Teacher Mentor program.

The program offers new teachers and specialists who were new to Quincy in September, 2001, the guidance and collaboration of a veteran colleague or "mentor."

"It is a form of support for first-year teachers," said Carmen Mariano, assistant superintendent for schools and personnel.

"We assign an experienced teacher to them through the year. They meet as a group five times a year. It gives the new teachers confidence."

Each protégé and mentor carve out their own relationship. Some focus on teacher strategies; others on procedural matters. Still others observe each other's classrooms.

"In all cases, both team members grow, and the Quincy Public Schools benefits from that growth," said Mariano.

City Accepts $4,010 In Gifts For QPD's DARE Program

The City Council voted unanimously at its May 20 meeting to accept two separate gifts totaling $4,010 to support the DARE Programs of the Quincy Police Department.

The city accepted $3,010 in proceeds from the DARE Golf Tournament. It also accepted $1,000 in proceeds from the Irish Festival sponsored by Bad Abbot's, 1546 Rear Hancock St.

Letters of thanks were sent for both donations.

Christopher Brown On Dean's List

Christopher S. Brown of North Quincy, a 10th trimester student in the Doctor of Chiropractic program at Palmer College of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa, has been named to the College's Dean's List for the ninth trimester.

Central Math Team Wins Best In Nation

Quincy's Central Middle School math team, under the direction of eighth grade teacher Beth Shepardson, tied for first place with Boston Latin School and Hunter College High School of New York in this year's national mathematics competition.

Two team members, Victor Li and Stephen Wong, had perfect scores which placed them among the top 13 scoring students in the country.

Other team members included Theresa Lynch, Meg Shea, Stephen McDonagh, Alice Ku, Gary Mei, Shirley Lam, Emily Bowes, Lisa Luo, Christine Foley and Harvey Sham.

The year long math competition consists of a series of questions that are answered by each team member. Individual scores are then compiled for a team score.

Earlier this year, Central placed first in the metropolitan area among new competitors in the Math Counts Regional Competition.

Defense The Difference As North Downs Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

For those who never saw Wayne Moynihan play center field for the North Quincy High School baseball team, they'll surely remember him and his defense after last Thursday night's annual showdown with Quincy at Adams Field.

Trailing 4-0 in the bottom of the third inning, Quincy threatened to trim the deficit after junior Jamie Chiochio singled and junior Ryan Conley walked with one out. After junior Liam Powers lined out to Moynihan, senior Mike McLaughlin smashed a ball to center that appeared to have green grass as its final destination.

Out of nowhere, Moynihan calmly closed in on the liner with his blazing speed and made the sliding catch, keeping his glove off the ground, which he has perfected, to make the call for the umpires that much easier. He has made so many of those types of plays over the past two seasons, it's about as routine for him as brushing his teeth.

If the ball gets by him, two runs score and it's a 4-2 game. A completely different game. Instead, it's just another unfortunate play in what has been a frustrating season for Quincy.

North Quincy (13-7 overall, 9-5 Old Colony League) went on to score a run in the fourth and two more in the fifth en route to a 7-0 win to sweep the season series from its city rivals, outscoring them 15-0 in the two games.

"He surely is," said head coach Larry Taglieri when asked if Moynihan is hands down the best center fielder in the league. "He played tremendous defense. As a team we play great defense, the outfield in particular. There's speed and strong arms across the board."

"Quincy only had three hits but they swung the bats well. They made a couple of loud outs. Wayno made a couple of big catches when they had some men on base. It was a close game."

Quincy (5-15) closed out its season Monday afternoon by routing Brighton, 14-5. North Quincy, meanwhile, faces Stoughton today (Thursday) at home in the preliminary round of the Division 1 South tournament.

Senior Steve Pizzi was the architect of the shutout, spinning a three-hitter with five strikeouts and two walks to improve his record to a spectacular 4-1 on the year.

"Steve Pizzi was a relief pitcher last year," Taglieri said. "He's solid. He throws strikes and he has great mechanics on the mound. I'm not surprised with the year he has had."

The Red Raiders jumped out to a 2-0 in the first inning against junior left-hander Anthony Boyle as the Presidents' defense committed three errors. Feetham drilled an RBI single to score senior Pat Bregoli, who reached on an error to start the game, and senior Neal Gavin had an RBI double.

In the second, Pizzi lined a triple into the left-center gap and scored on Bregoli's sacrifice fly to extend the lead to 3-0. In the bottom half, Quincy had first and second with no outs but failed to score. McLaughlin led off with a walk and junior Matt MacNeil followed with a bunt hit, but Pizzi settled down to retire the next three hitters.

North Quincy added another run in the third inning that started with two outs. Senior John Fidalgo smoked a triple to the right-center gap and scored on senior John O'Connell's single to center field. Senior Dennis Thomson made it 5-0 with an RBI single down the third base line in the fourth inning that scored Moynihan.

In the fifth, the Red Raiders pushed across two more runs to account for the final score. Gavin led off with a single and Fidalgo reached on an error. After an out, senior Charles Vidoli (3 hits) knocked in Gavin with a single. Pizzi followed with a walk to load the bases and Bregoli brought home Fidalgo.

North Quincy Hosts Stoughton In Baseball Tourney Opener

The North Quincy High School baseball team will face Stoughton today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Adams Field in the preliminary round of the Division 1 South tournament.

North Quincy (13-7) is the No. 12 seed and Stoughton (10-10) is the No. 21 seed. If the Red Raiders win, they'll travel to Plymouth North (15-5), the No. 5 seed, tomorrow (Friday) at 3 p.m.

Quincy Visits Randolph In Softball First Round Action

The Quincy High School softball team will travel to Randolph today (Thursday) at 3:15 p.m. in the first round of the Division 1 South tournament.

Quincy (14-6) is the No. 9 seed. Randolph swept Quincy this season in Atlantic Coast League play, winning, 15-1, in the first meeting on May 7 and taking the second game, 5-0, on May 17.

Quincy Softball Sweeps North

By CHRIS POISSON

After the Quincy High Softball team wrestled away the Mary Pratt Trophy from North Quincy after eight long years last season, head coach Mike Sedar admitted he knew nothing about the hardware and its history.

This season the second-year coach, who has guided the Presidents into the tournament for the first time in at least a dozen years, was well prepared for the presentation following last Thursday afternoon's 11-1 victory over their cross-town rivals.

"I know what this is now," said Sedar, gripping the trophy in his right hand. "Last year I didn't know what it was. It's our second one but if you look on [the trophy] we weren't on it for 10 or 11 years. It's nice to get it again. But as Mr. Miller said it's not about beating up North Quincy; it's just a fun game to play."

Although the score of the two-game series (22-4) reveals that the Presidents beat up their neighbors this year, the games were actually close contests before the young Red Raiders (2-18) self-destructed in the late stages. And Sedar appreciates the competitiveness between the two schools.

"I have to tip my hat off to North Quincy," Sedar said. "They're playing better every time we play them. That's nice to see. I just want softball in Quincy to be great."

Quincy (14-6 overall, 8-4 Atlantic Coast League) rolls into the post-season with three straight wins, including seven of its last eight. Before the start of each season, Sedar hopes his team plays its best ball by the end of the year and over the last couple of weeks he has been able to sit back as the team has clicked offensively and defensively.

"It's fun to watch them play," Sedar said. "The last three games I've just sat back and watched them play. They're just playing well, good D, good pitching and they're hitting the ball real well right now."

"We belong in the tournament," he added, "and I think we'll do all right because of our defense and pitching."

Quincy took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when senior ACL all-star Michelle Pilalas led off with a walk and scored on an error.

In the second, the Red Raiders had a great chance to get on the board when the first two batters reached, but sophomore pitcher Rachel Sorenson retired the next three to escape the jam.

Sorenson, who was named to the all-star team, went the distance, scattering seven hits, striking out eight and walking no one.

In the third, Quincy scored another run without getting a hit against sophomore pitcher Kim Walsh. Pilalas led off the inning with a walk, advanced to second and third on wild pitches and crossed home plate on another pitch that got by sophomore catcher Beth Goodrich.

In the fourth, Goodrich gunned down a Quincy runner attempting to steal second to end the top half, which seemed to spark the Red Raiders when they came up to plate as they were able to cut the deficit in half.

Quincy took control of the game in the fifth, scoring four runs to build a comfortable 6-1 lead. Junior Diane Gilbody had an RBI single, junior Liz Campbell drove in a run with a groundout with junior ACL all-star Shannon Paine also scoring on the play after an error. Andrew added had an RBI single.

In the sixth, Quincy couldn't had scripted a better feel-good story of the season. Senior Tressa Rogers pinch hit to lead off the inning and smoked a double in what was her only second at-bat of the season, sending the Quincy fans into a frenzy.

"Tressa Rogers is a senior and that was only her second at-bat all year and she had a double," Sedar said. "That's why they were going nuts. You can't ask enough of that kid. She sat on the bench all year. She's just exceptionally positive."

Rogers came around to score on Pilalas's RBI triple. Pilalas scored on wild pitch and Paine singled and circled the bases on the play after two North Quincy errors for a 9-1 lead.

In the seventh, Quincy added a pair of runs. Sophomore catcher Rose Bell, an alternate to the all-star team, singled, stole second and scored when Andrew reached on an error. Freshman Alyssia DiMuzio drove in the final run with a sacrifice fly.

BATTERY ASSESSMENT

To tell the condition of a car battery, look through the side of its translucent case and see if one cell has substantially less electrolyte than the others, an indication that the cell has gone bad. Many maintenance-free batteries have no access to the electrolyte to check the level or state of charge. Most, however, have a built-in tester that consists of a plastic wand that sticks down into the battery just before the normal level of the electrolyte. At the bottom of this is a small chamber containing a green plastic ball that floats in the dense electrolyte when the battery is charged. When the battery is discharged, the ball sinks and only the dark electrolyte is visible.

Routine maintenance is important in keeping your car at its best and safest. Don't neglect checking the battery and belts. If you are having any problems or questions, bring it to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment and the best ASE Certified technicians in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm

HINT: If the battery-test window in a maintenance-free battery reveals a light or yellow color, it is time to replace the battery.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Stroke, America's No. 3 Killer, Least Of Americans' Health Worries

If you asked 1,000 people what health condition worries them most, how many would say stroke?

The answer: 10. That's right — 1 percent.

Stroke is America's No. 3 killer and a leading cause of serious, long-term disability. Yet, it is nowhere near the forefront of most Americans' minds, according to an American Stroke Association (ASA) survey conducted in February. The fear of stroke was even low — only 2 percent — among those who'd had a stroke or knew someone who'd had one.

"Overall, the results are disturbing — revealing that stroke is still not a health priority for the general public," said Vladimir Hachinski, M.D., editor-in-chief of Stroke: Journal of the American Heart Association. "Until this changes, we can expect to see present patterns continue, lack of commitment to reduce stroke risk factors, and, of course, lack of progress in reducing disability."

The survey's results have prompted the ASA to increase its efforts in May — American Stroke Month — to encourage Americans to become more aware of their risk and how to prevent stroke. The ASA is using a four-pronged approach to raise awareness and improve the continuum of stroke care across the country:

1) Educate the public about stroke warning signs and risk factors through innovative programs, products and awareness campaigns.

2) Provide hospitals, neurologists, health care professionals and EMS staff with protocols to help improve stroke treatment.

3) Educate medical students about stroke.

4) Promote stroke guidelines to ensure proper care of stroke survivors.

The ASA's grassroots initiative, called Operation Stroke, is an example of a program that's impacting the continuum of care. Created in 1997, it educates people about stroke warning signs and increases health care emergency staff and hospitalists equipped and staffed to treat stroke patients. It also focuses on strengthening the chain of survival — a proven, step-by-step process that enables health care professionals to improve stroke care and reduce disability and death.

Operation Stroke is reaching more than 140 million people in 119 areas — including Massachusetts — through free stroke screenings and educational materials and campaigns. A local coalition of emergency medical services (EMS) personnel, health care professionals, city, county and state governments, and others implement the program.

"Operation Stroke is a top priority because it brings greater attention to stroke across the country, and it helps to save lives," said Dr. Lee Schwamm, associate director of acute stroke services at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston and chairman of Boston's Operation Stroke initiative.

"Although we've made great strides in several communities, the findings of this new survey reinforce the need for more education among both consumers and health care providers. So we must continue to explore new and creative ways to get our messages out to high-risk audiences because lives are at stake."

The ASA is also collaborating on national consumer initiatives with organizations such as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

"We know enough today to be able to prevent and control most strokes," said George A. Mensah, M.D., chief of the cardiovascular health program at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "For example, prevention and control of high blood pressure is one of the first steps to reduce stroke risk. By working together in this partnership to educate the public, we can also increase awareness and reduce the delay from onset of symptoms to effective action."

"Together, the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke (NINDS) and the American Stroke Association are working to ease the burden of stroke and to improve stroke awareness and the quality of life for patients and their caregivers," said Audrey S. Penn, M.D., NINDS acting director. "We are making significant progress in our efforts to educate the public about stroke causes, risks, treatments, prevention and recovery through increased medical research, strong public education programs and improved standards of patient care."

The ASA directs people to call 9-1-1 in response to stroke because stroke is a medical emergency. Medication can help reduce long-term disability from the most common form of stroke, but it must be administered within three hours from the onset of stroke symptoms. Every minute counts.

Stroke accounted for about one of every 14.3 deaths in the United States in 1999. The ASA figures that in the U.S. someone has a stroke every 53 seconds and someone dies of one every 3.1 minutes. Direct and indirect costs for stroke in the U.S. this year will approach $50 billion.

The symptoms of stroke are:

- Sudden weakness or numbness of the face, arm and leg, especially on one side of the body.
- Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding.
- Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes.
- Sudden trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination.
- Sudden severe headache with no known cause.

A stroke occurs when a blood vessel that brings oxygen and nutrients to the brain bursts or is clogged by a blood clot or other particle. This rupture or blockage keeps part of the brain from getting the oxygen it needs. Without oxygen, nerve cells in the affected area can't function and die within minutes. The part of the body that these brain cells control also can't function, which can lead to death.

GIVE BACTERIA THE BRUSH

While brushing and flossing teeth do not rid the mouth of bacteria, they do prevent bacteria from colonizing and forming harmful plaque. This sticky, bacteria-laden film forms continuously around teeth and gums and can cause real problems if it is not removed within 24 hours. Bacteria in plaque do their damage when they convert sugars and starches from food into enamel-dissolving acid and toxins that inflame the gums and cause them to pull away from the teeth. That exposes the root surfaces of the teeth, which are more susceptible to cavities. Thus, brushing twice a day and flossing at least once remain the most important steps that can be taken to keep the teeth and gums healthy.

Proper brushing and floss-ing, a healthy diet, regular professional cleanings, checkups, and x-rays, can all help ensure many years of oral health. We provide dental services for every type of dental problem. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer dental care for the entire family with an emphasis on preventive care. Let us show you how to properly care for your teeth. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If you floss only once a day, do it at night. During the day, more saliva is produced, which neutralizes the acids.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Of all the blessings we receive in our lifetime, the gift of patience is one of the greatest . . .

PATIENCE is love at work. Patience is a mother who loves her small child even after he has spilled a glass of milk on the tablecloth and himself.

PATIENCE is a father teaching his teenage son how to drive an automobile without getting angry at him for his every wrong move.

PATIENCE is the man in his wheelchair and the woman in her walker thanking God for their blessings and bearing their hardships with a smile.

PATIENCE keeps our tongues from uttering unkind words, keeps our hands from doing angry deeds, keeps our feet from hasty acts.

PATIENCE is God's restraining hand. Surely it is what God must have in dealing with us every day.

Taxpayers' Group Calls For Balance On School Spending

Alan H. Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association (OTA), recently called for a balanced and prioritized approach to school spending and budget cuts.

"The taxpaying parents of Quincy have a right to expect that their children will get the education they need," Cousin said. "All taxpayers have an interest in seeing the next generation properly educated. Our future depends on it."

"We must remember the reason we have schools in the first place: to teach children the subjects they must know to prepare for college or for work and to be good citizens."

Cousin said the OTA believes 119 teacher layoffs would be excessive, but said it is unrealistic to believe all layoffs can be averted. Yet he said non-instructional staff should be cut first.

"Teachers should be prepared to preserve their jobs by foregoing raises," Cousin said. "Our school staff have made out extremely well with raises in recent years. That's not sustainable."

He also said that in any budget cutting, nonaca-demic activities, such as music, art, and drama programs and athletics have to be cut first.

"Children go to school to learn English, math, history, and science, and vocational trades for those who want to pursue them," Cousin said. "The other things are wonderful; they help engage children in their education and make them better people as adults."

"We should keep these programs if we can, but when money is tight, a sound basic education must come before anything else."

Quincy House Delegation Votes To Restore $321M In Education Funding

Quincy state Reps. Ron Mariano, Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers have voted to restore $321 million in education funding in the fiscal year 2003 state budget.

The additional monies would raise the funding for education back to the fiscal year 2002 level.

"We cannot, and we will not, let these tough economic times undermine the progress we've made in our schools," said Mariano, who is also a Quincy School Committee member. "By restoring this money, we are living up to our commitment to education reform, and the children of the Commonwealth. Last week's vote to raise additional revenue was based on our intention to restore these monies to level funding."

"With the inclusion of these supplementary funds, the Quincy Public Schools will receive an additional $1.5 million of Chapter 70 support, bringing their total to over $15.1 million, a slight increase over FY02," Tobin said.

"Even during this period of economic downturn, our commitment to providing a first-rate education to our children remains one of our top priorities," Ayers said. "We are pleased to announce the restoration of these important monies."

Two weeks ago, the House Committee on Ways and Means released its version of the state budget. Reflecting the faltering economy, the budget indicated $2 billion in cuts from anticipated spending. Since the conclusion of revenues debate, the House of Representatives has been debating the fiscal year 2003 state budget. Earlier in the budget debate, the House restored funding to state programs that serve the elderly, disabled, mentally ill and mentally retarded.

The budget proposal will be sent to the Senate for consideration.

Donation By Creeds Crossing To Support Medical Training In Northeast Region Of China

Creeds Crossing Religious Articles of Wollaston has made a donation of $330 to help pay for the medical training of two novice nuns in China.

Owner Melissa Creed said the donated funds are a portion of the proceeds of a book signing held last year at the shop for the Rev. Alvaro De Silva of St. Ann's Parish, author of The Last Letters of Thomas More.

Creed said she had been unsuccessful in her attempts to donate the proceeds to St. John's Seminary as originally planned when the Rev. John Chen of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy paid a visit to her store at 25 Beale St.

As the two were talking, Creed inquired as to a worthy destination for the proceeds and Chen, recently returned from China, told her about the program, which will defer medical training costs for two novice nuns in the northeast region of China.

"I was tremendously moved by his witness," said Creed, who said another plus of the program was the opportunity to help fellow women.

Chen thanked Creed for her generosity in helping to better the availability of medical care in China.

"This is really a great help," Chen said.

Lions Club Campaign Nets 1,000 Pairs Of Glasses

When the Quincy Lions Club asked local residents last month to donate their unwanted eyeglasses, they were hardly prepared for the response.

They received nearly 1,000 pairs of glasses and sunglasses in one week.

"We were just overwhelmed by the tremendous response," said Lions Club President John Pickering. "Thanks to the generosity of Quincy citizens, children and adults around the world will be able to see better."

The Quincy club conducted the eyeglass donation campaign as part of Lions Weeks in Quincy, held April 22-28. Specially marked collection boxes were placed in businesses around the city.

Those businesses included Allied American Insurance on Quincy Avenue, Eastern Bank in Wollaston, South Coastal Bank in Quincy Square, South Shore Savings Bank at the Quincy Avenue and Franklin Street branches, Century 21 Abigail Adams on West Squantum Street, and Wollaston Florist on Hancock Street.

The business firms have agreed to maintain the collection boxes so that residents can continue to drop off their unwanted glasses in the future.

"The Lions Club thanks all the businesses that are continuing to make this eyeglass donation program [possible]," said Pickering. "We hope people will continue to help us help those in need by dropping off their old glasses and sunglasses in the future."

Prepaid Tuition Program 2002 Enrollment Opens

The 2002 enrollment period has started for the U.Plan, the state's prepaid tuition program that allows family's to lock in tomorrow's tuition at today's rates at more than 80 colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

"With many high school students preparing to graduate, families around the state are thinking about the opportunities and challenges presented by going to college," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The U.Plan offers a special opportunity to hedge against the uncertainty of future tuition increases by locking in rates as they stand today. And with some of the finest public and private schools in the nation participating, the range of choices is unparalleled."

Since the plan was implemented in 1995, thousands of families have invested more than $108 million in U.Plan Tuition Certificates.

In addition to the U.Plan, the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority also offers the Commonwealth's College Investing Plan, the U.Fund.

This program, managed in partnership with Fidelity Investments, enables families to save for qualified higher education expenses, such as tuition, fees, room and board, books, supplies, etc., through selected portfolios of professionally managed Fidelity mutual funds.

The Quincy club conducted the eyeglass donation campaign as part of Lions Weeks in Quincy, held April 22-28. Specially marked collection boxes were placed in businesses around the city.

Those businesses included Allied American Insurance on Quincy Avenue, Eastern Bank in Wollaston, South Coastal Bank in Quincy Square, South Shore Savings Bank at the Quincy Avenue and Franklin Street branches, Century 21 Abigail Adams on West Squantum Street, and Wollaston Florist on Hancock Street.

The business firms have agreed to maintain the collection boxes so that residents can continue to drop off their unwanted glasses in the future.

"The Lions Club thanks all the businesses that are continuing to make this eyeglass donation program [possible]," said Pickering. "We hope people will continue to help us help those in need by dropping off their old glasses and sunglasses in the future."

Prepaid Tuition Program 2002 Enrollment Opens

The 2002 enrollment period has started for the U.Plan, the state's prepaid tuition program that allows family's to lock in tomorrow's tuition at today's rates at more than 80 colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

"With many high school students preparing to graduate, families around the state are thinking about the opportunities and challenges presented by going to college," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The U.Plan offers a special opportunity to hedge against the uncertainty of future tuition increases by locking in rates as they stand today. And with some of the finest public and private schools in the nation participating, the range of choices is unparalleled."

Since the plan was implemented in 1995, thousands of families have invested more than $108 million in U.Plan Tuition Certificates.

In addition to the U.Plan, the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority

also offers the Commonwealth's College Investing Plan, the U.Fund.

This program, managed in partnership with Fidelity Investments, enables families to save for qualified higher education expenses, such as tuition, fees, room and board, books, supplies, etc., through selected portfolios of professionally managed Fidelity mutual funds.

Task Force and that his own organization had scheduled a Bank Robbery Conference to be held in June.

In Quincy, for instance, of the 15 bank robberies which occurred in 2001, 12 happened after Sept. 11.

Statistics provided at the meeting by the Quincy Police Department showed that 9 of the 15 robberies committed in Quincy in 2001 had been solved and that two of the four robberies committed this year had been solved.

"The good news is the number of cases solved," said Gutro, who said the meeting illustrated to him a clear relationship between law enforcement officials and the banking community.

Representatives of many local banks — including Fleet, South Coastal, Citizens, Eastern, and Sovereign Banks — shared information about specific robberies as well as ways to address the problem, including increased security, enhanced surveillance, and targeting access issues.

But Gutro, who thanked the South Shore Chamber of Commerce for volunteering to host similar roundtables in the future, said last week's meeting was a success at one level simply for allowing peers in the banking industry to talk to one another about a common concern.

"It's just very useful to get a snapshot of what's transpired, what's been resolved, and what measures can be taken and what information can be shared," said Gutro. "It all came together pretty well."

The Massachusetts Bankers Association's Bank Robbery Conference is scheduled for Thursday, June 27 at the Westin Hotel in Waltham.

Board Delays Common Victualer License Transfer

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board at last week's meeting delayed the transfer of a common victualer license to Thomas and Veronica Belamarich who want to open a business called Yes Brazil Travel, formerly Lima Travel on 136 Washington St.

Atty. Richard Barry explained that the word "travel" does not mean travel as we in this country know it as. In Brazil that word means convenience. It's a cultural term Barry said which means a welcoming warm welcome.

Barry said it is a convenience store that would probably sell some jewelry and clothing down the line.

In addition to abutters concerns about more traffic and parking, the real glitch for the refusal was that one of the neighbors, a tailor said that an empty restaurant next door to the travel store, which is supposed to be closed called "Copacabana" is actually open at times.

Last year, the license board refused "Copacabana" a common victualer license, but they had already put a sign up over the store, even though it remained empty, according to the board.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said the board should limit the space that Brazil Travel will use and told not to expand.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he will schedule a meeting between the neighbors, the new owners and the license board to determine if there is anything being conducted at the site.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said during an inspection by the health department, there was no evidence that anything was going on.

She then questioned Belamarich as to the hot Brazilian appetizers that will be served and whether they come from a licensed operation. He said there would be between 50 to 100 pieces of appetizers each day that would be fresh and licensed.

Barry told the board that "we are the new people" and will run a "first rate business." The allegations were made against Lima Travel and not Yes Brazil Travel, Barry said.

On a motion by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, the matter was tabled for two weeks and will be heard on June 4.

PATRICK WHITE, an 11-year old from Quincy who became an inspiration to others by pursuing his passion for baseball despite chemotherapy treatment for cancer, shares a moment with Mayor William Phelan shortly before the two left for the New England Aquarium, where White was recognized in the first "Keeping Kids on Track" Honor Roll presented by the United Way of Massachusetts Bay. White, whose cancer is currently in remission, was nominated for the award by Phelan, who praised White's inspiration, determination, and courage. Phelan first learned of White's amazing story from Robert Griffin, White's former baseball coach.

Bus Drivers, Monitors Protest Proposed Cuts

By CRAIG SALTERS

The city's bus drivers and bus monitors picketed outside of City Hall Monday afternoon to protest a budget proposal which would eliminate all school bus monitors and 10 of 17 bus routes in the city.

Commenting on the matter Tuesday, Mayor William Phelan said that the proposal which Supt. of Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro put before the School Committee was just that, a proposal, but one that should be considered given the city's financial situation and the estimated $640,000 in savings.

"The mayor wants to dispose of us and 10 drivers," said Diane Jurewich, steward for the bus monitors who, like the drivers, are members of Teamsters Local 122.

Jurewich emphasized the need for monitors while students cross busy streets as Willard, Washington, Hancock, and Sea Sts., saying the monitors allow drivers to concentrate on the roads themselves. "It's the safety of having four eyes instead of two," she said.

Bus Driver Nancy Milone said that monitors keep tabs on who is authorized to pick up particular students, keeping track of such things as permission slips and restraining orders, and yet,

Animal Control Officer Issues Warning On Coyotes

Animal Control Officer Donald E. Conboy Jr. has issued a warning to residents of Quincy — don't get too friendly with the city's coyote population!

"Coyotes have probably been living in Marina Bay for years," he said. "Now, with all the recent development, the coyote's habitat has changed dramatically. It now has to travel outside that area to get its food.

"Generally, coyotes are extremely shy and avoid contact with humans. In urban and suburban areas coyotes may be less likely to fear people and more likely to associate them with an easy, dependable food source.

"Some have been known to come up to the doors of homes if food is regularly present. Pets, especially cats and small dogs, as seen by coyotes as a food source and should be protected. If you live in an area where there are coyotes, it is important to supervise children and pets when they are outside.

"Make sure you are not inadvertently attracting coyote by leaving out open trash containers, feeding pets outside or leaving spilled bird seed on the ground which can attract small rodents that then can attract coyotes," Conboy said.

Early Retirements, State Aid Keep Hopes Alive

130 Pink Slips May Not Mean That Many Layoffs

By CRAIG SALTERS

News that 68 city employees have applied for early retirement, coupled with the prospect of increased state aid, keeps alive the hope that many of the layoff notices mailed recently by the city will not translate into actual layoffs.

"What we foresee happening is that many of those receiving layoff notices will be allowed to come back, either in their position or in a new position," said Mayor William Phelan. "We're still going to have cutbacks in every single department but, hopefully, we will be limiting the number of layoffs as much as possible."

The city has already mailed 41 layoff notices and expects to send four or five more by the end of the week, numbers which do not include a reported 90 layoff notices either sent or expected to be sent by the School Department.

Phelan said sending the layoff notices was the fiscally responsible thing to do, as was continuing to use earlier financial projections which have brightened considerably since Phelan introduced his $195.3 million budget to the City Council May 6.

Phelan has already pledged $1.4 million in

City Taking Steps To Force Frane Retirement

The city of Quincy has commenced involuntary retirement proceedings for Police Chief Thomas Frane, said Mayor William Phelan Tuesday.

"He (Frane) assured me that he would complete his retirement papers as of April 1. He did not follow through with that and we are taking action accordingly," Phelan said, adding that Frane has exercised his right for a hearing on the matter.

Frane has been on sick and injured leave since undergoing triple-bypass surgery Jan. 3 of 2001.

'We Accomplished What We Wanted' Cahill In 'Good Shape' After State Convention

By TOM HENSHAW
 Quincy City Councillor Tim Cahill came away from last weekend's Democratic State Convention in Worcester with a lot of good news and a little bad news thrown in.

"We accomplished what we wanted," said Cahill, who is also Norfolk County treasurer. "We were able to differentiate ourselves from the other Cahill (State Rep. Michael of Beverly). And we got on the ballot."

The bad news was that tired and restless delegates, working late into the night, failed to take a vote of endorsement on any of the four candidates for the party's nomination for state treasurer before leaving the convention at the Worcester Centrum.

Instead, they gave blanket endorsement to both Cahills as well as Boston City Councillor Stephen J. Murphy and James W. Segel of Needham, a former state representative (25 years ago) from Brookline.

"We spent a lot of energy and money on the convention," said Tim Cahill. "If we knew then what was going to happen we would have done things differently. We would have used different strategy."

It would have been to Tim Cahill's advantage to have the convention endorsement over Michael Cahill with the other candidates denied a place on the ballot with less than 15 percent of the delegates.

"We're still in good shape," said Tim Cahill. "We have got the most money and it's a big state. It costs money to get our message out on radio and TV."

Shellfish Warden Speaker At Montclair/Wollaston

Quincy Shellfish Warden Andrew Ayer will speak at the monthly meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room of Work, Inc., 3 Arlington St.,

North Quincy.

Ayer has been the city's shellfish warden for more than 20 years with the responsibility of overseeing and inspecting a harvest of Quincy shellfish worth more than a million dollars annually.

Members will represent the M/WNA in the 51st annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration June 15. Volunteers will carry the association banner as well as one of the flags which have been part of the parade in past years.

Board Gives Permission For Cafe To Reopen

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After several complaints from abutters at Tuesday's meeting, the License Board gave Thomas Bellotti permission to reopen The Ocean Mist Cafe, 307 Victory Rd., but told him he has to come back June 18 for a change of managers request.

The restaurant, formerly Spagnola's, had been closed for the winter months.

On the request from Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, the board also requested that complaints from abutters should be in writing at that time in order to formalize the complaints.

Some of the stipulations in the reopening presented by Hassan Haydar, property manager of Marina Bay, are as follows:

- No jukebox or similar equipment allowed.
 - No live entertainment allowed.
 - Three interior tables shall be of standard height, as opposed to bar stool height.
 - Food shall be available for all hours of operation when liquor is to be served.
 - Compliance with all building permit and zoning requirements in connection with license to operate.
 - Per conservation commission requirements, the green plastic roofing layer shall be removed immediately from the deck area.
 - No name change.
- Bellotti, who also owns the Alumni Cafe on Hancock

St. and was seemingly eager to please the abutters, told the board that he has "no intention of making his restaurant into a night club" and promised there would be no juke box and no live entertainment.

He told the board that if just one complaint comes before the board, that he would immediately correct the problem.

Bellotti's menu will include gourmet hot dogs including chili dogs, cheese dogs, sauerkraut chili or baked beans and all kinds of pizzas including a Hawaiian fresh pineapple and ham pizza.

They will also serve espresso coffee, cappuccino, cafe au lait.

Public Hearings Set On Wireless Communications Proposed Siting Ordinance

The City Council and the Planning Board will hold public hearings at City Hall in the next week on an ordinance that would control the siting of wireless communication facilities in the city of Quincy.

The Council will conduct its hearing on the ordinance Saturday, June 8, at 8:45 p.m. in the Council Chamber and the Planning Board will follow with its hearing Wednesday, June 12, at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room.

The ordinance, proposed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, would establish specific guidelines and requirements for the application and approval process and calls for locating antennas and other equipment in business zones.

With the astronomical growth in wireless communication for use in both voice and data transmission, providers of such services are seeking to place more and more antennas at closer proximity throughout the city to address both coverage and capacity.

Some of these antenna sites are being sought in residential neighborhoods. One such location was approved recently at the Wollaston Baptist Church on Prospect Street despite the opposition of nearly 200 area residents.

Quincy is one of a minority of communities that has not yet enacted an ordinance controlling such sitings.

Dedication Sunday In Worcester

44 Names Of Quincy's Sons On Massachusetts Vietnam War Memorial

The names of 44 sons of Quincy who were killed or were missing in action during the Vietnam War will be among the 1,537 names carved into the stone of the Massachusetts Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, which will be dedicated Sunday at 2 p.m. in Green Hill Park, Worcester.

Sunday's event is open to the public and will be attended by Gold Star family members, veterans, state and city Veterans' Services officials, and committee members.

In addition to dedication ceremonies Sunday, an Ecumenical Service will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. at the memorial followed by a formal recitation of the 1,537 names of Massachusetts Vietnam veterans who lost their lives during the country's involvement in Southeast Asia.

Those Quincy residents who gave their lives in the service of their country during the Vietnam War are: Brian P. Ahern, Richard C. Archer, Francis Buitaert, James E. Casale, Ralph Caspale, James H. Cavicchi, Thomas Chiminello, Basil E. Cinello, John P. Coughlin, Richard S. Davis Jr., Robert J. Fay, John W. Grahman, Lawrence A. Grenham, James J. Jenks Jr., James Francis Murray, George A. Nash Jr., David A. Pitts, Alfred V. Schofield, Richard D. Slack Jr., James A. Stark, Paul V. Grasso, George W. Underwood, Richard J. Vasconcellos, James M. Walsh, Ralph J. Willard Jr., Gerald R. Peterson, Lawrence E. Sirois, Joseph M. Pignato, Raymond J. West, David O'Sullivan, Martin R. Keefe, George R. Levesque, Christopher C. Donahue, James P. Hickey, Gary J. Webb, Warren C. Deyermont, Peter J. Gerry, Richard D. Walsh, James C. Daigle, George F. Fell Jr., Peter J. Landry, Leo F. Grady, Michael J. Barry, and Charles

Bitolchi (MIA).

The vision to design the $14 million statewide memorial to the Commonwealth's veterans of Vietnam began in Boston in the 1980's. After several attempts to get the memorial project underway, a partnership was formed in 1998 between the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the city of Worcester, and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Trust to go forward with the memorial's construction.

The memorial's final design is comprised of three distinct places, including: "The Place of Words," where the words of veterans are etched in stone for all to see and contemplate; "The Place of Names," where the names of 1,537 Massachusetts veterans who remain missing or who died in combat as a result of wounds received while in action in Vietnam are etched; and "The Place of Flags," a focal point and place of entry into the four-acre complex, which also includes a pond and walking paths.

Better Traffic Pattern Sought At Donut Shop

Traffic concerns at the Dunkin' Donut Shop on 366 Centre St. was discussed at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

Jack Gillon, city engineer in giving an overview of the traffic patterns, presented a plan that would shave off the existing island across the street from the donut shop which is owned by Thomas Flatley.

Gillon said Flatley has agreed to give the island to the city in order to accomplish a better traffic pattern. It would mean taking part of the island and pushing the sidewalk back Gillon said.

Gillon said ultimately, the change would result in an egress to the Route 3 ramp.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman recounted on the traffic situation and the fact that there is a great "need to address people's lifestyles" and the fact that they use "drive thrus."

Gorman suggested that owner Paul Govostes meet with Gillon when plans are finalized. Govostes said he felt that Gillon's report was "extremely constructive" and agreed to work with him as suggested.

Gillon said that Home Depot, which is being built in the area, will pay for the construction which he said would begin sometime in September or October in time for the winter months.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 6, 1933, the first drive-in theater in the United States opens in Camden, NJ. The lot covered 10 acres, with room for 400 cars.

• On June 3, 1937, the duke of Windsor -- formerly King Edward VIII of Great Britain and Northern Ireland -- marries Wallis Warfield Simpson, the American divorcee for whom he abdicated the British throne in December 1936. Edward died in Paris in 1972 but was buried at Frogmore, on the grounds of Windsor Castle. In 1986, Wallis died and was buried at his side.

• On June 7, 1942, the Battle of Midway comes to an end. In the four-day sea and air battle, the outnumbered U.S. Pacific Fleet succeeded in destroying four Japanese aircraft carriers with the loss of only one of its own, the Yorktown, thus reversing the tide against the previously invincible Japanese navy.

• On June 5, 1968, Sen. Robert Kennedy is shot in Los Angeles after winning the California presidential primary. Immediately after he announced to his cheer-

John Nicolson: A Class Act

One in a million.

That's an often loosely used expression. But it was a perfect fit for John Nicolson, WJDA's popular station manager and ambassador of good will.

John, who died Saturday at 59 after a long, courageous battle against cancer, was truly one in a million to those of us lucky to have known him. Make that two million.

A gentleman always. Never an unkind word. No complaining -- even through his long ordeal. He loved people. They loved him back.

And, he put his heart into his work at WJDA -- dedicated to the station and to the broadcasting team there.

Charlie Ross, one of his colleagues, recalls the Blizzard of '78 which buried the area under 27 inches of snow and brought everything to a standstill.

John, Ross says, was living in North Weymouth at the time and was determined to get to the station.

He trudged through the snow from his home, over the Fore River Bridge up Washington St., down Southern Artery to Brackett St. and WJDA -- a good two miles -- to join Jay Asher and other staffers like Win Bettinson, Ken Fallon, Herb Fontaine, Don Baird and Ross who had made it in.

WJDA, then a sunrise-to-sunset station, remained on the air around the clock for two days and nights keeping vital information flowing to snowed-in listeners throughout the South Shore.

John was the kind of guy you'd like to have as a brother.

A class act -- all the way.

He is going to be missed.

MOVEMENT ON THE Ward 1 political front.

Sean McArdle of Huntress St., says he intends to seek the Ward 1 city council seat incumbent Greg Hanley will be giving up at the end of next year.

McArdle is a union representative and was recently installed as exalted ruler of the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Hanley is planning to move to Pembroke but will maintain a residence here to complete his term.

YOU MIGHT SAY Mayor William Phelan is hardly shy when it comes to speaking out on issues.

So, it is not surprising to find this Harry Truman quote framed and hanging on his office wall:

"I never did give anybody hell. I just told the truth and they thought it was hell."

PHELAN

ANYONE WHO KNOWS where City Hall is also knows that City Council President Dan Raymond would someday (soon) like to occupy that big office on the third floor.

Raymond got a little taste of it last week while Mayor William Phelan was in Florida to see the Space Shuttle Endeavour launched from the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral with Quincy's city flag and items from Central Middle School aboard. (The launch was postponed until this week.)

During Phelan's absence, Raymond -- as city council president -- became the acting mayor.

"How does it feel to be acting mayor?" a friend asked.

"Really no difference," he said. "I still put my pants and shoes on the same way I always do."

As acting mayor, Raymond was asked to speak at the Memorial Day exercises. And was the guest of Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley at the joint Memorial Day luncheon of the Quincy Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary Clubs at which Mitt Romney was key speaker.

"He (McCauley) is going to be my campaign manager in 2025," Raymond jested.

McCauley, who defeated Raymond for mayor in 1981, had presented him with a supposed front page of The Quincy Sun at the recent city council reunion. The page was dated Nov. 6, 2025 with the bold headline: Dan Raymond Finally Elected Mayor.

You can be pretty sure Raymond doesn't intend to take that long.

Meanwhile, as for being acting mayor, he says:

"He (Phelan) can go away anytime he wants and everything back here will be under control."

AMONG NEW MEMBERS of the Quincy Elks are Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley and Michael McFarland, city auditor and school committee member. And soon to join them: Patrick McDermott, former Ward 3 councillor now executive administrative assistant to Norfolk County Register of Deeds Paul Harold.

A NOTE FROM an anonymous reader regarding the suggestion here that an anchor be placed at the Fore River traffic rotary as a tribute to Quincy Point's great shipbuilding history and the granite ball be moved back to city hall:

"Maybe General Dynamics or Bethlehem Steel might donate an anchor."

Maybe.

Both certainly were involved in that great shipbuilding history and should be proud of it.

'Meet The Mayor' Event At Quincy Yacht Club

Mayor William Phelan will host a "Meet the Mayor" event Thursday, June 13 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St.

Phelan will be available to meet the residents of Hough Neck and speak with them one-on-one about any concerns that they may have.

Light refreshments will be served.

"This is a great opportunity to meet with residents in a relaxed setting and speak with them one-on-one about issues that they find important," Phelan said. "I am looking forward to seeing everyone there."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of the Most Blessed Sacrament church at the intersection of Sea and Darrow Streets in Houghs Neck. The parish was established in 1915 and three years later this church was dedicated. Built of seam-face and dark granite, the English-cottage gothic style is reminiscent of the stable at the Adams Mansion. This parish succeeded the old St. Francis by-the-Sea Church on Winthrop Street that was a mission of St. John's in Quincy Center. In 1955 a major conflagration destroyed the interior of this building. It was rededicated by Cardinal Cushing two years later. Note the traffic dummy in the middle of Sea Street.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Quincy Gets Go-Ahead For Cemteries Outside The City

By PAUL HAROLD

Gov. Christian Heister signed into law a bill filed by Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa that would allow the city to own and operate cemetery lands outside the city.

Della Chiesa noted Mt. Wollaston Cemetery would run out of space within the next three or four years and there was no other land in the city to expand cemetery facilities. Land at Broad Meadows and at two quarry areas had been examined for cemetery purposes but were found to be too expensive to develop.

The city had been in the cemetery business for 331 years.

OIL IN QUARRY PROPOSED TO CURB SWIMMING

A resident of Hill St. appeared before the city council to complain about the swimming in the city's quarries and the related nuisances for quarry neighbors. He proposed that motor oil be poured into the quarries to discourage their use.

DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert noted only a few years ago the city had fenced all five quarries only to have the fences cut into and vandalized. Councillor David McIntosh said the quarry patrol was an appropriate assignment for the auxiliary police.

2,500 MARCH IN GIRL SCOUT PARADE

Some 2,500 Girl Scouts and their leaders marched in the annual parade along Hancock St. from Quincy Center to Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The highlight of the parade were a series of Mother Goose characters who set the theme for the parade.

A flag ceremony, musical program and awards program was held in the stadium following the parade. Awards were presented by Scout leaders Louise Roushey and Nancy Latoreau and Mayor Della Chiesa.

Reconsider Cuts In Quincy Schools Childcare Program

(The following letter was written to Mayor William Phelan and forwarded to The Quincy Sun for publication)

Dear Mayor Phelan,

My name is Molly McKenna and I am a 15-year-old student in the childcare program at North Quincy High School. Recently, my teacher Ms. Yaroschuk, informed me that the city would be cutting this program from the curriculum throughout the high schools in Quincy.

I'm writing to tell you that my fellow classmates, teacher and I think that this would be a big mistake. This program not only benefits the students enrolled, but also the city. Along with the ROTC, this class is one of the most productive classes in school. Not only are we learning hands-on by actually visiting childcare centers weekly, but we are having fun doing so. My class, which is a freshmen class, has a treasury for the community service work we do. We have donated to Dove, Father Bill's Place, have raised money to buy mittens for kids at a low-income day care during Christmas time, and we've participated in "Backpack Buddies," an organization to raise money to purchase less fortunate kids' school supplies. This class means a lot to my friends and I. As a ninth grader, I had planned to take this course through-out high school because I love working with kids. By writing this, I hope you will reconsider dropping this class. I don't think that would be helping the city of Quincy. I actually think this class makes the city better.

Thank you for your time, and please take this letter into consideration.

Cardinal Law Should Resign

As a middle-aged Roman Catholic baby boomer, up until recently I had felt untouched by the abuse scandal within the Archdiocese of Boston. However, with the recent 818 pages of damning documentation on Rev. Paul Shanley's priestly career, I can't say that anymore.

Between 1968 and 1972 I was a student at Boston State College and Shanley was the campus chaplain appointed by the archdiocese to serve the religious needs of both college students such as myself and all those street kids roaming the streets of Boston. I went to his Masses. I received communion from him. I listened to his sermons and now I find out he was nothing but a wolf in priestly garb.

I can't blame Cardinal Law for the late sixties and early seventies because he didn't get to Boston until 1984. However, when he did get here he could have stopped the reported cover-up and transfers of predatory priests but didn't.

When I was attending

Mass offered by Shanley, he was already known as a suspected abuser and yet the archdiocese didn't pull him out of his youth ministries. Why not?

I go to Mass at St. Ann's in Wollaston and remain amazed at the silence from the pulpit. Why aren't priests talking about this from the altar? Why are more priests speaking out against Chan- cery policies that hurt people? Why aren't they talking about the role of Cardinal Law in all this?

Cardinal Law should resign. The longer he stays, the more pain is suffered. He can not fix the problem that he helped create. Covering up is just as bad as doing bad.

Recently, I began my personal boycott of the collection basket. I will donate my offerings directly to Catholic missions bypassing the basket. The only power we have as Catholics is the power of the purse. We must use it. It was painful to watch the basket pass me by but what choice do I have?

When the Cardinal goes and the Church fixes this historic problem, then I will gladly put my offering into the collection basket again.

The Church is all of us together. The days of being sheep are over. After all, that's what apparently got us into this mess to begin with, wasn't it?

ADL Certifies City As 'No Place For Hate'

Quincy was one of 15 communities officially certified as a "No Place For Hate" community by the New England office of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL).

Ceremonies marking the selection were held recently at the Boston headquarters of program sponsor Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

The cities and towns being certified this year are among 54 communities currently participating in the statewide program. In order to be certified a "No Place for Hate" community, a city or town must demonstrate a commitment to building understanding and respect for diversity while engaging residents in at least three new programs created to facilitate inter-group dialogue and inhibit tensions and hate crimes.

Communities being certified will be awarded an entrance sign stating, "This is a 'No Place for Hate' Community in the year 2002."

"We are proud to add these 15 communities to the growing number of Massachusetts towns that are already certified as 'No Place For Hate,'" said ADL New England Regional Director Robert Leikind. "These communities are setting an outstanding example as to how to promote a respectful environment committed to democratic values. We commend them."

The event also honored communities being recertified as "No Place For Hate" and featured a special presentation to 14 cities and towns who will receive "No Place For Hate" matching grants through the generosity of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

Also participating in the certification ceremony were program underwriter, the Maxwell V. Blum Family, and program partner, Massachusetts Municipal Association.

The Anti-Defamation League, founded in 1913, is the world's leading organization fighting anti-Semitism and other forms of bigotry through programs and services that fight hate, build bridges of understanding, and safeguard liberty.

COMMUNITY CARE DAY in the city of Quincy saw more than 170 State Street employees participate in a day of service recently as part of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay's National Volunteer Week. Service projects ranged from landscaping to constructing picnic tables to escorting developmentally challenged individuals on a tour of Boston's cultural sites. Helping to kick off the event at the South Shore YMCA were, from left: Mayor William Phelan; Debra Shapiro, vice president of Volunteer Resources, United Way of Massachusetts Bay; FOX-25 News Anchor Jodi Applegate; and Ralph Yohe, president and CEO, South Shore YMCA.

Head Start recognizes that parents are the most important teachers in a child's life and welcomes parent participation in all aspects of the program.

"There is an overwhelming need for infant and toddler services on the South Shore," said Nancy Topping-Tailby, the QCAP Head Start Program director.

"With the expansion of Head Start services to children from birth to three, we will be able to provide a high quality program that reaches children from birth until their transition into kindergarten."

Impact Quincy's 'Social Norms' Presentation A Success

By LILY MICHIK,
Program Director Impact Quincy

On April 12, Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, held a unique presentation on "Social Norms" for the prevention community of Boston and Quincy at the Quincy Marriott Hotel.

The event was offered free of charge thanks to the funding provided by the Department of Public Health, Bureau of Substance Abuse Services.

The featured guest lecturer was Jeff W. Linkenbach, Ed.D., who is well known locally and nationally for the "Most of Us" social norms marketing campaign in Montana. He is a faculty member of the Department of Public Health and Human Development at Montana State University.

Kenneth Tarabelli, CEO of Bay State Community Services, made opening remarks and introduced Mayor William Phelan to the audience. Phelan welcomed all participants and underlined the significance of the social norms approach. He also reiterated his support for Impact Quincy's goals and objectives and expressed his commitment to the reduction of underage drinking among teens in the city of Quincy.

Steve Keel, director of prevention, Bureau of Substance Abuse Services, DPH, spoke on behalf of Deborah Klein-Walker, the associate commissioner for Programs & Prevention, acting director for the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services, who could not attend due to personal reasons.

Keel praised Impact Quincy for 10 years of hard work in the community of Quincy. He concentrated his remarks on the Mass/CALL grant and the last three years of very successful work done by Impact Quincy using the social marketing, social norms approach in reducing substance abuse among youth in Quincy.

The uniqueness of this "Social Norms" presentation was based on the rare educational opportunity that allowed professionals of different backgrounds and training to observe two examples of social norms approaches in two different communities — Montana and Quincy. These approaches are based on promoting the healthy behaviors practiced by the majority of the public and are aimed at improving overall health status of the community.

At the root of the social norms approach lie two theoretical suppositions (Berkowitz, Perkins):

- Much of our behavior depends on how other members of our immediate social group behave.

- Our beliefs about what other members of our group are doing are frequently incorrect. It is especially obvious when one deals with the population of teenagers, a group highly susceptible to peer pressure and social acceptance on a daily basis.

Dr. Linkenbach's presentation received a great response from the attending professionals. He presented in detail, with numerous examples, the gist of his "Most of Us" campaign. He described social norms marketing as "an innovative way to educate people about the healthy behaviors practiced by the majority of the public for the purpose of improving overall health status."

The data gathered over the last number of years clearly showed that "scare tactics" incorporated into messages oriented toward teens do not work. The information aimed at teens must be uplifting, positive and educational, reflecting real norms of the majority of young adults in a community.

Following Dr. Linkenbach's talk on the Montana Social Norms Project, Impact Quincy presented its community-based social norms strategies. This new approach was implemented by Impact Quincy in its media-oriented underage anti-drinking campaign (1999-2002) in the city of Quincy.

Alejandro Rivera, Bay State Community Services program manager, and Lily Michnik, Impact Quincy program director, related to the audience Impact Quincy's Social Norms media campaign data. This approach was achieved by using a media campaign built on promoting only positive messages aimed at the reduction of underage drinking via educational advertisements.

Some venues used were weekly "Tips for parents" in the local newspapers, billboards strategically located near middle schools, posters displayed in liquor stores and on local buses, TV commercials and other forms of educational events and training in an attempt to reach adults and youth alike. A special emphasis was made on relating to youth a repetitive message that the majority of teens in their community do not use alcohol.

Impact Quincy has been highly successful in its campaign and positive results have begun to show. It is very important to emphasize that it would have been impossible to achieve such positive results without the support of many groups in Quincy's community.

We would like to thank Mayor William Phelan for his support and commitment to our goals. Our thanks are also overdue to the local newspapers for their sponsorship and backing. We extend our thanks to Gail Peterson of AT&T and Lois Catanzaro of AK Media for their cooperation and sponsorship of Impact Quincy's TV commercials and billboard productions, respectively.

We are very thankful to the Department of Public Health for its encouragement, support and also for the funding that made this presentation on Social Norms possible.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GETTING CROWNED

Crowns are a type of dental restoration which, when cemented into place, fully cup over the portion of the tooth that lies above the gumline. Dental crowns are often fabricated for teeth that are excessively worn, broken, or have large portions destroyed by tooth decay. When a dental crown is made on the basis of an impression of the patient's dental arch, the laboratory technician can visualize and examine all aspects of the patient's bite and jaw movements from a variety of angles. As a result, the crown can be sculpted with an anatomy that may be even more ideal than the tooth's original shape. Crowns with a porcelain surface provide a cosmetic appearance that is close to nature's own.

Tom Koch Officially Announces For County Treasurer

Thomas P. Koch of Quincy, a Democrat, has officially announced his candidacy for Norfolk County treasurer before 400 supporters.

In making his announcement, Koch cited his 10 years of service as a member of the Norfolk County Financial Advisory Board.

"During the last 10 years I have learned a great deal about the finances of Norfolk County," he said.

He pointed out that the Advisory Board works closely with the county commissioners, treasurer and other department heads in shaping county finances, and is responsible for the oversight of revenues, approval of the county budget and is the watchdog of county expenditures.

"I am the only candidate in the race for county treasurer with county finance experience," Koch said.

During his time on the Financial Advisory Board, Koch said Norfolk County was recognized as one of the best managed counties in the state.

"While other counties faced fiscal crises and were abolished, Norfolk County not only survived, but continued to offer outstanding services to the cities, towns and citizens of the county," said Koch. "As a member of the Financial Advisory Board, I am proud to have played a role in that success."

Active in the community, Koch serves as treasurer of the Quincy City Club, a charitable organization, is chairman of Quincy's Open Space Committee, and worked with Norfolk County officials on regional open space efforts. He is a past member of the Board of Directors of the American Cancer Society, Quincy/Milton Unit, and is a past member of the MBTA Advisory Board.

He is a co-founder and co-chairman of Quincy Artsfest, an annual cultural event with growing regional appeal, and is also the chairman of the Quincy Flag Day Parade, recognized as one of the largest and longest running events of its type, highlighted last year by Yankee Magazine. Koch serves as the director of the Koch Club, a youth recreational organization founded by his father, the late Richard J. Koch, that is celebrating its 53rd year. He has been a member of the Quincy City Democratic Committee for nearly 20 years.

Norfolk County, which provides services to its 28 communities, has a budget of approximately $24 million. The county owns and manages the Superior Courthouse and several district courthouses throughout the county. It owns and operates the President's Golf Course and the Norfolk County Agricultural School, as well as the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. Its Engineering Department provides engineering services to the cities and towns in the county.

"Most people do not realize in how many ways county government affects their lives, whether they purchase or finance a home, or when engineering services are provided to their community," Koch said. "It is essential that the county's finances are managed prudently and accurately accounted for in order to continue providing those services."

"Another role of the treasurer is the management of the Norfolk County Retirement System, which service nearly 7,000 present and retired employees of the town and authorities within Norfolk County."

As treasurer, Koch would serve as the chairman of the Retirement Board.

"The Retirement System has assets of approximately $390 million," said Koch. "The source of those funds includes deductions from the pay of employees of the various towns and payments from the towns themselves. To keep down the costs to the towns and the taxpayers throughout the county."

"The System must be managed well and the treasurer must work to ensure that the funds are invested wisely."

Koch began a career in government when he was appointed in 1988 to serve as the director of the Council on Aging for the city of Quincy. He held the position for two years and in 1990 was appointed Executive Secretary to the mayor. During his nearly five years as Executive Secretary, he was responsible for the implementation of mayoral initiatives, executive oversight of the $120 million municipal budget and daily management of the city's department heads. In 1995, Koch was appointed the Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments for the city of Quincy, responsible for the management of 43 employees.

Koch and his wife, Christine (Keenan) live in Quincy with their three children, Cornelius, 5, and the twins, Abigail and Thomas, 3.

"With my background in local government, and, more importantly, my 10 years of service on the County Financial Advisory Board, I will bring to the county treasurer's position a unique combination of skills and experiences," Koch said. "I will work to ensure that Norfolk County remains solid financially and that taxpayer dollars are prudently accounted for and managed."

$400,000 Funding Award For Section 8 To Homeownership Program

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and Urban Edge will announce a $400,000 funding award from the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation Friday, June 7 at 10 a.m. at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The funding will be used for the Regional Section 8 to Homeownership Program. The announcement is being made during National NeighborWorks Week.

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, based in Quincy, and Urban Edge, located in Roxbury, have formed a Regional Section 8 to Homeownership Program.

This joint program responds to Boston Mayor Tom Menino's challenge for regional solutions to the affordable housing challenge for low- and moderate-income residents of Greater Boston.

HUD's Section 8 to Homeownership Program allows certificate holders to use their governmental rent assistance to go towards the purchase of a home. The NHS/Urban Edge partnership provides training programs and access to funding sources for eligible participants in the program.

A joint funding application submitted in March to Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation for this program was funded this week in the amount of $400,000. The organizations anticipate this funding will allow them to assist 30 additional families to become new homeowners.

Speakers at Friday's announcement include Quincy Mayor William Phelan, Weymouth Mayor David

Madden; Jack Mather, executive director, Quincy Housing Authority; Thomas Norton, Mass Housing Insurance Fund; and George Montgomery, Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation. Sandra Henriquez, executive director of the Boston Housing Authority, has also been invited to speak.

Century 21 Annex Realty Honors Quincy Realtors

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc. announces 11 Realtors at its Quincy office at 49 Beale St. were recently honored with year-end sales awards by the Century 21 Eastern Massachusetts Broker's Council.

The event, held at the Marriott Copley in Boston, recognized the achievements of all Eastern Massachusetts Century 21 Realtors who achieved total sales reaching between $1 and $7 million for the year.

Two were honored with the coveted Centurion Award: Agostino Confalone of Quincy brokered a whopping $7 million in total sales in 2001, while Mary P. Collins of Squantum achieved $6 million.

In addition, Stephen M. Downing reached $3 million in sales, while John Tronea, Robert L. Dussourd, Judith A. McDonough and Mary L.

O'Brien, all of Quincy, achieved $2 million. Diana Anastasio, Ita Lynch, Jody A. Walsh and Marie Peroni brokered $1 million.

"I'd really like to congratulate all our Quincy winners on their impressive achievements," said Art Foley, broker/owner and licensed real estate appraiser. "The attention, time and commitment to excellence that our brokers devote to their clients earned them notable sales figures and well-deserved industry recognition."

I am confident that these Century 21 Annex Realty broker achievements will continue to grow throughout the present year."

CHOOSING A LISTING

Real estate listings differ in the way in which the seller is committed to paying a commission. An open listing compels the seller to pay the agent if he or she brings in a buyer. If the seller or another agent brings in a buyer, there is no commitment to pay the non-producing agent. With an exclusive listing, a seller pays a commission to only one agent, no matter who finds the buyer. If the seller finds the buyer, however, he or she is not committed to pay a commission. With an exclusive-right-to-sell listing, the seller agrees to pay a commission to the agent with whom he or she signs, no matter who brings in the buyer (even the seller).

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can provide you with additional information on open vs. exclusive-right-to-sell listing arrangements. As real estate continues to be a stable investment, it becomes more important than ever for sellers to work with an experienced agent who can help them sell their homes quickly and for full-market value. We implement an aggressive marketing strategy that includes posting the home on our web site and coordinating open houses. To experience our progressive and energetic office, call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway.

HINT: While the exclusive-right-to-sell listing is the one that most commits the seller to pay a commission, no matter who finds the buyer, it is the one most likely to produce results by giving the listing agent the most incentive.

51st Annual Flag Day Parade Set For June 15

The 51st annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will take place Saturday, June 15, including a flag raising ceremony and a half-hour fireworks display.

The parade, believed to be the longest running Flag Day in the nation, will step off at 7 p.m. at Coddington Street and Woodward Avenue, Quincy Center. It will proceed down Hancock Street and head north before turning down Merrymount Parkway (Route 3A). The parade will end at the entrance to Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

This year's parade will have 11 bands, including the U.S. Air Force Band of Liberty, the Navy Band Northeast, the Massachusetts Air National Guard Band, the Boston Crusaders Drum Corps, the Waltham Legion Post Band, the Middlesex County Volunteers' Fife and Drum Band, the Boston Gaelic Fire Bridge, the Boston Fireman's Band, the IBEW Fife and Drum Band, the Boston City Band and the North Quincy/Quincy combined high school bands.

"This year's parade will feature the strongest musical contingent in the parade's history," said Tom Koch, chairman. "I strongly urge those that have never seen Quincy's Flag Day Parade join us for one of the finest family-oriented events on the South Shore."

Along with the musical contingents, the parade will feature numerous floats, color guards, specialty units and hundreds of flag-waving youngsters.

Grand Marshal will be Fire Chief Tom Gorman, who is retiring after 39 years with the Quincy Fire Department, the last 12 as chief.

A flag-raising ceremony will follow the Parade at Pageant Field. The ceremony will feature the raising of a 30-foot by 60-foot version of Old Glory by two Fire Department ladder trucks. The National Guard will perform a "Howitzer Salute" as the flag is raised.

The evening will be capped off with a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek. The show, conducted by Atlas Pyrotechnics, will be choreographed to patriotic music played at Pageant Field for the unequalled visual and audio experience.

Parade spectators can park on streets adjacent to the parade route. The MBTA's Red Line has two stops on or nearby the parade route. The Quincy Center stop is on the parade route and the Wollaston stop is a three-minute walk to the route.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration is sponsored by the city of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and the Koch Club.

Will Do Research At Stonehill College A Scientific Summer For Quincy High's Bao Truong

Quincy High School Junior Bao Truong was recently selected as one of only five students to participate in Project SEED, a summer research program at Stonehill College.

Truong, a Distinction student at QHS and a member of the National Honor Society, will receive a small stipend for his work in the eight-week scientific research program, which is funded through a grant by the National Science Foundation (NSF). Truong will work under the direction of Stonehill Professor Leon Tilley on an organic chemistry project entitled "Synthesis of Octaazadodecahedrane."

QHS Science Department Head Catherine Smith and Advanced Chemistry Teacher Carol Lane agreed the accomplishment was fitting for a student of Truong's ability and dedication.

"He really is a remarkable student," said Lane. "Not only is he bright and motivated, but what sets him apart is his incredible zest for learning, always going above and beyond what is expected of him."

At age 17, Truong's quiet tenacity — as evidenced by his contacting of Professor Tilley to find out more about the project and his request of organic chemistry books and atomic models from his teachers to prepare on his own time — has already carried him far. After arriving in Quincy from his native Vietnam three years ago, Truong spent the final month of the school year at Atlantic Middle School before beginning his high school career with minimal English skills and in ESL courses such as Smith's ESL Science Class.

"It took about two and a half minutes to realize that he didn't want the shelter of ESL, almost demanding to be placed in mainstream courses," said Smith. "He could have stayed but he wanted a challenge and rose to it."

He is now sixth in a class of more than 300 students.

Although building atomic models during one's spare time is not the typical teenage pastime, Truong is also a three-sport athlete at QHS, playing on the soccer, wrestling, and volleyball teams.

"It makes my body healthy and keeps me on a fixed schedule to make it easier to study," Truong said.

Be it sports or academics, Truong applies himself with the same passion. "If it's not fun, I'm not going to do it," he said.

And that passion, his teachers say, is helping his fellow classmates.

"He's in a very competitive Advanced Chemistry class and he still raises the bar," said Lane, noting that Truong's classmates applauded when they heard of his selection for Project SEED. "The kids like him and respect him. He's just a regular kid in the class."

Truong has two sisters and one brother; he is the son of Bay Truong and Han Nguyen.

Truong, who said science, math, and computer science were his favorite subjects and modestly claimed that his English was "good but not completely good," wants to attend MIT when his high school days are over.

"I hope I get a scholarship to MIT but I don't know if I'll get it," Truong said.

"If they don't take him, there's something wrong with that," offered Lane.

Although only a junior, Truong is a leading candidate next year to win the Woodward Award, the school's top science prize which honors Robert Burns Woodward, QHS Class of 1933 and the recipient of the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1965.

First Church Of Christ Spiritual Discussion On Self Esteem June 11

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Quincy, will sponsor an interactive talk entitled, "Who Do You Think You Are," Tuesday, June 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy High School, 55 Coddington St.

Robin Berg will share real life examples of how she and others have discovered spiritual strength and confidence that leads to greater self-esteem. Berg has been helping others discover spiritual solutions through prayer for more than 20 years.

"Who Do You Think You Are," is a spiritual response to a letter sent out from Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating to First Church of Christ and other local community organizations, asking every one to be more alert to the issue of suicide.

According to the DA, more than 90 people have taken their own lives, during Keating's 35 months in office.

Berg's talk is expected to provide insightful answers to anyone striving to improve the way they see themselves, as well as give others the impetus they need to overcome depression and/or other suicide related tendencies.

SCOTT DEWARE*A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"I don't make jokes. I just watch the government and report the facts," said Will Rogers, the great American humorist.

Everybody loves a good onliner. It is incredible how wisdom, truth, insight, humor and/or truth can be delivered in a single quotation. . . Let's look at a few:

"A billion here, a billion there -- pretty soon it adds up to real money." -- U.S. Senator Everett Dirksen referring to the money that government spends.

"I was gratified to be able to answer promptly. I said I don't know." -- Mark Twain (1935 - 1910)

"Falsehood may have its hour, but it has no future." -- Francois D. Pressense.

"I never did give anybody hello. I just told the truth and they thought it was hell." -- Harry S. Truman (1884 - 1972)

"Talk is cheap because supply exceeds demand." -- Author unknown.

"Honest criticism is hard to take, particularly from a relative, a friend, an acquaintance, or a stranger." -- Franklin P. Jones.

And finally...

"The man who doesn't read good books has no advantage over the man who can't read them." -- Mark Twain

One can indeed say a great deal in a very few well chosen words.

North Quincy JV Baseball Wins Back-To-Back Games

The North Quincy High junior varsity baseball team recently notched back-to-back wins for the first time this season.

In a 2-0 win over Silver Lake — North Quincy's first road victory of the year — Steve Reardon powered the team with a complete game, three-hit shutout.

A scoreless game, James Zapata ripped his second ground-rule double of the day with one out in the seventh inning and moved to third base on Chris Traietti's infield hit. Andy McAllister followed with an RBI single to right field and Reardon added a sacrifice fly.

In a 6-5 win over Plymouth South, the Red Raiders stormed out to a 5-0 lead as Gary Dalton and Traietti each had RBI singles in the third inning.

Dalton excelled on the mound, holding the Panthers scoreless through four innings. But Plymouth South rallied to tie the game at 5 in the sixth inning.

In the seventh, McAllister led off the inning with a double to left-center and advanced to third on a passed ball. With one out, Rich Zapata drove a two-strike pitch to deep right field for a sacrifice fly that scored McAllister for the go-ahead run.

North Girls' Track Defeats Marshfield

The North Quincy High girls' track team recently defeated Marshfield to finish the season with a 6-1 record, hoping Silver Lake could knock out powerful Bridgewater-Raynham to put all three schools in first-place tie.

Lady Luck, though, was not on NQ's side as the Lakers and Trojans tied, giving B-R the championship.

NQ's runner-up status didn't dampen its spirits as it racked up 97 points at the Old Colony League championships, finishing second behind B-R's 107 points.

Also, five members were named to the league all-star team: Makini Thompson, Jen Venuti, Katy Mercurio, Paula Morgan and Lauren Sleeth. April Rodgers received the sportsmanship award.

At the league meet, Thompson won the triple jump with a 36-foot, 3-inch leap and placed third in the 100 hurdles.

Rodgers (100), Katie Timmins (2 mile), Mercurio (high jump), Morgan (shot-put) and Sleeth (javelin) finished second. Placing fourth were Erin McFarland (400), Allie Lacey (800), Eileen Price (2 mile) and Venuti (triple jump).

Molly Griffin (400), McFarland (triple jump) and Katie Morgan (discus) finished fifth. Kristen O'Toole (100) placed sixth.

All three relay teams placed third. The 4x100 team included O'Toole, Thompson, Sarah Gregory and Rodgers; 4x400 team, McFarland, Katelyn McDonald, Griffin and Brenna O'Brien; 4x800 team, Timmins, Price, Venuti and Lacey.

At the final dual meet against Marshfield, nine different Red Raiders broke into the winner's circle en route to a 78-48 rout of the Rams.

Thompson took the triple jump and 100 hurdles to finish undefeated in those events this season. Paula Morgan (shot-put), Krystle Neves (discus), Sleeth (javelin), Mercurio (high jump), Laura Wells (300 hurdles), Timmins (mile), Lacey (800) and O'Brien also won. Paula Morgan established a freshman record for the shot-put with a 32'7" toss.

Disappointing End To Red Raiders' Season

By CHRIS POISSON

When reflecting back on North Quincy's 12-3 implosion to Stoughton last Thursday afternoon at Adams Field, the second inning may have been the first indication of the Red Raiders' late game performance.

The inning started off innocently with two harmless groundouts before Adam Telian singled to right field. David Glynn followed with a single, but North Quincy uncharacteristically missed a cutoff and the ball got by the third baseman allowing Telian to score the first run of the game.

At the time, it was thought to have been just an unfortunate mistake from a usually sound and steady defensive team. Who would have known the Black Knights would turn a close 4-3 game into a 12-3 blowout with three runs in the eighth and five in the ninth on several errors.

"It was a super ballgame for seven innings," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "Then they got some breaks and the floodgates opened on us. The score was not indicative of the type of team we have."

He's right. Yeah, the Red Raiders' season concluded in the preliminary round of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament — the second straight early exit (coincidentally, they suffered a nine-run loss last year) — but the season is not a bust because it ended disappointingly.

Fueled by a 12-member senior class, North Quincy won 13 of 20 games in the regular season to qualify for the tourney for the third year in a row and it finished second in the Old Colony League with a 9-5 mark.

"The guys are disappointed," Taglieri said. "They put a lot of effort into this season. But there are no regrets. They went about their business and did everything asked of them. They've built the tradition that I want North Quincy baseball to be known as."

BASEBALL

Maher will certainly be missed next year.

But just like two years ago when a majority of them came up to varsity and made an immediate impact, the next class is expected to do the same for the Red 'n Black.

"I'm sorry to see this group leave," Taglieri said of the class of 2002. "I knew some of them as boys in sixth grade and now they're men. They're going to be successful in life."

"I put it on the underclassmen now. They have a lot of work to do to fill these shoes. I think they're up for the challenge."

Getting back to the game, Stoughton, seeded 21st, watched its 1-0 lead last until the fifth when the Red Raiders, seeded 12th, capitalized on an error to score a pair of runs off left-hander Matthew Cremins.

After O'Connell singled, Vidoli reached on a fielder's choice and moved to second on Pizzi's groundout. Bregoli lined a two-out, RBI double into the left-center gap and scored the go-ahead run when the shortstop overthrew first on Moynihan's ground ball.

North Quincy also had their moments defensively. In the top of the fifth, Vidoli, who was playing in at third base in case of a bunt, vacuumed up a rocket off the bat Chris Pimental to turn a beautiful 5-4-3, inning-ending double play. It was the 21st twinning of the season and second of the game, as Moynihan made a nice semi-basket catch in the first inning and doubled up the runner at first base.

"Charlie Vidoli, absolutely a great play," Taglieri said. "He had his face on that ball. He was in to take a bunt away. He has had one of the best defensive seasons I have had anybody have."

North Quincy's lead didn't hold up long. In the sixth, Stoughton pushed across three runs against O'Connell to grab a 4-1 lead. O'Connell gave up four hits, including a squeeze bunt and a two-run double.

The Red Raiders chipped away in the bottom half with a run. Thomson led off with a walk and advanced to third on a perfectly executed hit-and-run with Fidalgo. But they lost an out when Cremins picked off his second runner of the game. Gavin followed with an RBI single up the middle to make it 4-3.

North Quincy didn't catch a break, though, when O'Connell lined to first for an easy double play — the third double play turned by Stoughton in the game as the Red Raiders stranded 12 runners on base.

"Their pitcher pitched real tough with guys on base," Taglieri said of Cremins, who tossed eight strong innings.

O'Connell pitched a scoreless seventh, his final inning of a gutsy outing in which he scattered 10 hits and walked no one. Pizzi took the mound in the eighth and gave up three runs on three hits and a walk. None of the balls were hit particularly hard but they were placed well.

"John O'Connell pitched an outstanding game," Taglieri said. "He had done his job. We were coming through the order for the fourth time in the game and we made the change. Steve pitched well all year. He has nothing to hang his head about."

In the ninth, the Black Knights scored five times to kill North Quincy's thought of a Celtics-like comeback. Stoughton scored in a variety of ways: a single off a fielder's glove there, a blop single here, a smoked double there and some errors here.

It's hard to believe those famed floodgates opened in the final two frames, especially after seven entertaining and well-played innings by both teams. Does anyone recall this group of players ever getting drenched like that before?

"The Milton game," said Taglieri, referring to the 15-5 loss to Milton on April 16. "But that was it."

"I wish it could have lasted a little longer," he added. "They're so much fun to coach. Across the board, there's not a bad apple among these kids."

Quincy Softball Bows After Getting No Breaks

By CHRIS POISSON

If the Quincy High softball team planned on advancing in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament, it first had to find some way to beat the bullies that roughed them up during the regular season.

You know them as the ones that crushed the Presidents, 15-1, on May 7 and shut them out, 5-0, on May 17. You also know them as the ones that feature star pitcher Tara Rose, a thorn in Quincy's side in both games.

The Randolph Blue Devils.

Each time the two schools hooked up, Quincy came into the game playing some nifty ball only to leave the field with a winning streak snapped.

Last Thursday afternoon's showdown not only ended a momentous three-game ride, but also Quincy's spectacular season as the host Blue Devils, seeded eighth, blanked the ninth-seeded Presidents once again, 3-0.

"We had a tough draw," said head coach Mike Sedar, whose team posted a 14-6 record. "An eight [seed], that we already played twice before, in their park. We knew each other really well."

Quincy may have earned a "bad" seed, but the fact that it made the postseason is remarkable considering where the program was before Sedar took over the reigns two years ago. After a 7-11 record in his first season, Sedar doubled the win total this year and guided the team into the tournament for the first time in at least a decade.

"We had a super year," Sedar said. "I asked a lot of them and I rode them pretty hard and they came through. They worked hard in the winter. They deserved everything they got."

With three seniors on the team and only one a starter — all-star second baseman and batting champ Michelle Pilalas (462) — the Presidents should be in good shape next year with a solid group of returnees and an incoming freshman class that Sedar believes will contribute in some way.

"The future certainly looks bright," Sedar said. "We'll have three freshmen back that played with us all year and we have a couple coming up that I'm really happy to hear. We'll be a force to reckon with next year."

Randolph struck first in the opening frame. Quincy, one of the top defensive teams in the Atlantic Coast League this season, committed two rare errors that led to an unearned run against sophomore all-star pitcher Rachel Sorenson.

The Presidents had a great scoring chance in the fourth inning when they loaded the bases with no outs — an opportunity to rattle Rose, break her aura of invincibility and seize control of the game.

After one out, sophomore catcher Rose Bell, an alternate to the all-star team, hit a ground ball to the second baseman. Junior center fielder Diane Gilbody crashed into her on the way to second base, knocking the ball loose which allowed two runs to score on the play.

The umpire, however, ruled Gilbody out on runner's interference, erasing Quincy's runs off the board. Rose, grateful for the call, responded by punching out the next hitter to escape the jam.

"I guess we don't deserve breaks," Sedar said. "We didn't get any calls the whole game. That was the killer. It kind of was the game."

The Presidents managed six hits off Rose, including junior all-star shortstop Shannon Paine's 3-for-3 performance, but they were unable to find a way to score a run. Rose finished with 12 strikeouts and no walks, despite being the wildest she has ever been against Quincy, according to Sedar.

In the sixth, the Blue Devils tacked on a pair of insurance runs without hitting the ball particularly hard. With runners at second (bunt single) and third (infield single) and two outs, a pop-up fell in between Gilbody, Paine and Pilalas for two runs.

OCTANE BY THE NUMBERS

Always use the specified grade of gas recommended for your vehicle. The octane requirement is largely determined by the mechanical compression ratio inside the cylinders. High compression engines (above 9.5:1) generally need premium gas, while those with lower compression can use a lesser grade. Why? The octane numbers denote each fuel's anti-knock rating. Fuels with lower octane numbers burn more readily. Because there is more heat and pressure inside a high compression engine, fuels with lower octane values can cause a dangerous condition called "detonation," whereby the fuel ignites prematurely (before the piston is in its proper firing position) and damages the engine. And premium gas will not burn properly in a low compression engine, resulting in wasted energy. It's best to use the grade of gasoline recommended by the manufacturer for your car. It's also important to keep your engine in tune. For maintenance and repairs, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO provides friendly, personal service. We also have the latest test equipment, and more important, outstanding ASE-certified service technicians. Bus Drivers, Monitors Protest Proposed Cuts alerting police when strangers are near bus stops. "The safety of children is being jeopardized," added Linda Jablonski, a steward for the drivers.

Also on hand for the picket was Paul Cannon, president of Teamsters Local 122, who said the union feels "a bit cheated" after making concessions in last year's contract which allowed city employees to operate Special Education transportation routes previously awarded to expensive outside vendors.

"We agreed (to the changes) and we are pleasantly surprised at the level of potential savings," said Cannon. "But we are feeling a bit cheated. Local 122 members agreed to concessions to give the city a big savings, but we are being slashed anyway.

"The children, parents, and workers in Quincy deserve an education and transportation system that, at the very least, is held to the present level."

Phelan responded that the School Committee was responsible for prioritizing its budget and was in the process of doing that, emphasizing that no decisions had been made yet.

"We have had many discussions but have made no decisions to date as to where the cuts are going to be," the mayor said.

Phelan did say, however, that DeCristofaro's proposal to extend the busing eligibility radius from one-half of a mile to three-quarters of a mile was still well below the state's two-mile radius requirement and could save the city $640,000 per year.

"We could save many teacher positions (with those funds)," Phelan said. "Whenever you have a budget, you have competing interests and a balance must be struck."

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton, who spoke with several of the roughly 20 picketers outside City Hall Monday, said the issue was of concern to him with regards to the distances walked by students at the Parker Elementary School.

"I have kids who walk more than a mile and that's unacceptable," said Newton.

130 Pink Slips May Not Mean That Many Layoffs

additional funding to the School Department if the state restores cuts made in educational funding, as expected, as well as more than $400,000 which resulted from a decrease in MBTA assessments.

Those funds, Phelan said, "will cut dramatically the number of teachers who will be downsized."

"We're moving in the right direction," Phelan said. "Every city and town in the Commonwealth is expecting cuts and the city of Quincy is not an exception. However, we seem to be weathering it relatively well."

Noting the expected increases in state aid, the possibility of resignations in areas such as the School Department, and the growing number of city employees taking advantage of the state's early retirement package, Phelan urged city residents to have patience in difficult times.

"I think everyone should wait for the dust to settle," Phelan said.

As of Monday, 68

employees had applied for early retirement, said Personnel Director Roberta Kety. To be eligible, Kety said, a city employee over 55 years of age must have 10 credible years of service; other employees must have 20 credible years of service to be eligible.

The incentive package, she said, adds a maximum of five years to either an employee's age or his years of service.

Deadline to apply for the early retirement package is June 14. Effective retirement date is June 30.

'Friends Of John O'Brien' Fundraiser Saturday

The Friends of John O'Brien will hold a fundraising event Saturday from 7 p.m. until midnight at the IBEW Hall, 256 Freeport St., Dorchester to benefit the family of John O'Brien, who was involved in a serious motorcycle accident in October of 2001.

The accident left O'Brien, an employee of Keyspan and an active member of the Steelworkers Local 12003 for the past 18 years, moderately brain damaged and unable to work in the foreseeable future.

As a result of the accident, O'Brien's wife, Quincy native Nicole (Manton) O'Brien, was forced to take a leave from her position as a third grade teacher at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School to care for her husband and their 10-month old son, Jack.

The O'Brien family lives in Weymouth. Nicole (Manton) O'Brien, a 1988 graduate of Quincy High School, hails from the Adams Shore neighborhood of Quincy.

Saturday's event will feature over 40 items for silent auction and over 120 raffle items as well as music, food, and dancing.

Tickets are $35 per person and will be available at the door.

Those wishing to make a donation should send a check to: The Friends of John O'Brien, P.O. Box 4064, Dedham, MA 02027.

Mayor Phelan To Cut School Bus Routes

How Will Your Child Get to School?

Mayor Phelan wants to end school bus transportation for most of Quincy's families.

To add insult to injury, he also wants to eliminate ALL the attendants who make sure our kids get on and off the buses safely.

School buses are 87 times safer than other passenger vehicles, according to the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration (NHTSA). Fewer than 10 school bus passengers die in crashes each year, compared to more than 600 children who die in passenger vehicle accidents during school hours, according to the School Bus Information Council.

ARTIST'S RENDERING of Quincy's World War II Memorial.

Wind Turbine Facility Possible At Shipyard

The now idle Fore River Shipyard is being considered as a facility to manufacture wind turbines.

Mayor William Phelan has invited several wind turbine industry leaders to tour the Quincy Point site and representatives of at least three of those companies, including General Electric, are scheduled to do this week.

Phelan said the town of Hull's recent success with the installation of a single turbine to generate the town's electricity prompted his administration to explore the feasibility of wind power for Quincy; the mayor designated P.J. Foley of Quincy to head such a feasibility study.

"Originally, the question was: would this technology work here in Quincy?" said Foley. "To study the issue costs us nothing and it would be an innovative way to reduce Quincy's utility bills."

According to the mayor's office, that study led to discussions with major industry manufacturers where "it soon became apparent that the former Quincy Shipyard was ideally suited as a site for a manufacturing facility, with its deep water port and active rail line."

Phelan, who touted the manufacture of wind turbines as a "rapidly expanding" industry, said courting such an industry made good sense for the city.

"Rather than ship scrapping, which we rejected as unhealthy and environmentally unsound, this is a clean industry with potential for the creation of hundreds of jobs," Phelan said. "Because it is located right here in our community, we must take a proactive role in the recruitment of viable uses for the site."

Once the site of the former General Dynamics Shipyard, the multi-acre parcel is being foreclosed upon by the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) following the loan default of failed shipyard developer Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI).

Pledges Effort To Raise Still Needed $200,000 For Completion

Phelan Vows WWII Memorial Will Be Dedicated Nov. 11

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor William Phelan has pledged the city's efforts in raising the $200,000 needed for a World War II Memorial in Merrymount Park and further vowed that dedication ceremonies will take place on Veterans Day (Nov. 11) of this year.

"We are committed not only to raising the funds necessary but to raising them by Veterans Day," said Phelan regarding the long-awaited memorial, which has been in the works since 1997.

Director of Operations Ronald Donovan, who is spearheading the project in the mayor's office, said the lion's share of funds will be raised from the sale of engraved bricks and granite stones which will encircle the proposed memorial itself.

Roughly 3,000 bricks, Donovan said, will be available for $50 apiece and will accommodate three lines of 15 characters each. Larger granite stones, available for $250 apiece, will accommodate four lines of engraving.

Donovan urged residents interested in purchasing a memorial brick or stone to call the mayor's office at (617) 376-1990 and request an order form.

In addition, Donovan said, a kiosk will be open at Pageant Field shortly before and during Saturday's Flag Day Parade for residents who want to pick up order forms.

A golf tournament fundraiser is also being planned for September, said Donovan, whose father, Francis "Shorty" Donovan, served as a sergeant in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II.

Donovan said he has been meeting regularly with the World War II Memorial Committee, whom he called "instrumental" in moving the project forward. Committee members are: Leonard Morris, John Donelin, John "Butch" Mahoney, Linda Montilio, Peter Gacicia, and Donovan.

Donovan, who offered a figure of $255,000 as the total cost of the memorial, said $98,000 had already been paid. The fundraising, he said, would cover the balance as well as any amenities to the memorial such as landscaping.

The approximately 13-foot memorial, which includes a four-foot base, will feature a member of the Army, Navy, and Marines as well as a woman to symbolize all women who served in World War II. There will be no figure to represent the Air Force because it was part of the Army during World War II.

The World War II Memorial is expected to be the focal piece of the southern section of a renovated Merrymount Park, which will also include a fountain, walkways, and various plantings.

'Blue Star' Flag To Be Raised In Honor Of U.S. Troops

The Quincy Veterans' Council will sponsor the raising of the "Blue Star" flag tomorrow (Friday) at 11 a.m. at City Hall Plaza in front of City Hall.

The flag honors and supports all U.S. servicemen serving the world over.

Guest speakers at the event will be Mayor William Phelan; John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion; and

Flag raisers will be Quincy Veterans Council Commander John T. Joyce and Senior Vice Commander Kenneth Menz.

In addition to the flag raising ceremony, a U.S. commemorative postal stamp will be unveiled and military songs will be performed by Massachusetts State Police Sgt. Daniel Clark.

Phelan said he was honored to take part in tomorrow's (Friday's) ceremonies to honor American servicemen, particularly those serving overseas.

"We all have to remember those who are serving their country on foreign soil," Phelan said.

The veterans council invites all Quincy residents to attend the ceremony.

Cain Loses Bid To Challenge Morrissey

John Cain's plan to challenge Senator Michael Morrissey in the Sept. 17 Democratic primary came to a halt this week.

It was the third time Cain struck out in a dispute over required signatures on nomination papers.

Cain needed 300 certified voter signatures to qualify for the ballot but City Clerk Joseph Shea said only 295 of the names turned in were certified. Illegibility disqualified a number of the signatures, according to Shea's office.

Cain, who twice ran for the Ward 3 city council seat and is the owner of a Wollaston computer products firm, appealed Shea's ruling to the Norfolk County Superior Court.

Judge Elizabeth Bowen Donovan upheld Shea's ruling.

Then on Monday, the Ballot Law Commission refused to re-open the case.

Cain says he can prove that at least 300 of 377 names he submitted are valid.

Shea said the signatures on Cain's nomination papers were fairly examined. He also noted that his office always urges candidates to obtain more than the required number of signatures to offset any that may be invalid.

The Ballot Law Commission's decision not to take further action apparently leaves Morrissey without a challenger for re-election.

Unless, Cain, or someone else, decides to launch a sticker or write-in campaign.

Tow More Hearings Set Phelan, Cahill Differ Over Budget Amount Cuts

As the City Council prepares for a vote Monday night on Mayor William Phelan's proposed Fiscal Year 2003 budget, Phelan and Councilor at-Large Timothy Cahill, chairman of the Finance Committee, differed over the actual dollar amount of cuts already made by the council.

Cahill, who has scheduled two more budget hearings Saturday at 9 a.m. and Monday at 6:30 p.m., said the council has trimmed $1,769,235 from Phelan's proposed budget of $195.3 million and urged the mayor to put some of that savings into retaining city employees who recently received layoff notices.

"Our feeling is that we'd like to see some of the savings go to hiring back those who received layoff notices, particularly in Public Works and the School Department," Cahill said.

Phelan countered that, in fact, very little had been cut from his budget, taking particular issue with $1 million in so-called cuts which he said was simply a decrease in MWRA assessments to the city. That decrease, he said, only recently became known and would be passed on to the ratepayer.

"If the council is proposing increasing water and sewer rates by eight percent (the original figure), then I disagree," Phelan said. "I'm not going to tax the citizens of Quincy any more than is absolutely necessary."

Phelan also said a $500,000 cut in Unemployment and a $50,000 cut in FICA were fixed costs which would need to be appropriated later and that a $125,000 cut in judgments was "short-sighted" because that line item had exceeded its appropriation in recent years.

"What use does it serve to cut that item when, ultimately, it's going to have to be funded?" the mayor asked.

Phelan said he would introduce a $2.1 million supplemental appropriation for the School Department at Monday night's council meeting as well as a reconfiguration of the Unemployment line item. Both measures, he said, reflect the realities of increased state aid, the recently passed early retirement incentive, and the decrease in MWRA assessments, none of which were realities when the budget was put together.

Those factors, Phelan said, "changed the budget in certain respects."

Cahill, who said he recalled similar budget cuts during the mid-1990's when he was first chairman of the Finance Committee, emphasized that it was the mayor's decision what he did with any budget savings but that the council was doing the job

"it was elected to do."

"Obviously, we have different numbers. He's the mayor and it's his call," said Cahill, referring specifically to the $1 million difference in MWRA assessments, "but we still have significant savings and I hope that as much of that savings as possible goes to those who received layoff notices. I stand by that."

"The picture is not as bad as we thought," added Cahill, who said the mayor's original budget proposal was based on "overly conservative" estimates.

Saturday morning's budget hearing will address the needs of the Fire Department, School Department, and Public Works Department. Monday's budget hearing will include the budget for the Mayor's Department and any and all items placed on hold.

Cahill expressed optimism that Monday's meeting would "tie up any loose ends" prior to Monday night's vote by the City Council.

Phelan said there was common ground between the city council and the mayor's office in that both considered the needs of the School Department and DPW top priorities in the budget debate.

"At the end of the day, I think it's a good process," said the mayor.

Police Continue Search In Attempted Abduction

Police were continuing their search this week for two men and a woman who apparently attempted to abduct three 7-year-old girls in Squantum Sunday.

The three girls, one of them the daughter of Sheriff Michael Bellotti, were playing on a sidewalk at Bay-side and Bayberry Rds. around 7 p.m. when a red van appeared and stopped.

Two white men and a black woman, according to police, tried to get the three girls inside the van, but they ran to one of their homes where a parent called police.

Dwyer Gearing Up Early

Elaine Dwyer won her school committee seat over 14 other candidates -- and intends to keep it.

She's already gearing up for next year's city election campaign with her first fundraiser set for June 20.

Dwyer was selected at a 15-member city council-school committee joint convention in February to fill the two years remaining on William Phelan's school committee term when he decided to run for mayor.

She was one of 15 contenders and after several rounds of convention voting, edged Atty. Jay Davis by an 8-7 margin. There were a number of strong candidates in the field.

Since then, she has plunged into the job.

"I am learning a lot," she says. "It's very challenging. And very exciting. And that's why I am running next year."

Right now, one of the biggest challenges is the school budget.

"It's hard to budget when you don't know for sure how much federal money and how much state aid is going to be there," she says. "Hopefully, it will all be resolved by July 1."

A new Quincy High School is her top priority and Faxon Field on Coddington St. is her site choice.

Some are wondering if state help might be gone before the school can be built and the old school renovated into a new Central Middle School.

But Dwyer says the 90 percent reimbursement from the state is still in place although it might take longer for the city to get all money.

"We are going to see it built," she says "and on the Coddington St. site."

Her June 20 fundraiser, a "Welcome Reception" will be held at the Quincy Yacht Club from 7 to 9 p.m. hosted by Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley. Donation at the door: $25.

Dwyer, who lives on Sea St. with her husband, Michael, a police lieutenant at Northeastern University, and two daughters, is no Elaine-come-lately in school matters.

She is president of the Broad Meadows Middle School PTO and vice president of the Citywide Parents Council. And she is a former president of the Merrymount Elementary School PTO.

In addition to liking the challenge of serving on the school committee, she has two other good reasons to run for the seat: daughters Kristen, a sophomore at Quincy High School and Katelyn, an eighth grader at Broad Meadows.

IT MAY NOW be a magical gee-whiz computer world but those manual typewriters are still hanging in there.

Bob Barker and his son, Gerald, keep busy at their Quincy Typewriter shop on Maple St. in Quincy Center servicing and selling restored Royals and Underwoods along with a mixture of other oldies and not-so-oldies:

IBM electric typewriters, calculators, word processors, fax machines and copiers.

"We used to repair computer keyboards," says Bob Barker. "But now they are so cheap you can just throw them away and get a new one for $26."

Barker, affectionately known as "Dr. Barker" because he makes house calls to service typewriters and other machines, has been in the business for over a half century.

The shop, originally located on Granite St., was founded by his father, Edward, 70 years ago in 1932. It moved to its present location three years later and has become a downtown landmark.

Bob started hanging around and helping out in 1946 when he was 14. Part punster and part joker he muses: "I'm still here, but I'm not all there."

Which was the better typewriter, the Royal or the Underwood?

"The Royal had a nice touch," he says. "The Underwood was good but harder to repair. Which reminds me, that's what my father used to say where my neck was -- underwood."

In addition to old typewriters, Barker has an appreciation for old cars. He is a member of the Model T Club and has an antique 1913 model. He also had a 1922 Maxwell of Jack Benny fame.

Times have changed. There used to be four typewriter shops in the area but now Quincy Typewriter stands alone.

And that's one of the reasons Bob and Gerald Barker are in a scheduled segment on Chronicle tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

"Not to be confused with that other Bob Barker who's on all the time," says Bob. "This is my debut."

By the way, if you happen to be interested in a nice Royal or Underwood of 1930s-1940s vintage, you can get one for around $79. Or an IBM Selectric for $225 to $249. Brand new they went for $800 to $1,000 but they don't make them anymore.

"And the price is right," says Bob Barker, borrowing a line from that other Bob Barker.

IF AT FIRST you don't succeed, try, try again.

And that's what Maryann Mahony is going to do.

She's getting ready to once again challenge incumbent Joseph Newton for the Ward 6 city council seat.

"Absolutely. Positively. Definitely. I'm running," she says. "I have my committee still intact and they want me to run, and I'm running."

Last year, Newton won by an 847-vote margin.

But, says Mahony:

"They say the third time never fails. And this is going to be the third time."

SUNDAY IS Father's Day but do you know how it came about?

Rev. John Swanson, pastor, has some background in his Union Congregational Church bulletin.

A woman, Sonora Smart Dodd of Spokane, Wash. thought of the idea for honoring fathers while listening to a Mother's Day sermon in 1909.

She had been raised by her father, Henry Jackson Smart after her mother died and wanted him to know how special he was to her.

He had made all the parental sacrifices and in her eyes, "was a courageous, selfless and loving man." He was born in June so she chose to hold the first Father's Day celebration in Spokane on June 19, 1910.

In 1924 President Calvin Coolidge designated the third Sunday in June as Father's Day as it is now, according to Rev. Swanson.

Other sources, however, say Coolidge supported the idea of a national Father's Day. And that it was President Lyndon Johnson in 1966 who proclaimed the third Sunday in June as the observance.

Regardless, happy Father's Day, Dads.

IT MAY BE a computer world but Bob Barker of Quincy Typewriter is happy working with his old-time friends.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1920's postcard view of Wollaston Beach showing the Squantum Yacht Club on the left and the Wollaston Yacht Club on the right. Both of these clubhouse buildings were built before the turn of the 20th century and both were destroyed by fire. Squantum was rebuilt, but only a small portion of the Wollaston clubhouse survives more than 50 years after its fire. The seawall on the left was built in 1926 and replaced in 1960. Current MDC plans call for a major upgrade to the infrastructure and streetscape of the beach and the boulevard. The newly founded Howard D. Johnson Company of Wollaston published the postcard.

QHS Student 'Distressed' Over Cuts To Arts Budget

I attend Quincy High as a ninth grade student. In light of the recent budget cuts occurring in the Quincy Public School System I have learned that the very existence of the art department is in jeopardy. As a current participant in the Quincy High art program I am very distressed to learn that this class which my classmates and I not only enjoy, but need as a way to release our artistic vision may be in shambles or possibly even not be in existence next year.

After having gone through approximately nine years of art throughout my experience in Quincy Public Schools, I have come to realize the affect the art program has on the attitude as well as the level of success in academics and otherwise of the students involved in them. It is a proven fact that the arts can greatly influence the intelligence level of an individual. Art provides an outlet for expressing creativity and greatly helps children to gain confidence when they might not be able to find it in a conventional classroom.

The art department gives students the opportunity to have their best work put on display whether it is on a program shown on the local public access station or in the arts festival. These events, which mean a great deal to the students of Quincy, would not be possible were it not for the tremendous efforts of the Head of the Art Department of Quincy. Without her there would be no one to organize art related events or provide the schools with the art supplies that we may not even have left next year if the art budget is cut.

I am asking you to consider my plea and those of the many others trying to save the art program. Please don't stop the outpouring of creativity from the Quincy Public Schools and growth and dreams of the children of Quincy.

Finds Comments On Commission 'Presumptuous'

In the May 16 article Taxpayers Group Praises Phelan, Mr. (Alan) Cousin suggests eliminating the budget of the "Mayor's Commission on Handicapped Affairs." The use of this name suggests Mr. Cousin is out of touch with the commission. Many years ago the name was changed to the Quincy Commission on Disability.

However, the name is unimportant but to state, "these commissions don't actually accomplish anything" is very presumptuous. The members of the commission work many busy hours to achieve many goals concerning disability issues. The most formidable job is assuring the enforcement of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the Massachusetts Architectural Access Regulations.

Perhaps Mr. Cousin should attend a few commission meetings prior to making a judgement on our value.

Sheets, Siciliano 'Great Losses'

Over the last four months, a lot of things have happened to the people of this city. Some good and some not so good.

The loss of Jim Sheets as mayor and the firing of Tony Siciliano were terrible losses.

I am not against our new mayor so long as what he does is for the benefit of this great city and not for his own vain glory.

Point 1: Sheets saved the hospital and it is my opinion that if he got more cooperation from the City Council and less backstabbing, he would still be in the mayor's office. He is one of the finest individuals I have ever known.

As for Tony, he was and still is a fine leader, and this city has taken a great loss. He was my boss 20 years ago when I first came to Quincy.

This mayor is going to walk a long, hard road to equal the honor that these two men have brought to this fine city.

18 Quincy Winners In Sheriff's Essay Contest On School Bullies

Eighteen middle school students from Quincy are among the 39 winners of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's "Safe School Essay Contest."

This year's 400-word essays focused on the topic of how to deal with school bullies, a subject that has prompted some lawmakers to consider anti-bullying ills.

Contest winners were presented gift certificates and U.S. Savings Bonds at an awards ceremony held recently at the Apollo Function Hall in Norwood.

QEN Announces Winners Of Inaugural Poster Contest

This spring the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) held its first poster contest, entitled "Celebrating Quincy's Natural Beauty," and saw a response of nearly 600 entries from Quincy students in both public and private schools.

The goal of the contest was to encourage Quincy students to consider the natural open spaces of their city and to develop an appreciation for those places.

"We hope that by instilling in every child an appreciation for our city's natural beauty, they will become the future stewards of the many places throughout the city," said Marcia Smith, organizer of the event and a member of QEN's Schools Outreach Committee.

The contest was judged by Michael Domina of the Quincy Art Association and the New England Water Color Society. The grand prize winners were Niamh Tarrant of Central Middle School and Patrick O'Donovan of the St. Ann School. The South Shore Conservatory in Hingham presents EDGES, an exhibit featuring water color paintings of the South Shore Art Center artists Mary Smith of Quincy and Mary Lizotte of Norwell. The exhibit runs through June.

The Staircase Gallery at

Save Gas and Money Shop Locally

One Conservatory Lane, Hingham, is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Admission is free.

Smith, a graduate of the Harvard University Graduate School of Design, has chosen tidal creeks and banks, bordering woodlands, a grassy tidal bog and upland fields as her subject matter for the exhibit.

"I am always working on the same thing: landscapes that show the weather, the changes in color that can take place over a day, the light and impressions of movement on and in the water," said Smith.

"I want to grab that special moment: the one that comes along and makes you stop dead in your tracks --- and then makes you glad you can see."

'The Whistling Mailman' Manny Andrews Honored For 40 Years Service With Post Office

Folks at 1000 Southern Artery, the elderly housing complex where the arrival of mail is often the crowning event of the day, called him the Whistling Mailman.

For the past decade, they could hear him coming before they saw him because he was always whistling a happy tune and they could set their watches by his arrival at their front doors.

For 40 years, he served Post Office customers in Quincy with a smile and a wave to the people on his route. He enjoyed being a mail carrier and it showed.

Manny Andrews retired March 31 and the other day more than 200 people showed up to honor him at a surprise party organized by the Quincy Post Office and 1000 Southern Artery.

Manny's old bosses and friends took turns praising him — Michael Powers, postmaster of Boston; Ed Davis, postmaster of Quincy; Jim Ryan, lead supervisor at the Quincy Post Office; and Paul Baharian, executive director of 1000 Southern Artery.

Brian Forni, representing Cong. Bill Delahunt's office, presented him with a Certificate of Congressional Recognition and the Excellence in Government Service Award.

A native of Somerville, Andrews spent eight years in the Air Force before joining the Post Office and moving to Quincy with his wife, Gilda, who is known as Dolly. They had two children.

"Manny has worked hard all his life with one goal in mind, to create a family environment that was comfortable," said his daughter, Maria Andrews.

"He has succeeded in achieving that and in the process has achieved much more. His children learned to treat others as they'd like to be treated and to work for what they wanted.

"Most importantly, they were shown by their father's example of character that you truly reap what you sow."

Nominations Open In Quincy's 'Neat Neighbor' Contest

Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy Park Department have opened nominations for the fifth annual Neat Neighbors contest.

Residents can nominate a friend or neighbor that maintains his or her yard or property in the spirit of a cleaner, greener Quincy. Nominations for the Neat Neighbors contest will remain open through Labor Day.

The Park Department recognizes those residents who spend countless hours working to make their yards, gardens and properties more beautiful for the betterment of the entire neighborhood.

"Residents that improve and maintain their properties are improving entire neighborhoods," Phelan said. "We are pleased to recognize those people who work tirelessly to keep their properties beautiful and hopefully encourage others to improve their properties as well."

Nominations can be made by calling the Park Department at 617-376-1254. Nomination forms will also be distributed to local community centers.

The Park Department will inspect all nominated properties to ensure that each meets the standards of the contest. All properties that meet the standards will be entered into a drawing and 25 winners will be chosen at random in September. There is no competitive judging associating with the Neat Neighbors contest.

"I want to congratulate all those people who have been recognized during the past four years," said Tom Koch, executive director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"They have added to the beauty of our city and the quality of life in our neighborhoods. Our 'Neat Neighbors' are a large part of why we all enjoy a cleaner, greener Quincy."

South Shore Quest Comes To Quincy

Mayor William Phelan was scheduled to welcome members of the South Shore Quest Committee to Faxon Park Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. to celebrate the release of the 2002 South Shore Quest booklets which will include the first Quest in Quincy.

A Quest is an educational treasure hunt on a self-guiding nature trail. Questers will follow a map and a series of clues to find a hidden "treasure box" which contains a stamp, stamp pad, and notebook to record impressions of the experience. Participants can stamp the back page of their Quest booklet with the stamp that they find in the treasure box.

The idea of Quests originally came from Devon, England in 1854. In 1998 South Shore Quests was formed by Dick Norton to bring the fun of questing to the South Shore. Eighteen quests have been established over the last three years in Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham, Norwell, and Marshfield. The trails have received over 1,200 visitors. This will be the first year that Quincy will have a featured trail in the program.

The Faxon Park Quest was created by Patriot Trail Girl Scout Council Troop 4991, led by Kathy Shaw, Ellen Humez-Rousseau, and Philomena Lewis. The scouts who worked on the trail were: Katie Anderson, Katie Carew, Genevieve Humez-Rousseau, Carolyn Lewis, Jenna Lundin, Lorie Oakes, Kathy Peters, say Witham. Also assisting were Stephanie Tetreault and Melissa Lewis.

Samantha Shaw, and Lind-

Some of the scouts and leaders will help Phelan try out the quest Wednesday. "I am excited to have the South Shore Quests come to Quincy and would like to congratulate the Quincy Girl Scouts for creating this trail," said the mayor. "It will provide a great way for families and people of all ages to enjoy one of our local parks."

Free copies of the Faxon Park Quest may be obtained from the Park Department, the community bulletin board room at the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, or on the Internet at qenet.org.

The 2002 South Shore Quests booklet with all 19 trails may be obtained from the Park Department for $4.

Bunker Hill Monument, Battle Exhibit At Historical Society

The Quincy Historical Society will host a display of souvenirs and commemoratives of the Bunker Hill Monument and the Battle of Bunker Hill June 15 through July 1.

The items on display are the personal collection of Quincy resident Mrs. Jean Ross and have been assembled over a number of years.

Included are a number of 19th century objects as well as items from more recent times. Together the objects chronicle the Boston area's continuing fascination with and changing perceptions of the monument and the battle it honors.

The Bunker Hill Monument in its time was a colossal undertaking, comparable to today's most spectacular public projects. The monument was built of Quincy granite, and its construction marked the beginning of Quincy's large-scale granite industry.

Items from the Historical Society archives detailing the monument's Quincy origins will be on display accompanying the Ross collection.

New Jersey Congressman Francis Hopkinson, a lawyer, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, poet and artist, is believed to be the person who designed the first Stars and Stripes.

He was appointed to the Continental Navy Board on November 6, 1776. It was while serving on the Continental Navy Board that he turned his attention to designing the flag of the United States.

In a letter to the Board of Admiralty in 1780 Hopkinson asserted that he had designed "the flag of the United States of America" as well as several ornaments, devices, and checks appearing on bills of exchange, ship papers, the seals of the boards of Admiralty and Treasury, and the Great Seal of the United States. Up until that time, Hopkinson had received nothing for this work. He asked "whether a Quarter Cask of the public wine" would not be a reasonable and proper reward for his labors.

Hopkinson's political foes blocked attempts to have him paid but they never denied a simple fact: The journals of the Continental Congress clearly show that he designed the flag.

On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress passed the Flag Act: Resolved, That the flag of the United States be made of thirteen stripes, alternate red, for courage and white for liberty and equality; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new Constellation, or heaven and faith.

In 1832, Captain Stephen Driver, a shipmaster of Salem, Massachusetts was leaving on one of his many voyages aboard the brig CHARLES DOGGETT - when some friends presented him with a beautiful flag of twenty four stars. As the banner opened to the ocean breeze for the first time, he exclaimed "Old Glory!" From that simple exclamation came the familiar nickname.

Learn About Buying A Home Workshop Begins June 20

Potential real estate buyers can learn about buying a home at a free workshop to be held June 20, 25 and 27 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington St., Quincy Center.

Attendees at the workshop will learn the steps they need to take to buy a home in today's real estate market. Speakers are practicing real estate professionals.

Participants will also receive a workbook with valuable website and other reference material.

Those attending all three nights of the workshop will obtain a certificate at the end of the course, which is a prerequisite for favorable Mass Housing mortgages and downpayment closing cost assistance.

The workshop will be conducted in accordance with standards set by the Massachusetts Homeownership Collaborative. Quincy Community Action Program sponsors the program and avoids directing home buyers to any particular mortgage lender or other real estate professional.

For more information and to register or learn of future workshops, call Rona Goodman at 617-479-8181 ext. 115.

Tips To Help Consumers Beat Summer Heat

According to the National Weather Service, heat is the biggest killer among all types of severe weather, not to mention that cooling can account for half the average family's energy bill.

Petro, a provider of oil and home services since 1903, offers some affordable, energy-reducing measures that can help consumers enjoy a comfortable and healthful summer while reducing electricity bills.

"Our tips are designed to help consumers take an early look at what they can do to beat the summer heat," says Petro President Angelo Catania. "The secret is to think ahead. Early maintenance and planning are key to enjoying a comfortable and healthful summer and realize huge cost-saving benefits. Unfortunately, most people wait until it's an emergency situation to do something about it. Emergencies are extremely expensive and very inconvenient."

To reduce electricity bills and stay healthy this summer, follow these easy-to-implement steps:

- Keep Cool and Lower Costs: Clean or replace air conditioning filters monthly. Maintain equipment with a professional tune-up to save the cost and inconvenience of a breakdown. Petro's Coolguard service agreement offers an annual pre-season prevention maintenance visit.
- Update Your Air-Conditioner: Today's air conditioners use 20 to 50 percent less energy than those made 10 to 20 years ago. Consider replacing your old system with a newer, more efficient model. If you don't have air conditioning, now is the time to install a new system. Petro offers central air conditioning installations and service at a cool price.
- Get a Free Home Energy Checkup: For a quick analysis of potential dollar and pollution savings, explore the Alliance to Save Energy's free Home Energy Checkup online at www.ase.org/checkup.

- Keep Thermostat Steady: Setting the thermostat colder than normal when turning it on won't cool your home faster and may cause unnecessary expense.
- Plug Leaks: Install and maintain insulation and caulking. Ten to thirty percent of conditioned air escapes from ducts not heavily insulated or airtight.
- Keep Pets Cool, Too: Keep pets indoors if possible and their water cool and fresh. Never leave an animal in a car - temperatures can reach 120 degrees in 20 to 30 minutes, even in mild weather.

Petro offers air conditioning services to residential and commercial properties from Massachusetts to Virginia. For more information, call toll-free at 1-800-645-4328.

Hiring Help For Home Care: Know The Facts

(NAPS) — If you're considering hiring someone to help with supportive services in the home such as bathing and grooming, companionship or meal preparation, a little knowledge can be more than good for you — it can save you money and help prevent legal problems.

Hiring someone on your own makes you his or her employer and means you are responsible for all the obligations that status entails. For example:

- Services — You are responsible for knowing what services are needed.
- Scheduling — You are responsible for making all the phone calls and worrying about someone actually showing up.
- Supervision — You are responsible for setting performance standards, managing, evaluating and disciplining.

• Back Up — If the attendant is sick or on vacation, it's up to you to find a replacement.

• Background — It's up to you to conduct criminal background checks.

• Taxes — You must withhold the attendant's taxes and social security and file appropriate records. Additionally, you must pay employee taxes in a timely manner. This includes State and Federal unemployment compensation taxes.

• Employee Injuries — You are responsible for injuries that occur in your home.

• Malpractice — You are responsible if the employee you hired does something wrong and injures the person receiving the services.

Working through home health care service companies generally relieves consumers of these obligations. The companies hire their own employees and people then hire the companies.

For example, groups such as Interim HomeStyle Services schedule all employee visits, train and supervise workers, cover their hours if needed and handle all employer-tax issues.

In addition, the company professionally screens all workers, carries professional malpractice liability insurance — as well as workers' compensation coverage — and fully bonds its employees.

Such services can let people who need help at home or those who care for them, concentrate on staying independent.

SNUG HARBOR COMMUNITY SCHOOL

June 13, 2002

ACTOR RICH HEBERT enjoys a warm welcome at his elementary school alma mater.

It Was Very Inspirational

The recent return of Rich Hebert to the Snug Harbor Community School demonstrated the quality and the profound impact that an education at Snug Harbor can have on students.

Students related to the stories that Rich shared because they were common experiences that existed when Rich attended Snug Harbor and are still shared today. When an alumnus of Rich's caliber returns, students realize that they too can achieve their goals and fulfill their dreams because someone who was just like them has. It was very inspirational.

A Star At Snug Harbor

Broadway star Rich Hebert recently returned to Snug Harbor Community School and spoke to students and the staff about his life growing up in Germantown.

Rich attended Snug Harbor, Broad Meadows, and Quincy High School. He went on to graduate from the Boston University Theater Arts Program.

He told the students that he took part in many activities while in school, from sports to drama, and enjoyed them all. Since graduation, Rich has been a professional actor, performing in film and television: "Law & Order: SVU," "21 Jump St.," "Oldest Rookie," "Conspiracy Theory," and "Brooklyn Sonnet."

He has performed in many Broadway productions, including The Life, Sunset Blvd., Rock 'n' Roll The First 5,000 Years. He has toured with many shows to other cities, including Boston. In fact, Rich's character, Rum Tug Tugger, from the play Cats is on the well-known Newbury Street mural in Boston.

The Boston production of Saturday Night Fever brought Rich back to the area and provided him with the opportunity to visit with family and friends. The students were shocked when Rich related how many times he had already performed the show: 700 times. Both adults and students were up on their feet when Rich said he was going to teach them one of the dances from the show. The dance was a big hit!

Rich also wowed everyone with his voice when he sang a song from Grease. The presentation ended with questions from the students. There were many. The students would have kept him there for hours. "What is your favorite show?" asked one student. Rich had no trouble answering that question, "Les Misérables. I played the lead role."

When asked by another student why he chose acting for a career, Rich responded, "It is fun for me. I enjoy going to work every day." They couldn't believe a dream that Rich has for the future: "I would like to get married in the Snug Harbor gym."

Several times Rich returned to the idea of youthful dreams becoming a reality. As he looked out at an audience of children sitting where he once sat, he reminded them that Snug Harbor kids can make it happen!

The Snug Harbor Community School is proud of its "Star" and Rich Hebert made it perfectly clear he is proud to be a "Snug Harbor Star."

A Most Exciting Day

Richard Hebert's return to the Snug Harbor Community School was a most exciting day for the students. As a former Snug Harbor student he was able to serve as a positive role model for our students.

Richard gave our students a very positive message: that they could reach their goals and be what they wanted to be through hard work. He told of his own experiences growing up in Germantown and attending the Snug Harbor School. However, most importantly, he spoke to them about his own goal to become an actor and how he achieved that goal. In speaking to the students about his experiences in the theater, he instilled in many a desire to become actors themselves.

During the past few years the staff of the Snug Harbor School has been trying to promote the arts in education. Richard's visit to the school helped us reach that goal. For the first time in many years our students put on a play this spring. Our students were inspired to take on this challenge, in part, because of Richard's visit.

Essay:

'We All Enjoyed Having Him Here'

In late January 2002, Richard Hebert came to Snug Harbor School.

He is an actor who travels to do plays. He talked to us about being an actor. He also told us about his childhood and told us that he lived in Germantown. He had one of the teachers that are still here, Mrs. White-Hebert is her name. Now they are related. He sang some songs for us.

When he was living in Germantown, he lived in my friend's house. Colleen Farnsworth is her name. When we asked questions I asked, "Do you know my Dad, Greg Hanley?" He said, "Yes."

When he went to this school, it went up to sixth grade. He went to Quincy Public Schools. Then he went to Boston University to study drama. We all enjoyed having him here.

Dear Rich Hebert,

I had a good time when you came to Snug Harbor School. It was fun to hear about your life. I enjoyed learning about you. When did you learn to act and sing so good? Did it take a long time to learn all of that? I hope you did well in the show you were in. It was nice of you to spend your time with the Snug Harbor kids. I hope you can come back sometime. I hope you had a good time at Snug Harbor. Well, bye for now until you come back to Snug Harbor School.

Thank you for coming to school. It was nice to meet you. It's cool that you know my mom from growing up in Germantown. She told me you are a "great cat" from being in the play Cats. You are a great actor! I'm in a play called The Enchanted Fluffato! It's a lot of fun. I hope some day that I can come back to Snug Harbor and talk to the children the way you did for us.

Broad Meadows Middle School Students Receive Dental Screenings

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts (BCBSMA) recently joined the Forsyth School for Dental Hygienists to conduct oral screenings for students at the Broad Meadows Middle School. The oral screenings are the third part of the Oral Health Education Program that Forsyth has implemented at Broad Meadows.

Dental clinicians from BCBSMA and students and faculty from Forsyth described for the students at Broad Meadows the importance of good dental health. Each student received a dental bag that contained a toothbrush and brochures from the American Dental Association. In small groups, the students learned major structures of the oral cavity, plaque and its role in tooth and gum disease, the importance of dental sealants and fluoride, how to choose snacks wisely, and the proper technique of brushing and flossing.

The students from Forsyth conducted oral screenings under the supervision of faculty and community dentists. After the screenings, Forsyth sent letters to parents recommending they contact their dentist for further treatment to students requiring follow-up dental care.

Nancy Norberg, a registered dental hygienist and associate at BCBSMA, initiated the Oral Health Program. She joined Barbara Fenby, health educator at Broad Meadows; Sylvia Stevens-Edouard, director of Community Relations at BCBSMA; and Sara Monajem, assistant professor and coordinator of Community Oral Health at Forsyth to implement the program at Broad Meadows.

"BCBSMA recognizes that preventive health care is the first step to promoting healthy lifestyles," said Norberg. "We believe implementing a dental program at Broad Meadows extends BCBSMA's corporate investments in Quincy and extends the existing relationship BCBSMA has with the school."

Through BCBSMA's Healthy Choices program, the Broad Meadows Middle School has received grants totaling $9,000 given over three years to implement a school-based nutrition and education program, which Fenby oversees. Since receiving the grant, Fenby has implemented Broad Meadows Healthy Choices, a program that provides a variety of sporting activities and interactive workshops that includes topics such as self-esteem, body image, nutrition, and hygiene.

"We implemented the Oral Health Education Program at Broad Meadows in recognition of National Children's Dental Health Month in February," said Monajem.

"The program consists of age-appropriate, culturally sensitive oral health education in the classrooms. Access to oral preventive care remains limited for children without dental coverage. It is hoped that collaboration such as the one created between Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Forsyth, Broad Meadows, and community dentists will alleviate disparity and help parents increase their children's safety health net."

Your Child's Physical Exam: It's About Prevention

It's never too soon to develop positive health habits. That goes for children as well as adults. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that every child have an annual physical examination by a pediatrician beginning at age 3.

By taking a few minutes to gather their thoughts and medical records, parents can help the pediatrician develop a clear picture of their child's medical and behavioral health.

"The annual physical is a great opportunity for parents to address the medical care of their child and preventive health issues," says David P. Norton, M.D., vice chair of the Public Health Executive Council of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

"Parents can also assist the pediatrician if they plan ahead for the exam, and come prepared to ask questions."

What A Parent Should Ask

Dr. Norton says parents should develop a list of questions covering the basic elements of their child's health care. These include the following:

- Is my child's growth normal?
- Should my child undergo any tests for lead, anemia or high cholesterol?
- Does my child need any immunizations at this time?
- Do you notice any developmental problems such as speech or fine or gross motor skill delay?
- The physical exam, says Dr. Norton, also provides parents with the opportunity to raise concerns regarding recurrent medical or behavioral issues.

Parents should take these additional steps to prepare for their child's physical:

- Have up-to-date records, including immunization and medical history.
- Note developmental or behavioral changes your child has experienced since the last visit to the pediatrician.
- Ask teachers and school administrators about any behavioral changes they have noted in your child.
- Think about changes in your family's medical history.
- Tell your child what to expect during the doctor visit.

Dr. Norton also advises parents to schedule the exam well in advance of deadlines that mandate a physical, such as the start of summer camp, organized sports activities or the school year.

"Every physician wants to spend as much time with the patient as needed," says Dr. Norton. "A rushed, last-minute appointment might not allow the pediatrician enough time to do the thorough physical he or she wants to do."

Communicating With Your Child
Your child's physical will likely go beyond the basics of checking blood pressure, heart rate, height and weight. Pediatricians are also concerned about activities that might cause injury or be harmful to your children's health.

"We ask children and their parents if they use seat belts or safety helmets, if their homes are equipped with smoke detectors, or if they're exposed to secondhand cigarette smoke," says Dr. Norton. He notes that the answers to these kinds of questions can assist the pediatrician and the parents in preventing future health problems.

Physicians are also concerned about the amount of time a child spends watching TV, or playing video or computer games, or if the child exercises. Lifestyle questions are important, says Dr. Norton, because of the marked increase in obesity among children that has occurred in recent years and the associated health risks.

Older pediatric patients present a different set of issues.

"Most pediatricians will want to spend some time alone with older children, particularly teenagers," says Dr. Norton. "Teens are more likely to discuss topics like drug and alcohol use, sexual activity, mental health and other important adolescent issues when seen privately."

Talking to your child about health, both physical and emotional, is probably the best way to prepare for a physical exam.

WHITER TEETH

There are three basic ways in which dentists whiten teeth. The first, performed in the dentist's chair, involves coating the teeth with a 10% hydrogen peroxide solution and activating its whitening power with a high-output light. As a result, teeth usually lighten about 3-5 shades. Then, there is dentist-supervised home whitening, which involves the use of a custom-fitted tray that the patient uses to introduce the whitening solution to teeth. The tray is worn either for a few hours during the day or overnight. Patients will notice whiter teeth after a few sessions. And, lastly, there is laser tooth whitening, which uses a laser to activate the whitening solution to whiten the tooth enamel. The results are immediate and dramatic. Are you afraid to smile because of teeth that have grown yellow or brown? We can help you regain that bright smile. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Help is available through cosmetic dentistry. Morrisette Wants Mystique Back

By CHRIS POISSON

After suffering through its first losing season in 55 years, the Morrisette Legion Post baseball team is poised, determined and faddi any other positive adjective here) to bounce back and regain its mystique in 2002.

And on Monday night it stepped out to a strong start with a 4-2 victory over Weymouth in Braintree. Morrisette (1-0) will square off against rival Quincy (0-1) tomorrow (Friday) night at Adams Field.

Anthony Boyle, a 6-foot, 4-inch, lanky left-hander from Quincy High, pitched a sensational game, scattering six hits and one earned run while walking just two and striking out four.

Although Morrisette managed only four hits, it capitalized on several Milton miscues and backed Boyle with great defense en route to the opening day win.

Trailing 1-0, Quincy struck for a pair of runs in the fourth when Steve Pizzi of North Quincy High ripped a two-out, two-run single up the middle with the bases loaded.

Weymouth tied the game at 2 in the top of the sixth, but Morrisette answered with two runs in the bottom half. Tom Hughes of Salisbury reached on a beautiful drag bunt. Liam Powers (QHS) beat out an infield hit and Pat Bregoli (NQHS) walked to load the bases.

Pizzi hit into a fielder's choice, as Hughes was out at home but the catcher's throw to first sailed into right field allowing Powers to score the go-ahead run. Bregoli later scored from third base on a wild pitch.

"A great game," said coach Ray Cattaneo. "For our first game, we did well. The defense and pitching held up for all seven innings. Not too much hitting, but we had a couple of breaks with runs in later innings."

LEGION BASEBALL

"We should be OK," he added. "We look better each time we play. We have a great bunch of kids. We're shooting for the playoffs and the championship, right for the top. But there are some tough teams in this league."

It Boyle can continue to deliver these type of outings. Morrisette will have a solid group of starting pitchers that could carry the team into the postseason. John O'Connell and Pizzi, accomplished starters on the North Quincy High tourney-qualifying team, round out the rotation.

"I'll tell you the difference in Boyle: [pitching coach] Tom Malvesti," Cattaneo said. "He's worked with him since the end of the high school season, helping him with his mechanics on the mound. He's a different pitcher now and you can see it."

Other players who will see time on the hill mostly in relief are Dom Delgado (NQHS), Robert Muollo (QHS), Patrick Duff of Archbishop Williams and James French of B.C. High.

Cattaneo said the infield looks strong defensively. Neal Gavin (NQHS) is at first base, Powers at second, Pizzi mans third base and Donald Cook of Catholic Memorial fields the shortstop position. Craig Keenan (QHS) and Delgado will also play third.

Hughes returns behind the plate and will be backed up by Joe Priscella (QHS) and Raymond Marchand, a 14-year-old from Quincy High who Cattaneo said has a great arm and will get some time.

In the outfield, Muollo rests in left. Bregoli patrols center and Brian O'Hanley (B.C. High) is in right. Coming off the bench are Duff, Marchand, Boyle and Priscella.

St. John's Golf Outing At Presidents Golf Course

The 10th annual St. John's Golf Outing will be held Monday, July 15, at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

The tournament will tee off with an 8 a.m. shotgun start, Florida style. A sellout last year, the tournament is limited to 112 players and applications will be honored on a first come, first serve basis.

The fee is $80 per person, which includes green fees, a golf cart, tee package and prizes. Foursomes are accepted or the committee will assign individuals to a team. The cost to sponsor a hole is $100.

Checks should be made payable to St. John's Golf Outing and mailed to Declan Breslin, 44 Pearl St., Apt. 1, Quincy, MA 02169, or to Michael Gilcoine, 60 Parker St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Preston A. Carroll, Jr. Memorial Gymnasium Dedicated At Sterling Middle School

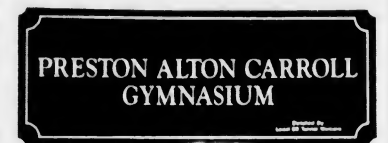

STERLING MIDDLE SCHOOL gym was recently dedicated to Preston Alton Carroll Jr., a former standout athlete at Sterling and Quincy High who died last August at the age of 43. His daughter, Lauren Carroll, and father, Preston Carroll Sr., are shown here at the ceremony holding a replica of the plaque to be placed in the gym. They are accompanied by, from the left, Earl Metzler, Sterling principal; Sean Carroll, brother; Cynthia Lee, sister; Dianne Ramponi, former wife; Peter Carroll, brother; and Tim Cahill, friend.

FRAMED MEMORABILIA of Preston A. Carroll Jr.'s athletic career at Quincy High was hung on the gym wall. A four-sport star in basketball, baseball, football and track, Carroll was elected to the school's Hall of Fame in football and baseball and was the state champion in the hurdles. He graduated from Northeastern University where he played football and baseball and later played in the Philadelphia Phillies' farm system, reaching the Double A level.

UNDER THE SIGN named after his friend, Tim Cahill addresses the audience about Preston A. Carroll Jr. at a ceremony dedicating the gym at Sterling Middle School in memory of the former star athlete.

Expectations High For Quincy

The high school seniors are graduating, the days are getting longer and the weather is finally warming up, which signals the start of another American Legion Baseball campaign.

Quincy Legion Post, which begins its 63rd year, is coming off one of its most successful and exciting seasons in recent memory as it qualified for the postseason.

After opening the 2002 season last Saturday with an 8-1 loss at Milton, Quincy (0-1) will look to rebound tomorrow (Friday) night at 8 when it battles rival Morrisette (1-0) at Adams Field in Zone 6 action.

Despite the opening-day loss, the expectations are high as Quincy will be led by eight returning players, five of whom played an integral role on the North Quincy High tourney-qualifying team.

Wayne Moynihan, one of the best center fielders in the area, will also provide speed and a quick bat from the lead-off position. Second baseman Dennis Thomson will be the vocal leader and will be expected to swing a big bat.

John Fidalgo is a talented catcher who is like a second coach on the field. Charlie Vidoli is a slick-fielding third baseman with a solid bat. And Mike Feetham, a hard-throwing, 6-foot, 3-inch right-hander, will be the ace of the staff and can also play first base and the outfield.

Chris Lockhead and Bryan Thornton are 2001 graduates of North Quincy. Lockhead, who is currently playing baseball at UMass-Dartmouth, will provide leadership and excellent baseball sense at shortstop. Thornton is slated to be the No. 2 pitcher who can also play the outfield.

Patrick Jaehrig is the last returning player and the lone member of the Archbishop Williams team. Jaehrig was voted a first-team all-star this spring as he helped AW to a first-place finish in the Catholic Central League. An excellent defensive first baseman, he may also pitch.

Newcomers for Quincy include four North Quincy players: outfielders Mark Maher, Joe Fitzpatrick and Sean Sullivan and utility man John Mateu. Maher, Mateu and Sullivan played for North Quincy's tourney team and have good batting eyes. Fitzpatrick is a speedy outfielder who played for Morrisette Post the past two seasons.

There are four players from B.C. High. Michael Maloney is a utility player with a great attitude. Brendan McDonald is a powerful hit-

PUDDLES BELOW, TROUBLES AHEAD

Anytime there is a puddle of fluid beneath your car, have the fluid loss investigated for leaks. If you just keep topping off the affected system, you could be setting yourself up for trouble. A pool of reddish fluid, which is typically transmission fluid, may be indicative of a damaged cooling line, failing pump, or a bad gasket. Honey-brown fluid is either oil or power-steering fluid. Green fluid is engine coolant, while orange fluid is long-life engine coolant. Check for the source of the leak near the radiator or the rubber hoses that connect it to the engine. These hoses typically last three to four years before they begin to degrade and need to be replaced.

A regular fluid level checkup, coupled with regularly scheduled maintenance, can greatly extend the life of your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be informed about everything in your car whether or not your car is leased. Our friendly, professional ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Hours: Mon-Fri. 9am-5pm, Sat. 7am-5pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." You can rely on us for the best in automotive service.

Former Major League Baseball player and manager Sam Mele of Quincy will be inducted into the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame as an honorary inductee Tuesday, June 25, at a banquet at the Quincy Sons of Italy.

An outfielder, Mele made his professional debut in 1947 with the Boston Red Sox and ended up playing for six teams in his 10-year career, including the Washington Senators, Chicago White Sox, Baltimore Orioles, Cincinnati Reds and Cleveland Indians.

Mele enjoyed his best season in 1951 with the Senators when he led the league in doubles (36) and finished sixth in RBI (66) and seventh in triples (7).

In 1961, he managed the Minnesota Twins (formerly the Senators) in their inaugural season. He posted a .546 winning percentage in seven seasons, leading the Twins to the American League pennant in 1965, where they lost the World Series in seven games to Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In addition, the Hall of Fame Committee announces Robert Lints (class of 1945) and James Maze (1978) will also be inducted into the Hall of Fame, joining the previous eight already announced by the committee.

The other inductees are Armando Reggiani (1940), Richard Foy (1950), Dr. Richard DiCristofaro (1970), Russell MacDonald (1971), Gerald Bugden (1973), John Balzano (1983), Daniel Biagini (1988) and Wayne Chambers (1988).

The Alumni Association will also award the Paul Grasso Memorial Scholarship to a senior who will further his education and baseball skills at the college level.

Grasso graduated from Quincy High in 1967 and was killed while serving his country in Vietnam.

The Hall of Fame Committee will again award a scholarship in the name of Joseph Conti and will add two new scholarships in the names of Nick Malvestri and Preston Carroll, who both died in the past year.

The Alumni's "Special Awards" will go to Anthony Delmonico for the many years coaching Koch Club Baseball and to Everett Goodrich for the many years coaching and running Quincy Youth Baseball.

The social hour will be from 6 to 7 p.m. with dinner and award ceremonies to follow. To purchase tickets for the banquet or place an ad in the program, call Joe Brill (617-770-4813), Ray Cattaneo (617-472-6843), Billy Corcoran (617-479-2950) or e-mail QHSBBAA at jab24517@attbi.com.

ter with the versatility to play infield, outfield and pitcher.

David Jaehnig and Dean Sandomato were stars on the very successful freshman team. Jaehnig is a sweet-swinging lefty who can play all nine positions. Sandomato is a power pitcher who led the conference in strikeouts.

Stephen Williams is the lone player from Catholic Memorial. Williams, who plays with great intensity, was the Quincy Babe Ruth MVP last year and can catch, pitch and play third base.

Quincy High is represented by James Chioecchio, a fleet-footed outfielder who was one of the top hitters for the improving Presidents.

The final member of the team, Andrew Loud, is an eighth-grader at Atlantic Middle School. The youngest player in the league at 14, he is also a very talented and poised middle infielder.

Quincy is coached by Mark Jaehnig and Marc Swirbalus. The scorekeeper is Charlie Jaehnig and Andrew Jaehnig is the bat boy.

Red Cross Golf Classic July 22

The 17th annual American Red Cross Golf Classic will be held Monday, July 22, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

In addition to the golf tournament, the day-long event will feature a live and silent auction, raffles, a poker rally, a box lunch and dinner. New England Cable News sports personality Jimmy Young will serve as Master of Ceremonies.

"We are working hard to get the word out about this year's tournament," said Bob Petrie, senior vice president of South Coastal Bank who serves as the golf committee chair. "We're stressing that you don't have to golf to have fun and get involved with this event. There are many levels of sponsorship and donation opportunities."

The committee has expanded upon last year's sponsorship plan by providing for tee, green and sand trap sponsors for each fairway. Also, businesses will have a chance to be recognized by advertising in the tournament program book.

Quincy-based real estate firm Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. will again serve as the primary sponsor of the event. Congressman William Delahunt has been named as Honorary Chairperson.

The tournament is a major fund-raising event for the South Area Council of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay. The Red Cross golf committee would like to attract close to 140 golfers, in addition to sponsors and donors, to help make the event a success. Last year's tournament raised $11,951 and the committee's goal this year is to raise $20,000.

For more information contact the South Area Red Cross office at 617-770-2600.

Jimmy Fund Baseball Tourney Here

Quincy Youth Baseball, the city of Quincy and the Parks Department will sponsor the second annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament at McCoy, Mitchell, Merrymount and Adams fields beginning July 26.

The tournament is played in honor of Patrick White, an 11-year-old QYB player who has battled Rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, over the past two years. Funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Services, which offers comprehensive, multidisciplinary diagnosis, treatment, consultation services and long-term follow-up for pediatric and adolescent patients with any type of solid tumor.

Last year the tourney raised $9,000 for the Jimmy Fund.

"The Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament is one of the most remarkable fund-raisers that Quincy supports," said Mayor William Phelan. "There is no better representative for the Jimmy Fund in Quincy for the past two years than Patrick White, whose courage and determination is an example for all. I am hopeful that the success of this tournament in Quincy will continue to grow in the years to come."

The tourney will feature teams of 11 year olds and 13 year olds from Quincy and surrounding communities.

Checks should be made payable to the Jimmy Fund/QYBL Tournament and mailed to: South Shore Cooperative Bank, 30 Franklin St., Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information or for those interested in sponsoring or volunteering, call tournament director Bob Griffin at 617-472-4811.

Record Turnout 800 Participants; Proceeds Benefit ALS Research

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run Raises $50,000

From the turnout to the proceeds, the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS just keeps on topping itself with each new year.

The fifth annual race raised a record $50,000-plus last Saturday as a record turnout of 800 participants and 600 spectators ascended to Veterans Memorial Stadium.

All proceeds will be donated to Angel Fund, which benefits the Cecil B. Day Center for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Also known as the Squirrel Run, the five-mile race memorializes Jimmy "Squirrel" Kennedy, a Quincy native who died in 1997 at age 31 of Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

His father, Chris, Quincy school committeeman and former Dean of Students at Northeastern University, also succumbed to the disease.

"Tremendous day," said Richard Kennedy, Jimmy's brother. "Everything from the best turnout to the most money raised. It was very successful. It's a competitive event and also a very emotional event. The most moving part of the day for me is the people who stop by to thank me in celebrating a family member's life.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

When is a Father just 'Dad'? I.L.C. Chatfield answers this question this way: "If he's wealthy and prominent, and you stand in awe of him, call him 'Father.' If he sits in his shirt sleeves and suspenders at ball games and picnics, call him 'Pop.' If he tills the land or labors in overalls, call him 'Pa.' If he wheels the baby carriage and carries bundles meekly, call him 'Papa,' with the accent on the first syllable. If he belongs to a literary circle and writes cultured papers, call him 'Papa,' with the accent on the last syllable. If, however, he makes a pal of you when you're good, and is too wise to let you pull the wool over his loving eyes when you're not; if, moreover, you're sure no one else you know has quite so fine a father, you may call him 'Dad.' ...

Regardless of what you are called ... Father ... Pop. ... Pa ... Papa ... or just plain Dad ... Have a Happy Day! ...

Atlantic Middle School's Literary Journal Receives National Award

Atlantic Middle School received the award for the best literary print publication by a middle school for Young Writers in the 2002 Student Publishing Awards at the Association of Educational Publishers (AEP) annual conference in Washington, D.C.

The awards were presented by Keith Garton, president of TIME Learning Ventures, at a luncheon held June 5 at the Capital Hilton. The awards, established in 1998 by AEP and sponsored by TIME Magazine and TIME For Kids, recognize excellence in student-written and student-produced publishing in three categories: news publications, yearbooks and class annuals, and literary publications.

"TIME and TIME For Kids are all about great writing. It's part of our mission to encourage young writers in America - to help them see the power and purpose of sharing their writing and publishing," said Garton. Atlantic Middle School has 50 students involved in Young Writers, which features short stories, poems, essays, creative writing, and historical fiction from eighth grade students. Photography and artistic work from the students is also showcased. The editors-in-chief for last year's edition were students Kathy Chiang and Jennifer Ha. "It was so exciting for Young Writers to be recognized by such well-known publications as TIME and TIME For Kids," said eighth grade Language Arts teacher and Young Writers advisor Pat Dunn. "It was a great honor, and we felt that Young Writers had reached beyond the walls of Quincy." Atlantic Middle School was one of three winners in the literary publications category.

"The judges felt that Young Writers represented exemplary work in its category and that students showed a good blend of creativity and professional pride in their publication," said Garton.

This year, 120 entries were received from across the nation, nearly doubling the number of entries from last year. Twelve winners were selected by a judging panel that included news professionals from TIME, TIME For Kids, timeforkids.com, CNN, and HBO.

Winners receive a visit from an editor or art director from TIME or TIME For Kids for a day, as well as $500 in educational resources.

City Council Gives Unanimous Approval

$194.2M Budget Reflects Positive Signs For City

By CRAIG SALTERS

The City Council Monday night unanimously passed a budget of $194,287,304 for Fiscal Year 2003, which begins July 1.

The approved figure is roughly $1 million less than originally proposed May 6 by Mayor William Phelan but also reflects positive changes in the city's financial picture since that time, primarily as a result of increases in state aid, an early retirement incentive for state employees, and a decrease in anticipated assessments from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA).

"I'm extremely proud of my staff who, under very difficult circumstances, were able to stay focused and present a balanced, responsible, and lean budget on behalf of the citizens of Quincy," said Phelan, who also expressed satisfaction in the council's approval of the creation of a Constituent Services Department.

Overall, councillors made almost $2 million in cuts — including $650,000 in the Unemployment budget line, $125,000 in Judgments, and slightly more than $1 million in funds earmarked for MWRA bills — but also approved Monday night an additional $2.7 million appropriation, of which $2.1 million will go toward the Quincy Public Schools, which is still facing significant workforce reductions, including the possible layoff of 35 teachers.

"This was a very worthwhile process," said Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the Finance Committee. "Our work is not done, but it's a good start."

Cahill said the city's financial picture has improved since the beginning of the budget process but that the city was "not out of the woods yet."

Siciliano Also Among 105

Gallahue, Gillon Opt For Early Retirement

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon are two of the more prominent names listed among the 105 city employees who have taken advantage of an early retirement incentive offered by the city and authorized by the state.

Also taking advantage of the offer was Anthony Siciliano, general foreman of the Traffic and Parking Department probably better known for his volunteer efforts as deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management, a position he was relieved of in the spring of this year.

Deadline to apply for the early retirement incentive package, which adds a maximum of five years to either an employee's age or his years of service, was June 14; the effective retirement date is June 30, the last day of Fiscal Year 2002.

Gallahue, who was appointed to her position by then Mayor Frank McCauley and began serving in September of 1986, was presented with flowers at Tuesday's meeting of the License Board, her last meeting as a member. Tuesday's License Board meeting was also the last for Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, who is retiring after 39 years of service to the city.

"It's never an easy decision," said Gallahue, "but you have to come to a resolution at some point and I'm comfortable with the choice I've made."

Gallahue said she will miss most the people she's had the opportunity to work with over the years. "But I'll enjoy having the summer

Board Sets 11 P.M. Closing Time For Cafe Outdoor Patio

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Because the closing time at Ocean Mist Cafe at Marina Bay was such an issue at the License Board's Tuesday meeting, and following a lengthy discussion by abutters, the board told Thomas Bellotti, owner of the cafe he has to close the outdoor patio by 11 p.m.

The closing time will be on a 30 day trial basis.

A motion by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and seconded by Jane Gallahue states the following stipulations:

That food on the outside patio will be served until 10:30 p.m. and that all patrons must leave by 11 p.m.

Meals will be available at all times with patrons not just drinking alcoholic beverages.

No outside speakers

No neon signs

No food served outside the white railing.

After conferring with Bellotti, Atty. Edward Fleming, representing him said he would agree with all the stipulations set by the board.

Bellotti plans to sell pizza (Alumni style) since he also is owner of Alumni's on Hancock St., and gourmet hot dogs. There will be 40 seats outside and 41 seats inside.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue suggested he expand his menu to include sandwiches and salad along with the pizza and hot dogs. However, Bellotti said the kitchen is not equipped to prepare more food.

Prior to the motion several abutters said the cafe which was once a coffee shop was turning into a pizza place, and all expressed concern over the noise and that eventually the cafe would turn into a bar, rather than a restaurant. They also were concerned because the restaurant has no restrooms causing patrons to sometimes use the lawn at one of the little parks surrounding the neighborhood.

Paul Reynolds, chairman of the residents committee at Marina Bay said the boardwalk has "become an absolute disaster" with one license at a time beginning with WaterWorks which he called a "fatal mistake." He told the board that residents at Marina Bay pay $3 million a year in taxes and said there is "no control" over the noise.

Abutters called the area the nearest place to residential areas, as opposed to other restaurants which face the water.

One resident asked Police Chief William Falco if they could have more police in the area especially because of the noise around 1 a.m. when patrons are leaving to go home.

Falco said the department tries to distribute personnel proportionate to the needs of the city with a limited budget. Chairman Joseph Shea suggested maybe a "roving patrol" so that more areas would be policed.

Shea asked Hassan Haydar, the property manager of the boardwalk if he was agreeable to the stipulations and the seating inside the cafe and outside in the patio.

Haydar told the board he

Focus On Hancock Parking Lot Area Quincy 2000 Updating Downtown Action Plan

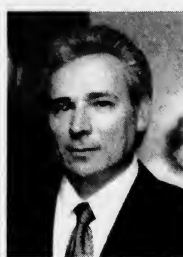

Quincy 2000 is initiating an update of the Quincy Center Action Plan with particular focus on the Hancock parking lot and surrounding area for potential development.

Joseph Mannarino, executive director, said Sasaki Associates of Watertown has been retained to work with the public/private partnership in updating the plan that was completed by that firm in 1996.

"The purpose of the update is to review the original plan and provide a fresh look at Quincy Center and new opportunities for development and improvement," Mannarino said.

"A large part of the study will focus on the feasibility of redeveloping the Hancock parking lot and the surrounding area of Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Revere Road."

The $20,000 funding for the planning and feasibility study is from the Community Development Block Grant program and a pre-development grant Quincy 2000 recently received from Mass. Development, he said.

Mannarino said Quincy 2000 will be working with the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, City Council President Daniel Raymondi and Ward 5 Councilor Douglas Gutro whose wards involve the Quincy Center area.

"Updating Quincy Center's master plan is a must," said Gutro, chairman of the Council's Downtown Committee. "The face of the downtown has changed in just the last five years. Although recent development and new restaurants show a renewed interest in downtown Quincy, we need hold thinking that incorporates the town brook flood control, Quincy Center Concourse, traffic flow and parking improvements and ensures greater neighborhood involvement. An updated master plan will get us there."

Mannarino said a number of workshops beginning probably in mid-July will be held over the next few months.

The results of the study will be presented to the Quincy 2000 board of directors, Mayor William Phelan and the City Council.

Mannarino noted that the Quincy Center Action Plan recommended Presidents Place, property next to the Munroe Building and the Hancock parking lot as key areas for development.

Development of the first two sites is in the works but nothing has been finalized for the Hancock parking lot area.

One plan for that area was for a 290-unit residential development with 150 new parking spaces.

"We want to see how we can move development in that area forward," Mannarino said.

Closes Investigation

DA's Office Finds No Criminal Wrongdoing In Rollover Bill Payments

The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office has closed its investigation of the city's handling of $4.6 million in Fiscal Year 2001 municipal bills which were rolled over and paid with Fiscal Year 2002 monies, indicating that no criminal wrongdoing took place.

In a six-page letter dated June 14 and addressed to Mayor William Phelan, Norfolk County First Assistant District Attorney Dennis Mahoney details the investigation prompted by Phelan's April 30 letter, an investigation which included information provided by many city officials.

That investigation concluded that there was no criminal intent to defraud by any city official. The letter's last paragraph reads:

"We found no evidence to indicate that any city officer acted in other than the best of intentions as regards funds received by the City of Quincy and expended on authorized budget items. We are, therefore, closing our investigation noting, as we did above, that the City Auditor has by his memo of May 20, 2002 taken positive steps to insure closer compliance with Section 64."

Reached for comment Tuesday, Phelan — who emphasized that he was required by law to notify the District Attorney's Office once he discovered the rollovers — said closer compliance with the law, which says that bills from one fiscal year cannot be paid with funds from the next fiscal year without a subsequent appropriation, was what his administration had been trying to accomplish "from the beginning."

"As a result of the investigation," said Phelan, "my administration took steps, working with Auditor (Michael) McFarland, to make sure that violations which occurred in the past would not occur in the future."

The mayor added that the city now has "clearly defined procedures" for such situations and that all department heads have been made aware of those procedures.

Phelan said the law against rolling over funds without an appropriation does protect against fraud — "which was clearly not the case here, and never was," he said — but also assures that residents are made aware, through an appropriation and public hearing, of a city's ability or inability to pay its bills.

"It was an unfortunate practice of the past that such rollover bills occurred unbeknownst to the citizens of Quincy," Phelan said. "We now have a system in place with the new budget of Fiscal Year 2003 which will ensure a solid foundation with which to move forward."

Mahoney's letter, however, was also brought up at Monday night's meeting of the City Council, prompting quite a different response from Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley.

Hanley called the letter "a vindication" of McFarland, whose reputation, Hanley asserted, had suffered "irreparable harm" because of the investigation.

Hanley then called for councillors to appoint McFarland to a new three year term as auditor. That motion was objected to by Councillor Frank McCauley — who called the move "premature" as McFarland's term does not expire until October — and placed on the agenda for the council's special meeting Aug. 12.

JOB WELL DONE: Citations from both the mayor's office and the city council were presented at a recent meeting of the city council to three former members of the Quincy Conservation Commission. From left are: Olin Taylor, who served more than 25 years on the commission; Ronald Donovan, director of operations, Mayor William Phelan's office; Council President Daniel Raymond; Clara Yeomans, who, until her departure last year, had been a commissioner since the very first meeting of the commission in July of 1965; Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley; Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin; and Dr. E. James Iorio, a local biochemist who also served on the commission for more than 25 years. (Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble)

Reich 'Roadtrip For Reform' Begins In Quincy

By CRAIG SALTERS

Former Secretary of Labor and current gubernatorial candidate Robert Reich paid a visit to Quincy Tuesday to launch his "Roadtrip For Reform" campaign, which will travel across the state this summer to bring the message of reforming Massachusetts government to voters.

"Now that I'm on the ballot, we're taking our campaign on the road," said Reich, who stopped by the offices of The Quincy Sun prior to a scheduled talk at Quincy College.

"Reforming state government is my number one objective," added Reich, who emphasized "the importance of cleaning up the mess on Beacon Hill" and giving Massachusetts residents "a government we can be proud of" during his 15-minute visit to the newspaper.

Reich touted his experience as a former Secretary of Labor, handling a budget greater than that of the state, but quickly added that he was "not part of Beacon Hill."

Reich said that, if elected, he would work to curtail the power of lobbyists, create an anti-patronage strike force, and put an end to what he called "sweetheart pension deals" for politicians.

"There's no reason for them, especially in times of a budget crisis," he said.

Speaking on the issue of state aid, Reich said there was no excuse for a lack of long term planning by the state and said that, if elected, he would increase the state's Rainy Day Fund and earmark at least 15 percent of that fund to education "so that schools can plan in both boom and bust."

Reich addressed the issue of gubernatorial candidate Mitt Romney's residency status by saying that Romney "should not be pushed off the ballot because of a technicality" but adding that the matter spoke to "a credibility issue."

Reich, who visited Brockton and Fall River later in the day, was not the only candidate to make Quincy a stop on the campaign trail. Former state Senator and current gubernatorial candidate Warren Tolman having paid a visit to the City Council Monday night.

Military Service Buyback Approved By Council

An order introduced by Councillor at-Large Frank McCauley and passed at Monday night's meeting of the city council will allow qualified veterans employed by the city of Quincy to buy back up to four years of military service for retirement purposes.

Passage of the order gives applicants up to 180 days in which to apply for the military service buyback.

McCauley noted the original legislation for military service buyback, passed in 1996, provided a 180-day time line for application. Many veterans employed in local, county, and state government missed the opportunity to purchase the service for various reasons.

The legislation provided that the 180-day extension can be allowed for one time only.

A Piece Of Watergate

Norfolk County Register of Deeds Paul Harold has a unique memento of Watergate history.

It's a piece of the carpet the five burglars walked on and were caught on in the famed break-in at the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Headquarters 30 years ago this week.

The bungled break-in which eventually brought President Richard Nixon crashing down in disgrace, occurred June 17, 1972.

At the time it seemed kind of comical and no one suspected a cover-up scandal would mushroom and force Nixon's resignation, the first of a President in the nation's history.

"Following the break-in," says Harold, who was an intern in the office of Congressman James Burke of Milton at the time, "the Democrats sold pieces of the Watergate carpet as a fund-raising gimmick to embarrass the Republicans."

The beige colored carpet was sold in one-inch squares and mounted on a 4-inch-by-6-inch plaque with the inscription:

"A piece of history. This is the actual carpet from the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee at the time of the historic break-in. 2:30 a.m., Saturday, June 17, 1972."

In the center of the one-inch piece of carpet is the figure of a bug symbolizing that the purpose of the break-in was to bug the telephones in the Democratic headquarters.

On the back of the plaque, notes Harold, is an affidavit of authenticity that states in part:

"This is a portion of the genuine carpet trod upon by the five Watergate burglars arrested while standing on portions of the same carpet at 2:30 a.m., June 17, 1972 by the Metropolitan Police Department, Washington, D.C."

Harold can't recall how much each of the pieces of carpet sold for or how much money the Democrats raised.

But apparently they were a pretty hot item. The piece he has is numbered No. 2426-A. If they went all the way through the alphabet it must have been a pretty successful fund-raiser.

Meanwhile, the 30th anniversary of the break-in has renewed the guessing game "Who Was Deep Throat?"

A number of names are mentioned as the possible White House source who fed inside information to Washington Post reporters Robert Woodward and Carl Bernstein who broke the case. Among the names: Patrick Buchanan and John Dean.

Someday we may know for certain who it was. But one thing for sure, it wasn't Nixon.

JOANNE DONDERO, owner of Abigail's Crossing in Quincy Center, is back from what you might say was a real royal time in London.

DONDERO

Joanne and her daughter, Joma Dondero McComt, vice president of a mutual fund company with whom she made the trip, couldn't have been in a better place at the right time.

They were just 10 feet away from Queen Elizabeth as she passed by in the procession during her Golden Jubilee celebration.

"It was all so beautiful," says Joanne.

She says she found the queen to be "more of a people's person over there than she is seen as over here."

"And London is almost overwhelming, it has so much history. We think we have so much history here but we are just kids compared to how far London's history dates back."

But she still loves her native Quincy's history. And has just added a replica of St. John's Church to her Cat's Meow Village of replicas that include the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams birthplaces and other local historic sites, among them Abigail Adams's Weymouth birthplace.

Popular collectibles for the tourist season and all-year round.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, vice chairman of the Quincy School Committee, will be honored by fellow members of the Quincy Lions Club.

CEDRONE

She will be installed tonight (Thursday) as King Lion at the club's 6 p.m. meeting at the Neighborhood Club.

She's only the third woman to be so honored. Her predecessors: Carolann Speranzo and Jean Kenney.

And, by the way, none of the three thought it should be Queen Lion.

A RECEPTION FOR Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin is set for tonight (Thursday), 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at The Gazebo, Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy. Suggested contribution, $50 per person.

MILESTONE: Joyce Baker, president of the Quincy Historical Society, has added a new title: Granny.

She and husband, Lawrence, are grandparents for the first time, a granddaughter, Sarah Elizabeth, presented to them by son and daughter-in-law Nathan and Paula (Higgins) Baker of Quincy.

BAKER

"She's beautiful," says Joyce. Sharing in the excitement and in full agreement with Joyce is Sarah's other grandmother, Christine Higgins of Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

St. Anne's R. C. Church, Wollaston, Mass.

THIS 1930'S POSTCARD is a view of the first phase of building St. Ann's Church on Hancock Street in Wollaston. Like many other Catholic churches it started out with just a basement level and later funds were raised to complete the structure. This parish, though, had a very upset congregation when an expensive rectory was built next door before the church was finished. For some reason the dark contrasting seam-face granite shown here was not used on the upper church, which was completed in 1940. The parish was organized 80 years ago and first held Mass in the theater of the old Masonic Temple that was on Beale Street.

Believes In Mayor's Commitment To Best Possible Education

(The writer of the following letter to Mayor William Phelan submitted a copy to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Mayor William J. Phelan
Dear Mayor Phelan:

I would like to thank you for taking time after the June 12 School Committee meeting to meet with me and address my questions and concerns. As a public official, I understand how easy it is for taxpayers to be Monday morning quarterbacks.

Statements and judgments on the process are made with only limited information that is available to the public. As a public official, I also understand that the most vocal participants in the process who are able to articulate the issues and garner public support usually fare better in this process.

I am not 100 percent convinced that there are no additional revenue sources available that could be used to restore teachers to the Quincy Public School System, but I am convinced of your commitment to restoring funding to the schools as these funds become available.

The School Department faces two major problems that are not shared by other departments. These problems are special education costs and previously negotiated step increases.

Like you I am concerned about the overall financial condition of the city and the need to be conservative with funds that are available as opposed to spending funds that we have not yet received.

I was particularly impressed with your statements that you wished that the city did not have to lay off any employees, that you were concerned with the people factor in the budget process, and that you wished you could provide the schools with an additional million dollars but that this was not realistic at this point in time.

You had sent me a letter in February expressing your desire to work towards providing the best possible education for our children. I believe that your commitment is real. I look forward to working with you in the future to achieve these goals.

Thanks Cemetery Dept. Staff

I am writing to express my gratitude to the staff of the Quincy Cemetery Department.

I live in the vicinity of Mount Wollaston Cemetery, and my family has a lot at Pine Hill. The month of May was an exceptionally rainy month, and the men worked hard to get the grass cut and make everything look nice at the cemeteries in time for Memorial Day. Pine Hill Cemetery was picture perfect.

I thank all of you for a job well done.

Proud Of Our Brothers From New York City

On June 21 attended the Quincy Police Memorial March for the 42nd year, having retired after 36 years of duty.

This year was the greatest one for me because I had the privilege of marching with 15 police officers from the New York Police Department, all of them from Ground Zero. What a thrill and joy just to march next to those real heroes.

Every Quincy Police Department officer was so proud of their brothers from New York City.

I hope the citizens of Quincy realize what a great city we all live in thanks to the dedicated police officers of the Quincy Police Department.

Quincy's Yesterdays Jobless Claims Triples

By PAUL HAROLD

Jobless claims tripled from those making claims for unemployment at this time last year (1957), with 2,351 workers receiving checks compared to 859 last year. However, officials from the employment security office on the Parkway noted that this month's claims are down almost 1,000 from a high of 4,155 during March.

Most unemployment was temporary, caused by the shutdown for the summer by numerous manufacturing companies.

GROSSMAN FIRST TO ANNOUNCE FOR CONGRESS

Business and former Governor's Councillor and state representative, Joseph B. Grossman announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress, making him the first announced candidate.

Quincy Republican leaders were concerned that a glut of Quincy candidates could hurt the chances of any Quincy candidate in the campaign to replace Congressman Richard Wigglesworth. Besides Grossman, other candidates ready to announce include state representative William Jenness, Sen. Charles Hedges, and Councillor and former Mayor Thomas Burgin. Meanwhile, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa was mulling his candidacy with no timetable for a decision.

CORNERSTONE LAID FOR TEMPLE BETH EL

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Fireman laid the cornerstone at the new Temple Beth El in ceremonies attended by 150 members and friends of the temple.

Main speakers included Rabbi David Jacobs, Sen. John Powers of South Boston and Mayor Della Chiesa.

Sealed in the cornerstone were a number of items including a miniature Torah given by Reuben Grossman and a packet of soil from Mt. Zion in Israel given by Dr. Isadore Schwartz.

Barbara's Salmon Cakes

We were out to lunch with our friends Barbara and Paul Hunt when our conversation led to what else? Food. Anyway Barbara said she had a great recipe for salmon cakes and sent me today's recipe in the mail. It's pretty simple, and crabmeat can be substituted for the salmon if you prefer.

Barbara's Salmon Cakes

1 can of salmon equal amounts of mashed potatoes (1 used instant mashed) 1 egg enough bread crumbs to hold mixture together
I used some fresh parsley.

Mix all ingredients and shape into patties. Fry in hot oil until browned on both sides. Drain on paper towel. Serve with tartar sauce, ketchup or my favorite, lemon juice.

Here is a nice cool summer salad to serve with the salmon cakes.

Green Pea Salad
1/2 cup sour cream
2 sliced scallions
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups drained, thawed frozen green peas a couple of radishes sliced lettuce leaves

Mix all ingredients and serve on a lettuce leaf with cut red radishes. It's so colorful and delicious!

Health Commissioner, License Board Member Gallahue Praised As She Steps Into Retirement

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue attended her last License Board meeting Tuesday after serving for more than 15 years.

On an early retirement incentive program initiated by the state and then the City of Quincy, Gallahue is retiring as Health Commissioner.

She said that she hopes to work part time in the fall on the state department of health level. But she said she was "taking the summer off."

After the meeting, Chairman Joseph Shea said, "Jane we were very surprised to hear of your retirement." He added it was going to be a "tearful summer" because Fire Chief Thomas Gorman is retiring next month.

He told Gallahue that "you will be greatly missed" and that he had "enjoyed all of my days here since I have been City Clerk."

He said Gallahue "always had an interest, and her outlook was an inspiration." He said "changes come and changes go." Shea's secretary Cindy Manning presented Gallahue with a vase of flowers. Shea said it was a "small token of our appreciation" with a celebration at a later date.

After Shea spoke Mayor William Phelan called Gallahue a dedicated employee and one that makes Quincy the great city that it is.

He said he had the "highest regard for her as a professional person." and wished her luck and enjoyment in her retirement.

Other board members expressed their thoughts.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said it was an "honor working with Jane." He said he would "lean on her for encouragement to make a motion" He called her a "great friend and inspiration."

Walter White, director of inspectional services said in the four and a half years of sitting next to her he will remember "your respect on how to treat people, and to let them down gently." He said the city will miss you.

Police Chief William

Falco said in the short time he has been on the board that Gallahue was "most pleasant and thoughtful, cooperative and a credit to your position."

Gallahue called her serving on the License Board a "wonderful experience." and reminisced that many times, she would whisper certain thoughts to Gorman pertaining to the meeting. She said she will "definitely miss attending the meetings."

ENTERTAINMENT

National Touring Troupe To Perform At Adams National Historical Park

The Adams National Historical Park will play host to the national touring troupe of Presidents and Their First Ladies, dramatically speaking Sunday at 2 p.m. in the carriage house on the site of "The Old House" located at 135 Adams St.

The performance offers a portrayal of the lives of second president John Adams and his wife, First Lady Abigail Adams.

William and Sue Willis have researched, written, and perform shows on 31 of our Presidential couples, a unique feat in the history of the United States. Every year they tour coast-to-coast giving over 300 presentations. This will be their third visit to Adams National Historical Park. They have performed at five of the nation's Presidential sites and been featured in programming both on C-SPAN television and BBC Radio.

In history, John Adams often gets lost between George Washington and Thomas Jefferson while his wife, Abigail, is well-known for her early political role as an activist for women. Their program focuses on the tremendous sacrifices both made as husband and wife and as father and mother in helping to establish our nation. Audiences of any age will relate to the happy and tragic moments of their amazing story - America's first true political partnership.

There is limited capacity for Sunday's performance and seating will be done on a first come, first served basis.

For information about Presidents and Their First Ladies, dramatically speaking or any other interpretive programs offered by the park, call (617) 770-1175.

At Pageant Field

Flag-Raising, Fireworks Rescheduled For Saturday

The flag-raising ceremony and fireworks that were canceled by inclement weather during the Flag Day observance last weekend have been rescheduled for next Saturday, June 22.

The flag-raising ceremony will be held at Pageant Field, during which 30-foot by 60-foot will be run up the flagpole while the National Guard provides its "Howitzer Salute" and spectators participate in a patriotic sing-along.

Following the ceremony, a fireworks display will be held with Pageant Field providing the best viewing area.

"Unfortunately, the weather did not cooperate with our plans last week, but this affords us the opportunity to celebrate our patriotism two weeks in a row. We hope to see everyone back at Pageant Field this weekend," said Tom Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Parade Committee.

The Flag Day Committee will honor Grand Marshal Fire Chief Tom Gorman and Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award winner Joe McConville at the flag-raising ceremony.

Gorman is being cited for his 39 years of service to the Fire Department, the last 12 as chief, and the countless hours he has donated to the community through affiliation with benevolent and community organizations.

McConville is being recognized for more than four decades of volunteer service to the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena and other youth-oriented causes.

Koch had a special thanks for those who participated in Saturday's parade in spite of the rain and the cold.

"We didn't have a good weather night, but these kids still braved the chilly weather and made the parade a success," he added.

OLD GLORY was a standout on the Quincy Partnership float.

Romney Shares Olympic Experience With City Service Clubs

For Mitt Romney, one of the most moving moments of the Salt Lake City Olympics came when the tattered American flag that had flown above Ground Zero was carried solemnly onto the field at the opening ceremonies.

Instead of triggering shouts and cheers, the sight of the flag succeeded in quieting the crowd of thousands.

"I expected applause and cheers, but there wasn't a sound - no babies crying, nothing," Romney told attendees at the annual Memorial Day luncheon for Quincy's Lions, Kiwanis, and Rotary Clubs. "The crowd became absolutely silent at the sight of the flag."

A few moments later, Romney said, as the National Anthem neared its conclusion with "Oh, say does that star-spangled banner yet wave," a gust of wind lifted the torn flag skyward, prompting President Bush to declare, "That was quite a moment. Quite a moment."

Romney shared numerous stories of his experiences as head of the Salt Lake City Olympic Games with attendees of the luncheon, which this year also honored the police officers and firefighters who died on September 11.

"We were very pleased that Mr. Romney was able to join us for our joint luncheon," said John Pickering, president of the Quincy Lions Club, the host of this year's luncheon. "The Olympics provided a boost to America's morale, pride, and spirit just when we needed it most."

Romney equated the spirit of national pride and community service exhibited by both the athletes and the 23,000 volunteers at the Olympics with the qualities honored each year on Memorial Day. He pointed to the story of bobsledder Vonetta Flowers, who became the first African-American in history to win a medal at the Winter Olympics. What many people didn't know, Romney said, was that prior to the games Flowers was offered a chance to leave her teammate and join the top-ranked U.S. bobsled team, thereby improving her chances of winning a medal.

Flowers turned down the offer and ended up winning the gold medal with her friend and longtime partner.

"Vonetta Flowers chose loyalty and friendship over personal gain," Romney told the crowd, "and when she accepted the medal, there were tears streaming down her face because it was that much more meaningful."

Romney also saluted the many civic groups across the nation that serve their communities day in and day out.

"Each year at this time we rightfully honor those who made the supreme sacrifice for our country," Romney said. "But, for me, Memorial Day is also a time to honor those who serve our nation every day in countless ways and I applaud your efforts to serve your local community through the good works of the Lions, Kiwanis, and Rotary clubs."

Following his remarks, Romney answered several questions from audience members on everything from the Olympics to his views on the MCAS test.

Also speaking at the luncheon were Thomas Stansbury of Quincy's Veterans' Services Department and Rotarian

Kerry Healey, Romney's running mate, who shared the pride she felt in her father's World War II service. The Memorial Day luncheon concluded in song as former City Council President Peter Kolson led the group in singing, "God Bless America."

"WE HONOR THOSE WHO SERVE" reads the message upon the Blue Star Flag which was raised in front of City Hall last Friday and will remain flying until the War on Terrorism is won and American troops return home safely. Unveiling the flag, a symbol of support for U.S. servicemen sponsored nationally by the American Legion and locally by the Quincy Veterans Council, were, from left: The Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, who offered both the invocation and benediction at the flag raising ceremonies; Mayor William Phelan; and John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion.

Commemorative US Flag Stamp Unveiled

Blue Star Flag Honors 'Those Who Served'

The Blue Star Flag, which honors U.S. servicemen serving the world over and now flies high above City Hall Plaza, will remain there until the War on Terrorism is won and American troops are back home.

That was the message sent by Mayor William Phelan during last Friday's flag-raising ceremonies which were sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council and which also included the unveiling of a U.S. postage stamp to commemorate the 225th anniversary of the American flag.

Calling the Blue Star Flag "a banner of strength in uncertain times," Phelan noted that the flags, which are put up by families with loved ones serving in the military, were a common sight during World War II. The mayor added that the one presented to the city would honor American servicemen now fighting the War on Terrorism "until their safe and victorious return home."

Lawrence Norton of the Quincy Veterans Council served as master of the ceremonies for the event, which was attended by many residents including Lincoln

Hancock Elementary School students from the fifth grade class of Stephen Cantelli. In addition to Phelan, those making remarks at the ceremonies included: Edward Davis, manager of the Quincy Post Office; John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion; Michael Powers, postmaster of Boston; and City Council President Daniel Raymondi.

Flag raisers were Quincy Veterans Council Commander John Joyce, Senior Vice Commander Kenneth Menz, and Junior Vice Commander Stephen Fowles.

Davis had the honor of unveiling the commemorative stamp for those in attendance. Noting the countless individual acts of courage made by ordinary Americans following the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, Davis called it "appropriate and fitting" that the American flag be honored on its 225th anniversary.

Comer, who was in Washington, D.C. during the Sept. 11 attacks, said Americans turn to their flag in times of crisis "because it speaks volumes without saying a word" and passionately pledged to continue his efforts in passing an amendment to the United States Constitution which would outlaw flag burning.

Comer, who explained that the flag's blue star of service became a gold star if that particular serviceman was killed, urged families with loved ones in the military to contact their local American Legion posts about the flag and further urged local businesses to fly their own flags as a symbol of unity.

Powers, who arrived late because of a prior commitment, said the day's ceremonies spoke to the level of patriotism he said was evident well before Sept. 11.

Raymondi ended the ceremonies by calling the American flag "a universal constant" symbolizing American unity and national principles which needed to be protected and defended.

"We are gathered here today to re-dedicate ourselves to those principles," Raymondi said.

Offering both the invocation and benediction for the ceremony was the Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church, who said he was reminded of the importance of honoring American servicemen the day he discovered two old Blue Star Flags while fixing a fuse in his church.

"We need to remember that, in an instant, that blue star can become a gold one," Swanson said.

EDWARD DAVIS, manager of the Quincy Post Office, addressed the crowd prior to the unveiling of a commemorative stamp honoring the American flag on its 225th anniversary, an event which also took place last Friday during flag raising ceremonies for the Blue Star Flag. "Ordinary people made extraordinary contributions," was how Davis summed up America's response to the challenges posed by September 11. Looking on, from left, are the Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, and Mayor William Phelan with son, William Arthur.

Quincy Delegation Lobbies For State Assistance In Behalf Of Autistic Children

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Andrea White of West Quincy recently joined NFL star quarterback Doug Flutie at the annual Lobby Day for Autism at the State House.

White, who has an autistic son, filed legislation with Morrissey that will require insurers to cover autism spectrum disorders in a manner that is needed to treat these disorders effectively.

Flutie, who also has an autistic son and is founder of the Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism, has been a strong advocate for more supportive services for autistic children and their families.

"Andrea White impressed upon me the need for a greater state role in studying autism spectrum disorders and ensuring that supportive services are in place for people with autism," Morrissey said.

"My son Roger was diagnosed almost four years ago with autism," White said. "After being repeatedly frustrated by my health insurer each time I tried to secure therapies that Roger needs, in addition to those he receives at school, I filed legislation with Senator Morrissey."

The legislation that Morrissey filed is modeled after the recently enacted Mental Health Parity bill, requiring health insurers in Massachusetts, which are not self-insured, to provide coverage for autism spectrum disorders in an appropriate manner to treat these disorders.

Because state law concerning health insurance is preempted by the federal Employment Retirement and Income Security Act (ERISA), it does not impact insurance plans which are self-insured.

ERISA governs healthcare plans offered by employers that self insure, i.e. firms that use their own funds to cover employee health claims. By self-insuring under the federal ERISA law, employers are able to exempt their health plans from state regulations.

Morrissey's bill would not impact White's family because their health insurance plan is self insured; however, White sees this legislation as critical to helping people with autism spectrum disorders.

"I will continue to promote this issue on the federal level where legislation regarding self-insured groups must be addressed."

Liquor Store Incident Placed On File

The License Board Tuesday placed on file an incident which occurred June 1 at Brewer's Corner Liquors, 372 Granite St.

Chairman Joseph Shea told the board that he received a call from Det. Joseph Manning after an employee working alone at the liquor store was reported intoxicated.

Because the owner Kaushik Patel was out of town, the board closed the store June 1, 3, 4. When the board met on June 4, Det. Lt. Robert Perchard gave a letter to Patel regarding the and then the store was re-opened.

Police Chief William Falco said no further punishment was needed because the time the store was closed was "sufficient punishment" and if anything occurs again "more serious action" would be taken.

Shea, who said this was Patel's first offense and placed on record asked him if that person was still employed. Patel said "I fired him right away." Shea told Patel his obligation was to leave good help "when you go out of town."

Patel promised the board he would be on duty at all times.

Quincy Environmental Network Meeting June 26

The Quincy Environmental Network will meet Wednesday, June 26, at 6:30 p.m. at the meeting room of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The topic of the meeting is "Open Space: How to preserve it during difficult economic times."

The evening will begin with a panel discussion including Sen. Michael Morrissey, who will discuss the status of the Environmental Bond Bill currently before the state legislature; Tom Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park Department; Tom Palmer, an environmental activist, and QEN members who will talk about the ways the QEN's Government Affairs committee is working to make the preservation of open space a greater priority in the city.

"There is precious little open space left in our city. Parcels are being lost to development every year. It is vital that Quincy start working now to preserve what is left," said Sally Owen, a founding member of QEN.

Representatives of the mayor's office, the city auditor's office and the city solicitor's office have also been invited to participate.

The panel discussion will be followed by an open forum in which audience members can pose questions and provide ideas on how to preserve open space.

The evening will conclude at 8:45 p.m.

For further information, contact Steve Perdios at 617-877-5975 or Gail Macdonald at 617-773-5120.

QCAP Community Forum To Examine Issues Facing Low-Income Residents

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will host a community forum "Building Partnerships for a Strong Community" Tuesday, June 25, from 8:30 a.m. to noon at the Eastern Nazarene Cecil R. Paul Center for Business, 180 Old Colony Ave., Quincy.

"The event will be an opportunity for community leaders and members of the human services provider community to discuss the issues facing their client populations, as well as join with us in exploring ways we can work together to address pressing needs and gaps in services," said Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

"This forum is part of a larger community needs assessment that QCAP is conducting for their three-year strategic planning process."

Leaders and staff from Quincy and Weymouth, including elected officials and representatives from social service agencies, municipal offices, medical facilities, public schools and faith-based organizations, as well as recipients of services will be participating in a series of roundtable discussions.

Each roundtable will focus on a major priority area, including housing, child care, workforce development (Adult Basic Education), health and mental health, and basic needs (shelter, food, etc.), and will include remarks by designated discussion leaders who will share their expertise on each topic.

In addition, Quincy Mayor William Phelan and Weymouth Mayor David Madden have been invited to make remarks to kick off the event.

"This event is very timely, as local governments and social services agencies face challenges in providing services in a tightening fiscal climate," Strollo said.

"As our resources to help our most vulnerable citizens shrink, we need to develop new and creative ways to continue the level and quality of service we now provide. I hope the forum will serve as a platform for discussing community needs, as well as provide the opportunity to explore ways to building on our existing partnerships and collaborations."

The forum is open to the public and all are welcome to give their input on issues impacting the whole community. For more information or to RSVP, contact Julia Quigley at 617-479-8181, ext. 156.

Quincy Point Business Receives $100,000 Loan From Quincy 2000

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino presented a ceremonial check for $100,000 Monday to Dr. Noelle Kay Teagan, owner of Kay Chiropractic, Inc., 505 Washington St., a chiropractic practice recently opened in Quincy Point.

The check presentation ceremony also marked the unveiling of the newly renovated and expanded Quincy Point Plaza retail center.

The city's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program, administered by Quincy 2000, provided support for the loan.

The check, Mannarino said, represented the proceeds of a start-up loan being made by Quincy 2000. Joining Mannarino in the ceremony were Ward 1 Councillor and Council President Daniel Raymondi and members of the Quincy Point Business and Professional Association.

The newly renovated shopping center was identified in Quincy 2000's

"Quincy Point Action Plan" as a critical redevelopment site; the renovations completed recently are expected to be a catalyst for other improvements in the area. The center has just one 2,000 square foot space available for rent.

Dr. Teagan is an established chiropractor, having practiced in Somerville for the past seven years. She is a Hull resident and selected Quincy as an ideal area for her full range of chiropractic services. Dr. Teagan has earned several specialty certifications in her field, making her practice a unique resource to area residents in need of treatment.

"This is a great example of our 11 bank loan partnership putting a Quincy start-up into business," said Mannarino. "Quincy is unique in the support its banks render to local businesses through Quincy 2000 and it makes Quincy highly competitive in attracting new businesses into the city."

The participating banks are: Century, Citizens, Colonial Federal, Eastern, Fleet, Massachusetts Co-Op, Rockland Trust, South Shore Co-Op, South Shore Savings, Sovereign, and The Bank of Canton.

Quincy 2000 is the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

$400,000 Grant Helps Section 8 Tenants To Become Homeowners

BY LANCE MORGANELLI

Full of excitement, Delia Smith won the opportunity through a recent lottery drawing at City Hall to purchase a new house in Roxbury with aid from Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation's funding through the Regional Section 8 program.

NRC awarded Urban Edge and the Quincy-based Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore $400,000 jointly from unused Section 8 vouchers that will now be used to assist low and moderate-income families to purchase homes. The vouchers normally go toward governmental rent assistance.

Smith, a Dorchester resident, will receive a portion of the $400,000 and it was estimated another two dozen will share in the sum.

The collaboration of the two housing authorities will also provide training programs and access to funding sources for eligible participants.

Normand Grenier, executive director at Neighborhood Housing Services, explained that with this new program families would be able to feel they are giving something lasting to their children when they own a house.

"(It is a great feeling) to say I am going to pass this on to you," Grenier said. "They will be able to say: I own a piece of America; I have part of the American dream; I am a full citizen here. And the best thing they're going to say is I don't have to depend on anybody else — I have a piece of the pie."

Besides the funding to help people in initial stages of purchasing a house, the program will also educate people in the complex process of buying a house.

"(We) identified there was help needed around education and preparing people on the road to home ownership," said George Montgomery of the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation.

Mayor William Phelan said it is "a great pleasure" to see what can happen when the various housing companies and a few cities work together to make an American Dream a reality.

Phelan explained that there were two main stumbling blocks to home ownership with the first being getting enough money for the down payment and second the mental block in which people think they'll never be able to own their own home.

"This program addresses both of those stumbling blocks in that it educates the people so that they know what it is they have to do and tells them, that they in fact can own their own home," said Phelan.

"It's such a remarkable thing to see so many good people working together to have an impact on someone's life . . . and that for generations to come they can pass that home on to their sons and daughters."

Weymouth Mayor David Madden said he heard one woman from his shelter program for women say that it was much more than just a building to stay in — it was a place to bring her family.

"(But) this program (Section 8) takes it another level,"

Madden said. "We are now able to see those people . . . and get them over the hurdle of buying a home."

"So often I hear from people who say I can afford to make the monthly payments but I just don't have the money to get in (afford the down payment) — this program provides that," Madden said.

Deborah Griswold, acting Deputy Regional Director of HUD, praised the housing authorities of Boston, Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree for their work in creating housing programs.

"You and your housing authorities, executive directors and staff deserve a large commendation for being here today and for being at the starting gate of this program to make home ownership possible to more people who are in great need," Griswold said.

"Home ownership is about quality of life . . . and we are about finding progress in our communities,

Help Your Air Conditioner Cool Your Home

(NU) - When summer's heat bears down on your home, give your air conditioner a helping hand. It will lower your electricity bill while it helps you beat the summer heat.

To help your air conditioner keep your home as cool as possible, try these six ideas from the maker of Heil heating and air conditioning products:

- Rearrange your furniture. Make sure that your furniture is not blocking airflow from registers or the return air grille. You can optimize the cooling power of your system by allowing the air to flow freely through your house.

- Cook and do laundry during cooler times of the day. Your clothes dryer, oven and stove generate a lot of heat. Give your air conditioner a break by not using those appliances during the hottest part of the day.

- Plant a tree. A deciduous tree planted on the south side of your house will be a natural source of solar energy control. Its leaves will block the sun's heat during the summer then drop off in the fall to let the sun's warmth shine through when you need it.

- Call for a checkup. If you have not already had your air conditioner checked by a qualified air conditioning contractor, schedule an appointment today. The contractor can clean your air conditioner, check for leaks and optimize your refrigerant charge. These steps will help your air conditioner work better and last longer. To find a contractor near you, use the dealer locator at www.heil-hvac.com.

- Lock your windows. The lock presses the weather stripping tightly together for a better seal and keeps the cool air inside your home.

- Close your garage. If your garage opens to the south side of the house, the sun can heat up your garage. As that heat creeps into your house, it makes your air conditioner work harder. Even if your garage does not face south, a closed garage door will help you minimize the loss of cool air from inside the house.

and affordability is part of our goal.

"I couldn't be more pleased to see all of you here today because you are really part of an historic effort and I look for great things to come from Urban Edge and Neighborhood Housing Services," Griswold said.

Jack Mather, executive director of Quincy Housing Authority, said "we are putting tool in the toolboxes of others in the sense of assisting others initially so they can help themselves later."

"What we are talking about is... enabling the resources to come together to allow other recipients in our Section 8 program to have the opportunity to do what most of us take for granted — and that is to dream dreams," Mather said.

"This program today helps provide additional resources that will allow those dreams to become reality."

"Today is a new initiative, and it's our war on poverty. It's part of our commitment to home ownership opportunity and what a wonderful opportunity it is," Mather said.

"This is going to be a very interesting collaboration (Urban Edge and Neighborhood Housing Services) and it's indicative of our commitment and recognition that housing is a regional issue," said Mossik Jacobian, executive director of Urban Edge.

"It's a great opportunity for us to work... and learn a lot together."

HIGH PRICE, LOW RESULT

There are occasions when real estate agents encounter sellers with high expectations and unrealistically high asking prices. If the sellers have the luxury of not having a deadline for selling (unmotivated sellers), they may stubbornly cling to their overly high asking prices. If so, there is a very low probability that buyers will come along and pay more than a house is obviously worth. Even if unmotivated sellers do manage to sell for their asking prices a year later, it will likely be due to a rising market that finally caught up with their high asking prices. In the meantime, a rising market will have elevated the price of the seller's next home by at least the same margin.

$194.2M Budget Reflects Positive Signs For City

"It's always much better to have people leave voluntarily than be laid off," said Cahill, referring to the more than 100 employees who have taken advantage of an early retirement incentive offer, "but it's still painful and this is not over yet."

Noting years of investment made in the Quincy Public Schools, Cahill said the needs of the School Department were still a concern for councillors.

Council President Daniel Raymondi praised what he called "an extremely smooth" budget process, adding that councillors benefited greatly from discussion and debate with department heads.

Raymondi said the council made "appropriate reductions" and emphasized that the city still had potential sources of revenue, including possible MWRA mitigation funds, on the horizon.

"Hopefully, the mayor will be able to restore all the programs cut in the School Department and re-establish the lost position in the Inspectional Services Department," Raymondi said.

Reached for comment Tuesday, Phelan emphasized that "the dust hasn't settled" on the city's financial picture and pledged continued efforts on behalf of the School Department during the summer months.

"I'm hopeful and optimistic that additional revenues will be available to support the School Department budget," said Phelan, noting the $61 million School Department budget represented a less than a two percent decrease from the previous fiscal year.

Phelan said the possibility of laying off 35 teachers "is how the budget stands now" but said he would "do everything in my power from now until the beginning of school to change that."

Phelan noted that no layoffs would be necessary on the city side of the budget although some employees might opt to be laid off rather than move to a new position in city government. In addition, Phelan said, non-academic employees laid off on the School Department side would be considered first for suitable positions on the city side.

"Be patient," Phelan urged. "Just because the budget was passed doesn't mean the situation can't change and change for the better, because our (financial) numbers are conservative."

would "go along with them," but at the June 4 meeting expressed concern over whether the cafe would turn into a bar rather than a restaurant.

The question about a new manager of Ocean Mist Cafe was brought into focus as the new manager Sean Conroy was in attendance. But according to Shea, Conroy's paper work had just been delivered to him, and the board did not have the time to read it. The board will discuss the issue at the July 9 meeting.

During the complaints from tenants, Gorman said the fault of the noise at Marina Bay is not all from Ocean Mist Cafe, and that Marina Bay went from a boat yard with a few restaurants and turned into a more residential area. He suggested that Bellotti and the abutters come to some kind of agreement so that they can "live together."

He added that tenants can't always ask the License Board to settle the "constant hassle" at Marina Bay.

The board will meet on July 9 and vote on the new manager.

off," she added.

For Gillon, who has 10 years of experience with the city and almost 29 years in the retirement system, the choice was also not an easy one.

"It was a tough choice to make," Gillon said. "I've grown to love the city of Quincy and I really enjoyed coming to work each morning and working with the department heads and city councillors."

Mayor William Phelan said the early retirement incentive package accomplished two important goals: first, it made unnecessary many of the layoffs which were looming as the city addressed a significant budget crisis; and, second, it offered the opportunity to reward longtime employees who had served the city.

"These are professionals who came to work every day and got the job done for the citizens of Quincy," Phelan said. "We're more than happy to provide them this opportunity and wish them much success in their retirement."

"Their services will be missed."

Karen Marin On Deployment To Spain

Navy Seaman Karen J. Marin, daughter of Karen Martinez of Quarterdeck Road, Quincy, and Gonzalo M. Gomez of Canovanas, Puerto Rico, is currently on a six-month deployment to Rota, Spain.

She is assigned to Naval Mobile Construction Battalion Seven, home based in Gulfport, Miss.

Sailors from Marin's unit recently provided humanitarian and civic assistance to the people of Usulután, El Salvador.

El Salvador, located in Central America, was struck by Hurricane Mitch in 1998 and earthquakes in 2001. Food, water and shelter were difficult to obtain and preserve. Marin's unit drilled wells needed to provide fresh water and constructed a new school.

Marin, a 1999 graduate of Quincy High School, joined the Navy in February 2001.

Morrisette Cruises Past Quincy, 17-8

By CHRIS POISSON

After being swept in two games by its rivals in an off-year last season, the Morrisette Legion baseball team took the first step in getting even last Friday night at Adams Field.

Fueled by a combustible offense, Morrisette pounded out 13 hits en route to a 17-8 victory over Quincy that was called after six innings by the umpires due to the weather. Quincy, though, did fight back from a 14-0 deficit with an eight-run fifth inning that left them with something positive.

The two teams will play a three-game series this year, with the next two games scheduled for June 30 and July 14.

Morrisette had its game against Stoughton canceled Sunday night, but it was back on the field Monday night trying to remain undefeated. Quincy managed to play Sunday, looking to break into the win column.

As it turns out, Morrisette played its worst game of the season with a 7-0 loss at Milton, while Quincy played its best game of the year but suffered a 3-2 heartbreaker at Weymouth.

Morrisette (2-1) traveled to Weymouth Tuesday, hosted Cohasset yesterday (Wednesday) and tomorrow (Friday) at 5:45 p.m. it heads to Canton and Saturday at 2 p.m. it returns home to take on Stoughton.

Quincy (0-3), meanwhile, traveled to West Roxbury Wednesday and hosts Cohasset tonight at 8 (rained out Monday) and Stoughton tomorrow at 8 p.m. and heads to Braintree Saturday at 11 a.m.

In Morrisette's loss to Milton, the defense, considered a strong suit this season, simply fell apart behind pitcher Steve Pizzi (NQH). Pizzi pitched six innings, allowing three earned runs on five hits and while striking out 10 and walking four.

"It was a terrible game," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "We played awful. We haven't been playing like that. I told the kids after the game that we only allow one of these games a year and that was it."

Trailing 1-0 in the second inning, Morrisette had an excellent chance to even the score. After Neal Gavin reached on a walk, Pat Duff drilled a double over the right fielder's head but Milton was able to recover to gun down Gavin at the plate.

In Quincy's loss to Weymouth, the team seemed to carry over some momentum from its late-inning offensive performance in the Morrisette game.

After battling early control problems, Mike Feetham bounced back to pitch a strong game, scattering five hits and striking out two.

He also added a pair of hits at the plate and a run scored. Wayne Moynihan also had a pair of hits, while Dennis Thomson, Pat Jaehng, Chris Lockhead and Joe Fitzpatrick each had a hit.

But Quincy couldn't deliver in the clutch. In three of the final four innings, Quincy had two runners in scoring position but was unable to push them across home plate.

Defensively, Quincy turned in a solid game, especially in the seventh.

COLORSHIFTING PAINTS

The next revolution in auto paint involves pigments that change color as you walk around the vehicle. These are not the subtle shifts of hues associated with mica or pearlescent paints. They are dramatic transformations that span a wide area of the color spectrum. These paints rely on light refraction for their bright colors. The key to these paints is synthesized flakes, one micron thick, that are composed of several layers. At the center is an opaque, mirror-like aluminum core covered on both sides by a layer of glass-like magnesium fluoride, followed by a semi-transparent layer of chrome. Light passes into each flake through the two outer layers and reflects off the aluminum core, being refracted by the glass-like layer.

Central Middle School once again used depth and talent to take both ends of this year's recent Middle School City Track Meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The boys scored 68.5 points to Sterling's 29 and the girls outdistanced Atlantic, 78-37, to run away with the championships.

On the boys' side, Benson Luc (long jump), Chris Potter (800 meters) and Tom Lee (400 meters) won for Central, as did its 4 x 100 and 4 x lap relay teams.

Other winners included Broad Meadows' double-winner Glenn Gibbons (100 meters, high jump), Sterling's Joe Brown (shot-put) and Jade Pina (200 meters), and Atlantic's Brendan Muleahy (mile).

On the girls' side, Central winners included Kim Allen (high jump), Genevieve Olson (800 meters), Erin McMahon (400 meters) and the 4 x lap relay team.

Broad Meadows' winners were Kim LeBel (long jump) and Dahlia Parker (100 meters), Kelly Pineo (shot-put), Kayla Martin (mile) and Jenna McNeill (200 meters) won for Atlantic, which also took the 4 x 100 relay on an exciting come-from-behind anchor leg by seventh-grader Melissa Mendall.

The program was organized by high school coaches Scott King (QHS) and Geoff Hennessy (NQHS), assisted by John Franceschini and Eric Clifford, both of QHS. Officials were Jim Rendle, Maureen Duggan, Charlie Djerf and Rich Hanlon.

An added highlight is the Runners Expo, which will be held prior to the race and is open to all registered runners and family members. There will be satellite parking and an expanded food court.

The race benefits the many charities of the area, including Father Bill's Place in Quincy, Boys & Girls Clubs in South Boston, Dorchester and Charlestown, South Boston Collaborative, Children's Hospital, Curley Recreational Center and more.

cially Lockhead at shortstop, Thomson at second base and catcher John Fidalgo. Dave Jaehnig made a sensational running catch in right field that saved two runs in the sixth inning.

In the Quincy-Morrisette showdown, Morrisette capitalized on Quincy's inexperienced pitching staff, which walked 10, and shaky defense, which committed six errors due to the slick, wet conditions.

Morrisette jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the second inning and then sent 14 men to the plate in the third as it exploded for nine runs on seven hits for a comfortable 12-0 cushion.

Shortstop Don Cook led off with an infield hit and scored on Brian O'Hanley's triple. After Duff walked, Gavin singled to score O'Hanley for a 5-0 lead.

Catcher Tom Hughes walked to load the bases and then Rob Muollo and Liam Powers each walked to knock in runs for a 7-0 lead.

After two outs, Cook batted for the second time in the inning and delivered a two-run single that plated Muollo and Powers. Pat Bregoli, who reached on fielder's choice, scored on a wild pitch and O'Hanley drove in Cook with single. Gavin added an RBI single for a 12-0 lead.

Morrisette added a pair of runs in the fifth for a two-touchdown lead. Pitcher John O'Connell breezed through the first four innings without allowing a hit. But in the bottom of the fifth Quincy exploded for eight runs.

"He just ran out of gas," Cattaneo said. "Forsome reason he just tired out."

In the inning, Quincy received help from its bench. Brendan McDonald reached second base on an error and scored the first run when Dave Jaehnig laced a single up the middle to break up O'Connell's no-hitter and shutout.

John Mateu singled to right and Dean Sandonato smashed a single off the third baseman's glove. After four walks and a booming double by McDonald, the score was 14-6. Mike Maloney and Jaehnig knocked in the other two runs with groundouts.

A Message From South Shore Mental Health

Support For Family Caregivers

By CAROLYN HOUSMAN, LICSW

Do you arrange your schedule around your father's doctor appointments? Have you ever had to turn down a social invitation because you were picking up your mother's medication? If so, you are not alone. According to the National Alliance for Caregiving, at least 22 million adults in the United States provide care for older family members.

While family caregivers are the major source of long-term care in America, the physical and emotional demands of caring for an elderly loved one can be isolating and stressful. But who is monitoring the well-being of these caregivers? While the caregiver is concerned about their loved one, who is concerned about the caregiver?

The Stress Of Caregiving

The physical demands of caring for older persons with disabilities can cause health problems in the caregiver. Interrupted sleep, chronic fatigue and muscle aches are among the most common complaints of family caregivers. In addition to physical exhaustion, many caregivers have concerns about their ability to meet the physical demands of caring for an elderly person. These concerns can contribute to feelings of stress, depression or anxiety.

In general, caregiving can generate a wide range of emotions. The primary caregiver is at risk of feeling trapped, isolated or depressed. The caregiver can even have feelings of anger over the loss of control over their own life, their new role demands and the restrictions on their time and contacts within the community. These feelings can alternate with feelings of guilt for harboring negative feelings about a close family member.

In addition to causing stress to the primary caregiver, it also places demands on siblings, spouses, in-laws and grandchildren in the family. Many families experience stress during the multiple changes that accompany a caregiving situation.

Support For Family Caregivers

In response to this need for support for individuals and families caring for an elderly family member, and through a grant from South Shore Elder Services, South Shore Mental Health developed a service called "Caring Connections," which offers support for caregivers of elderly family members.

Unlike support groups, Caring Connections focuses on the specific needs of the individual or family. Services are provided by specially trained mental health clinicians with expertise in gerontology and experience in family dynamics.

Services include:

Assessment, facilitation of family communications, supported family decision-making, and referral for counseling and other community services.

Caregiving touches all of us, either within our own families or within our communities.

If you would like more information about the Caring Connections program or to make an appointment or referral, please call 617-921-3565.

Housman is the program coordinator of Caring Connections at South Shore Mental Health, a community resource providing mental health and substance abuse services throughout the South Shore, southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod. For more information about any of the programs, call 617-847-1950 or visit www.ssmh.org.

New Diabetes

Education Program At Quincy Medical

Quincy Medical Center recently created a new, comprehensive Diabetes Self-Management Education Program to meet the needs of the South Shore's increasing diabetic population.

Diabetes is on the rise, up 8 percent from previous calculations, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

More than 6 percent of the U.S. population, roughly 17 million Americans, suffer from the disease. Another 16 million Americans can be classified as "pre-diabetic," with high blood sugar levels that will likely turn diabetic within 10 years if changes are not made to diet and physical activity.

The program, modeled after the American Diabetes Association accredited Boston Medical Center program, offers patients with diabetes comprehensive educational services to assist them in managing their disease.

The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) recently named Boston Medical Center among the top 50 hospitals in the United States.

"We have always provided education to patients with diabetes, but our new program allows us to expand the scope of educational services to this population," said Michele DeBianco-Fortin, MS, RD, LDN Clinical Nutrition Manager and program administrator.

The new program includes education on such diabetes self-management skills as medication administration, nutrition counseling, exercise, self-monitoring of blood-glucose levels, prevention of hypoglycemia and foot care. Primary care physicians or referring physicians will receive ongoing communication regarding the care of their patients.

To meet the needs of the 86,000 diabetics that undergo lower extremity amputations each year, largely due to foot problems, QMC offers a state-of-the-art foot-sparing surgical procedure, performed by one of the nation's leading vascular surgeons.

The medical center also offers a free smoking cessation program, since smoking is known to dramatically increase the risk of diabetic circulation problems.

For more information about QMC's Diabetic Self-Management Program call 617-376-4028.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHAT'S NEW IN DENTAL IMPLANTS

With an endosteal (in-the-bone) dental implant, the dentist makes an incision in the gum and creates a hole in the jawbone to accept the titanium fixture, which will anchor the replacement tooth. The goal is osseointegration, in which the bone heals and forms a direct bond with the implant to stabilize it. Until fairly recently, getting an implant was a two-stage process that required cutting into the gum twice, necessitating two periods of healing. Now, a single-surgery technique can halve the time from evaluation to completion (when only one or two teeth are involved and the gums and bone are healthy). Much of the success of the one-stage process is due to advances that improve stabilization of the titanium anchor.

Implant dentistry is the modern method of replacing missing teeth. From a single missing tooth to an entire set of teeth, dental implants can provide a permanent alternative to many dental problems. Dental implants can last a lifetime and are an excellent investment to oral health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we keep abreast of all the latest advances and procedures that technology has to offer. For more information or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The one-stage dental implantation process encourages osteoblasts (bone-building cells) to make more bone quickly.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Bibles of every religion in the world mention the word -- "witness." Let's think about the word, not necessarily in a religious sense, but from an earthly view of human reaction. All of us witness things every day. We see varying circumstances, situations and attitudes all around us, both good and bad.

As we witness these things in other people, wouldn't it be a good idea for us to ponder what other people see or witness in us? Each of us, individually sets a standard of behavior, thought and expression linked to ourselves. In doing this, we naturally provide a scene or knowledge for others to witness. The things we do and the things we say cause people to talk about us favorably or gossip about us unfavorably.

We create our own image, good or bad. We control the destinies of our image in the minds and thoughts of others. When we can be rightfully proud of what others witness in us, we gain an inner gladness that automatically portrays a better, more likeable image. . .

Commitment

Quincy Public Schools, AKA The Titanic

We've been told all along that the City of Quincy is committed to education. Mayor Phelan insists that education is his number two priority. The teachers of Quincy, through their association/union would like to say farewell to our colleagues listed below, who are the victims of that "commitment." They have all received layoff notices. Some may be called back if the state shows more commitment than the City of Quincy does, but they'll never be the same. And many others who are able will leave for other, more committed communities, as Quincy becomes the training system for other communities.

Among the Professional Teacher Status (PTS) people are teachers with up to 31 years of commitment to Quincy's children, and up to 35 years committed to teaching. That is commitment. What Quincy is doing to these teachers is not commitment. The City of Quincy's annual budget is approximately $198 Million dollars. Less than a third of that goes to the schools. The average commitment in the state is just under 50%. These layoffs happen at a time when Quincy's teachers are already among the lowest paid in the area, and negotiations for a new contract have been ongoing. While the "cost" of a teacher is going up everywhere around us, and communities are paying it without layoffs, Quincy has lower paid teachers and STILL lays them off. The Quincy Public Schools/Titanic is heading directly for the iceberg fields. We project that it will arrive there next September. If you'd like to change the course NOW, call Mayor Phelan. Call the School Committee.

Honoring His Mother And Father

A SON'S TRIBUTE: Paul Harold (left), current Norfolk County Register of Deeds and former City Council President, admires a plaque in City Council Chambers noting the dedication of its two Victorian-style chandeliers in memory of his parents, Joseph R. and Marguerite M. Harold, at dedication ceremonies Sunday. Joining Harold are Joseph R. Harold, grandson of Joseph and Marguerite Harold, and County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis. The chandeliers, installed in 1997 at a total cost of $10,000, were paid for by Harold when the city could not find the funds for the fixtures in its restoration budget. The Dec. 17, 2001 date on the plaque represents Harold's last meeting as council president. "This is a son's tribute to his parents," said Harold, who was joined by family, friends, and local officials at the dedication ceremonies.

Granite St. Sidewalk Repaired After Injuries To Seniors Reported

By CRAIG SALTERS

A stretch of sidewalk along the street connecting Burgin Parkway to Granite St. — torn up recently as part of construction work for the Quincy Concourse project — has been repaired, but not before purportedly causing injuries to six Quincy residents and creating a storm of protest from city councillors, most notably Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

"This is not something which can afford to last another 24 hours," Coughlin told fellow members of the City Council's Public Works Committee Monday night, alerting councillors to the ripped up sidewalk which he said had troubled the roughly 500 seniors living at 99 Granite St. and 125 Granite St. and had caused six pedestrian injuries in a two-week span, the most serious being a broken hip suffered by Bea Remillard, a resident of 99 Granite St.

In attendance at Monday night's meeting was DPW Commissioner Jay Fink, who confirmed Tuesday afternoon that repairs to the sidewalks had been done that day.

Fink, who was at the work site early Tuesday morning, said a temporary sidewalk had been put in place by 8 a.m. and that work had commenced on two sections of sidewalk, one section ready for use by the afternoon and the other ready by 7 p.m.

Urge Weekly Collection

Yardwaste Pickup Plan Not Enough Councillors Say

By CRAIG SALTERS

City councillors Monday night warned of dire consequences if the city goes forward with summer and fall schedules for curbside yardwaste collection which do not include weekly collection until Nov. 4.

In the process, councillors at that night's meeting of the Public Works Committee found fault with the Department of Public Works (DPW) and Mayor William Phelan's office for what some perceived was a lack of communication on the issue, saying the city had changed the schedule with little notice both to councillors and residents.

"I don't know if the people on the third floor have any idea of the firestorm that is about to confront them," said Council President Daniel Raymondi, who said the mayor's office did not understand the impact of altering a basic city service to which residents had become accustomed. "This is not a water spigot at a playground."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he was troubled that councillors knew only last week that weekly yardwaste pickups would begin again in November instead of after Labor Day as originally planned. "That was not what I was led to believe was going to take place," Gutro said.

To varying degrees, all five members of the Public Works Committee — which include Chairman Joseph Finn, Gutro, and Councillors

Joseph Newton, Kevin Coughlin, and Bryan Connolly — urged the city to reconsider its decision not to have weekly yardwaste pickup. They later joined Raymondi in unanimously passing a resolve protesting the cutbacks in yardwaste pickup and urging the mayor's office to restore weekly pickup "forthwith."

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink told councillors that the city was committed to providing yardwaste collection but was trying to make the best use of manpower and resources in the wake of significant reductions to DPW

Francis Sandonato New City Engineer

Francis "Fran" Sandonato, who was recently appointed by Mayor William Phelan as city engineer to succeed the retired Fred Mirza, began work Monday in the Department of Public Works (DPW).

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink, who said Sandonato will work on such areas as road construction, water mains, sewer lines, sea wall repair, and similar projects for the city, introduced Sandonato to members of the City Council's Public Works Committee at their meeting Monday night.

Sandonato, age 51, is a registered professional engineer who has 32 years of experience working with the Massachusetts Highway Department, having served as a construction engineer for the Boston area.

Born and raised in Quincy, Sandonato is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and Northeastern University. He currently resides in the city's Adams Shore neighborhood.

Sandonato's father, Anthony Sandonato, serves the city as a member of the Planning Board.

Board.

Council President Daniel Raymond welcomed Sandonato and praised not only his expertise but his strong ties to the city. "He knows these streets," said Raymond, predicting Sandonato would do "an outstanding job" as city engineer.

Sandonato succeeds Fred Mirza, who began working for the city in 1988 and retired as city engineer in April of this year.

Salary for the position of city engineer is $75,118.

DOING THEIR PART—Quincy residents, from the left, Joanna Tam, Elaine Chan, Jenny Chiu and Kristina Woong are all smiles after crossing the finish line of the 20-mile Walk For Hunger. They and 42,000 other walkers raised a record $3.2 million for Project Bread to feed the hungry.

Tuesday night.

Contractor for the project is SPS New England.

Fink, who was criticized by Coughlin Monday night for not notifying the councilor of the sidewalk work, emphasized that the Quincy Concourse was a state project and that he only became aware of injuries at the site Monday morning.

"One injury is too many," said Fink, who told councilors that DPW Contract Manager Thomas Fabrizio served as liaison for the project. "If we had been aware that injuries had occurred, we certainly would have become involved much sooner."

Coughlin, who authored a successful resolve Monday night calling for repair of the sidewalks within 24 hours, said he was angered by what he said was a lack of response from city officials on the issue. As far back as June 10, Coughlin said, he had been in contact with Fabrizio, Fink, and Mayor William Phelan on the matter.

Coughlin's comments were echoed by Eileen Morrill, a resident of 125 Granite St. who addressed councilors and said that residents' calls for a solution were being ignored.

"Nobody cared. It's our problem because they made it our problem," said Morrill.

who added seniors travel those sidewalks frequently to get to the nearby supermarket.

Council President Daniel Raymond said that he also received calls about the sidewalks.

"People are extremely frustrated by a lack of response by the mayor," Raymond said. "People were calling and there was no response."

The Sun was unable to reach the mayor for comment Tuesday.

Polling Place Changes For Two City Precincts

Two of the city's 30 precincts — Precinct 3 in Ward 6 and Precinct 1 in Ward 3 — will have new polling places for upcoming elections Sept. 17 and Nov. 5.

Registered voters from Ward 6, Precinct 3 who previously voted in North Quincy High School will now vote at the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St.

Registered voters from Ward 1, Precinct 3 who previously voted in the Center for Technical Education building will now vote in the meeting room of the Thomas Crane Public Library on Washington St.

Factors in the polling place changes, said City Clerk Joseph Shea, were handicapped accessibility and overcrowding.

Although no voting will take place now in the CTE building, registered voters from Ward 6, Precinct 1 will still vote in North Quincy High School.

A primary date has been set for Tuesday, Sept. 17. An election date has been set for Tuesday, Nov. 5.

The city is comprised of six wards of five precincts each.

Leo Taken By Surprise

You don't very often take Leo Kelly by surprise. Not in his beloved Houghs Neck where he sees all and hears all.

But he was had Sunday night when he walked into the Quincy Yacht Club for what he thought was Jack Nigro's surprise birthday party.

And stepped into a room full of friends who were there for the surprise party.

But not Nigro's. Leo's 70th.

Kelly was so fooled he brought a restaurant gift certificate as a present for Nigro, a close friend.

"You're not getting it," he later told Nigro who was in on the surprise.

The party was organized by Margaret Milne with the help of Peggy Nigro, former school committee woman and Jack's wife.

Margaret went all out to keep it a surprise. She even had one phony invitation made up for a Nigro surprise party and sent it to Kelly.

And was with him when he bought the restaurant gift certificate for Nigro. But didn't say a word, determined to keep the surprise a surprise.

Kelly, who was elected to six terms as Ward 1 councillor and served two as council president, gave up the seat in 1983 to take an appointment as project manager for the Quincy Housing Authority from which he is retired.

He is now chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and has headed up the Quincy Evergreen program for 14 years.

But the urge to get back into politics is itching and he says he's going to run for his old Ward 1 seat again now that incumbent Greg Hanley will be vacating it next year.

How serious is he?

"I'm running," he says. "Definitely. Jack Nigro is my campaign manager and we are putting a committee together."

But, there was no talk of politics Sunday night. It was strictly a birthday party -- not a political rally, though there were a number of political figures, some of whom served with Kelly.

Among them:

Former Mayors Frank McCauley and Joseph LaRaia, City Council President Dan Raymondi, Senator Michael Morrissey, former Council President Peter Kolson (who emceed the program), state Rep. Steve Tobin, Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Judge Thomas Brownell, a former state representative; Register of Deeds Paul Harold, County Commissioner John Gillis, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, School Committee woman Linda Stice, former Councillors Dennis Harrington, Steve Durkin and Steve McGrath.

Tobin and Raymondi presented House of Representatives and City Council citations. There were also citations from Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor William Phelan and Morrissey.

Bob Derbes, representing the Quincy High School

Hall of Fame presented Kelly -- a 1950 graduate -- with three school jerseys, a football helmet desk set and a plaque.

Others there with their best wishes included: Rev. Alicia Corea, pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church; Rev. William English of Most Blessed Sacrament Church; two former Quincy First Ladies, Shirley Tobin and Sandra McCauley; John (Jake) Comer, past national commander of the American Legion; Tom Koch, Park Department executive director; Recreation Director Barry Welch, former Planning Director James Lydon, Mark Tobin, and many others.

A gathering of political -- and civic -- clout. All there not to help launch Kelly's election campaign but to wish him a "happy 70th."

As someone summed it up: "What a swell party it was."

And a nice tribute to a no fancy frills nice guy and straight shooter.

THE QUINCY FESTIVAL Committee is trying to find six "lost" past theme winners of the Christmas Parade.

The committee is planning a nostalgic 50th anniversary parade and celebration Sunday, Dec. 1 with special recognition to past theme winners.

The parade was started in 1952 by Fr. Thomas Tierney, a curate at St. John's Church and Quincy Fire Department chaplain.

But the tradition of an annual theme didn't begin until 1982.

NOONAN

"We have the names and addresses of most of the winners whom we will contact," says John Noonan, publicity chairman for the committee. "However, there are six past winners for whom we have no addresses or telephone numbers."

The six "missing" winners and the year's their themes won:

Carol Bray (1983), no listing information at all.
Paul A. Murphy (1984), also no listing information.
Marie Luck (1985), a Milton resident at the time.
Robert Castaldi (1989), living in Braintree then.
Anna McKinnon (1992) and Mary Buckley (1999), both Quincy residents in those years.

The committee can't find them. But they could find the committee by contacting Noonan by: telephone 617-773-9672; fax 617-376-1248 or letter, 24 Alton Rd., Quincy, MA 02169.

"We would really like to find them," says Noonan. "All the theme winners have played an integral part in the parade since 1982 and we would like to have them all with us, if possible, for the 50th anniversary."

And he adds: "It's going to be a super-colossal celebration."

MILESTONE: Some people wear their heart on their sleeve. Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center, has her's on her lapel.

Proudly pinned there are photos of her two new grandsons, Dillon Andrew and Nathan Lee Nohr, born May 17 in Marietta, Ga.

Parents are Sharron's son, Jason and daughter-in-law, Melissa Nohr, both of whom are attorneys and partners in different law firms.

Sharron has made two trips to Marietta to get acquainted with the new arrivals and to help out.

"You'd be amazed," she says, "at how many and how fast twin boys can go through diapers."

Quincy's Yesterdays Shipyard Strike Ends

By PAUL HAROLD

Members of Local 5 of the shipbuilders Union met at the Quincy High School auditorium to ratify a new three-year contract, ending a 22-week strike. All 8,600 production workers were expected to be back to work in the next few days.

Meanwhile, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa reported the city's costs during the strike were $255,969, which represented $1.43 on the tax rate. The bulk of the money was for benefits paid to veterans and welfare recipients. Police Chief William Ferrazzi pegged police costs at $29,690.

FIRE DESTROYS NEPONSET RIVER BRIDGE

The New Haven Rail Road trestle across the Neponset River was destroyed by a fire, cutting off direct freight service from Boston to Quincy.

It was believed that the $150,000 fire was caused by sparks from a defective shoe brake on a freight train crossing the bridge. Boston and Quincy firefighters fought for more than 12 hours to save the important link between the two cities.

New Haven officials said that the fire would not cripple freight service because South Shore deliveries could be diverted to Middleboro via Taunton where there was a link north on the Old Colony line.

COMMITTEE TO SAVE QUINCY POSTMARK

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce set up a committee to save the Quincy postmark which would disappear from most mail under a new plan from the post office. Under the new plan, all ordinary mail would be taken from the Quincy post office to be processed and cancelled at the South Postal Annex in South Boston. Quincy business leaders protested both the loss of the Quincy postmark, but also the plan that would have Quincy mail travel to Boston unnecessarily for processing.

Committee members included chamber president and president of Supreme Markets; Paul Cifirio, Matthew Cushing, vice president of the South Shore National Bank; Jeremiah Donovan, manager of Sears Roebuck and Frank Remick of Remick's.

Not Sure Lights At Cove Way The Answer

I drive on Southern Artery all the time. I try to stay off it during rush hour but sometimes I have little choice.

I recently watched a City Council hearing on traffic lights for Cove Way, the entrance road to Captains Cove's 300-unit condos. I'm glad I don't live there. It must be one giant pain trying to come and go, especially at rush hour.

However, I am not sure that traffic lights there stopping both northbound and southbound traffic is the answer.

Cars heading to Boston usually pick up speed after getting trapped for long periods of time on Washington St. Cove Way comes up quickly on a downgrade which winds to that entrance.

Having three traffic lights covering four blocks between Cove Way and the new CVS Pharmacy seems a bit much.

Why not put one of those traffic lights that are timed to work when cars exiting Captains Cove hit a signal beneath the road activated by the car's weight?

As for cars returning home, I feel taking a left turn from the northbound lane is a disaster waiting to happen. Think twice before doing that.

Praise For Quincy's Emergency Management Team

I listened to President George Bush talk about various programs that he is very much in favor of, to foster volunteerism by all ages of every citizen of the USA and the state of our nation in today's world; also FEMA officials discussing our vulnerability to a nuclear attack by terrorists.

It has compelled me to write about the state of preparedness of Quincy, a city which I love and have served over 42 years in Emergency Management activities. I was promoted from a volunteer emergency heavy duty rescue team member with the old "Blue Goose" to Emergency Management Agency director under two mayors.

I am proud of the part I played with the best and most knowledgeable Emergency Management team in the country. Quincy's agency was considered one of the best prepared in the country to deal with any disasters. Our records, if still on file, can show FEMA and MEMA's faith in us by sending many foreign dignitaries to visit Quincy.

We received much support and financial aid because they knew we would use it wisely and were always ready to give mutual aid to others when needed. I can give much more evidence of why this agency was the best and why it is so important to the welfare of Quincy.

Now I understand that for all intent and purposes, it no longer exists. The best Emergency Manager in the area has been fired and the best trained and experienced support personnel have transferred to the Braintree Emergency Management Agency. I know them well enough to believe they will continue to assist Quincy as a mutual aid area team. I am very disappointed that citizens and officials of Quincy have not said thanks to them for past services.

I have continued to be active and provide consultant services to the Quincy Emergency Management Agency. I support my local American Red Cross as a Disaster Team Leader.

We are now using Quincy's CERT (Community Emergency Response Team) manuals and handbooks to develop our area teams at the request of the American Red Cross and President Bush. These are the best training manuals available and Quincy was first in developing the program. Mr. Siciliano put a lot of effort in the program and received sizable financial grants over the years to promote CERT programs around the state.

May what little that I can contribute help re-examine what may have been an error in judgment and action that has destroyed your best Emergency Reserve Agency. Today's news justifies immediate action. This letter has not given justice to all the other services that this agency has given to the city since World War II.

Please take note, say thanks whenever you can and look to the future by being better prepared to deal with misfortune and ready to cope with and mitigate whatever may befall Quincy.

Declaration Of Independence Passage To Be Recreated At Adams Mansion July 4

The National Park Service and Adams National Historical Park invite residents to play a part in one of our nation's greatest dramas: the passage of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776.

Three performances of the event are scheduled for Thursday, July 4 at 11 a.m., 2 p.m., and 7 p.m. in the Carriage House at Adams National Historical Park, Old House, 135 Adams St.

Admission is free.

Members of the audience will assume the roles of delegates to the Continental Congress and represent their colonies in a debate that will determine the fate of a nation.

Led by the "Atlas of Independence" John Adams, the debate becomes heated as the time draws short before the final vote is called. After the debate, each delegate signs his or her name to the document, rings the Liberty Bell, receives a copy of the Declaration of Independence to keep as a memorial, and has a slice of "Liberty Cake."

A candlelight vigil parade following the evening performance will end at the United First Parish Church where the Declaration of Independence will be read and bells will toll freedom throughout the land.

Reservations for the event can be made by calling the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175.

James Fratolillo Elected Legion State Commander

James Fratolillo of Quincy was elected state commander of the American Legion at the department's convention held this past Saturday in Pittsfield.

Fratolillo, a past commander of the Houghs Neck American Legion Post as well as a past commander for Norfolk County, joins a long line of Quincy residents who have held the office, including: Fratolillo's immediate predecessor in office, Larry Connors; Henry "Hank" Bradley, the city's director of Veterans' Services; Paul Hunt; John "Jake" Comer, who is also a past national commander of the American Legion; and Robert Eng.

In addition to six state commanders of the American Legion hailing from Quincy, Bradley noted that Quincy resident Thomas McDonald served as state commander for the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) and that Quincy resident Charles Baharian served as commandant for the Marine Corps League's State Detachment.

Bradley attributed the city's strong presence at the state level to an energetic veterans community which he called "one of the more active in the area, if not the state."

"I owe a lot to the American Legion and being a part of an organization with fellow veterans who have served in a time of war gives me a tremendous feeling of pride," Fratolillo told fellow Legionnaires during remarks Saturday. "It has given me the sense of respect that was not presented to me when I returned from Vietnam."

Fratolillo, age 52, is a Vietnam veteran and a graduate of Quincy High School.

Kara Hampe Chosen For Student Ambassador Program

Quincy resident Kara Hampe, a student at Blue Hills Regional Technical School, has been selected by the People to People Student Ambassador Program to join a delegation of high school students from the Plymouth/Bristol area visiting Europe this summer.

As a student ambassador, Hampe will spend approximately three weeks learning about the government, economy, and culture of England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, and the Netherlands and will spend a portion of the trip in the homes of host families.

As part of the preparation for the trip, the delegation conducted a food drive with proceeds distributed to several food banks and soup kitchens in the Plymouth/Bristol area.

Bay State Community Services Awarded $260,000 Grant

Bay State Community Services has received a grant of $260,000 from the American Legacy Foundation to fund the Asian Tobacco Action Center.

As part of Legacy's $21 million grant program, Bay State Community Services was selected to build and strengthen existing tobacco prevention and cessation efforts and create new strategies for addressing tobacco-related health disparities among the Asian population in Quincy.

The 1997 National Health Interview Survey data show that overall current smoking prevalence is 16.9 percent for Asian American and Pacific Islander adults. This is compared to the national average, which shows that 23.5 of all adults in the United States smoke, according to CDC 1999 data. Additionally, 29.4 of Quincy male Asians are smokers, largely due to smoking being a well-accepted social behavior in the Asian culture and tradition.

"As the executive director representing Bay State Community Services, I am very pleased to accept this grant from the American Legacy Foundation," said Kenneth Tarabelli. "The creation of the Asian Tobacco Action Center provides the opportunity for the community to work closer together regarding efforts to curtail tobacco use."

Bay State Community Services expects the ATAC will play a crucial role in enhancing current tobacco efforts and will serve as a catalyst for the Asian population to voice their concerns regarding tobacco issues. The Asian Tobacco Action Center will address four of the most critical aspects related to tobacco: media and counter-marketing; second hand smoke; prevention; and infrastructure and capacity building.

Cheryl Heaton, Legacy's president and chief executive officer, praised Bay State Community Services for its commitment to reducing and preventing tobacco use. "We are pleased to offer this grant to Bay State Community Services and help expand its efforts to reduce tobacco use among the Asian population in Quincy," Heaton said. "Legacy is committed to working with organizations who can do the research that must be done and identify, approach, and address their communities' needs."

The grant is part of Legacy's Priority Populations program, which will provide a total of $21 million over three years to a broad range of organizations that employ effective and innovative approaches to decrease tobacco use. Legacy announced it will distribute the second round of grants totaling $10.5 million to 49 organizations in 29 states to help reduce tobacco use among one or more disadvantaged populations: African-American, Asian and Pacific Islander, Hispanic, Native American and Alaska Native, gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender, and low-income persons.

In November 2001, Legacy announced the first round, awarding $10.5 million in grants to 32 organizations in 18 states.

The American Legacy Foundation is a national, independent, public health foundation in Washington, DC, created by the November 1998 Master Settlement Agreement. The foundation collaborates with organizations that are interested in decreasing tobacco consumption among all ages and populations nationwide and has established goals to reduce youth tobacco use, decrease exposure to second hand smoke, increase successful quit rates, and reduce disparities in access to prevention and cessation services and in exposure to second hand smoke.

Taxpayers Group Unhappy With New City Budget

The City Council's approval of a $195 million municipal budget for Fiscal 2003 has left the Quincy Taxpayers Association in a snarly mood.

The Council concluded its deliberations of Mayor William Phelan's spending proposals without cutting any of the areas suggested by the QTA.

"As in past years, the Council made no effort to make city departments justify their staffing or their spending," said Alan Cousins, president of the QTA. "They made $1.77 million in cuts, but they were not real cuts, because the mayor will simply have to come back for more money for those fixed costs later."

The QTA made a presentation to the Council before the budget was passed in which it emphasized what it saw as a need to hold down personnel costs.

The recommendations were ignored.

"They made those cuts, not with the intent of saving money, but with the intent of moving that money to the school budget," said Cousins.

"They were looking for every penny they could spend, not for every penny they could save."

Clean air in the workplace isn't a privilege, it's a right. Considering that secondhand smoke contains twice as much tar and nicotine as the smoke inhaled by the smoker, it's no surprise Massachusetts workers are demanding smoke-free workplaces. Businesses that ban smoking enjoy a healthier workforce and lower absenteeism. Ask your employer if they'd consider going smoke-free. Because clean air works for everyone.

First Graduating Class Of Point Webster's Student Police Academy

Twenty-seven students who attend Point Webster Middle School recently became the first graduates of the Point Webster Student Police Academy.

The school's program is made possible by a four year grant funded by the Byrne Memorial Grant Program under the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety. The New Horizon for Youth program, which was facilitated by School Committee-woman Linda Stice in her capacity as executive director of the Mayor's Commission on the Family, is offered to all students who attend Point Webster Middle School.

The 27 students, who are enrolled in Grades 5 through 8, attended a two-hour session once a week for six weeks under the direction of Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna.

The objective of the program is threefold: to give youngsters a better understanding of policing; to meet police officers; and to learn what policing actually is as compared to how it is depicted in the movies.

Several topics were covered over the course of the six-week program, including: police stress, juvenile investigations, court procedures, domestic violence, good decision making, drug investigation, women in law enforcement, and police tactics. Each student also had the opportunity to tour Quincy Police Station, participate in a "Ride-Along" program, and have an official student police identification made.

The "Ride-Along" program involved three students at a time who were assigned to ride with a police officer for approximately two hours and experience policing first hand.

While the students were involved in the police academy, they were also required to keep a written journal of the activities they participated in. These journals were reviewed and discussed by the police officers involved.

The six-week program culminated in a graduation ceremony at Point Webster attended by students, parents, police officials, Supt. of Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro and other school personnel, and Council President Daniel Raymond.

The students received a certificate and a student police T-shirt. A small reception was held in the school's Edward Pettinelli Memorial Room.

A second class of Point Webster students has already registered for the program.

Point Webster Middle School Principal James McGuire also added that he was "elated" that more than 183 students from the school have participated in the New Horizons for Youth After-School Program.

For more information on the New Horizon program, contact Point Webster at (617) 984-6600.

And Not Just On Weekends.

You never know when you or your family may need to visit the hospital emergency department. But you can take comfort in knowing that Milton Hospital is ready to provide the emergency and urgent care you need. 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Extra Coverage - Extra Care
In addition to providing extra coverage on weekends, our emergency department now has a physician's assistant on duty every day during our busiest period (from 2 to 10 p.m.). This enables us to direct emergency cases to the department physician, while the physician assistant treats less critical conditions. The results are shorter waits and more personal attention for our patients. We take the time to answer your questions and address your concerns. It's the kind of personal care that has earned us high marks in recent independent patient satisfaction surveys.

Here When You Need Us
More than 18,000 people are treated in Milton Hospital's emergency department each year, at all hours of the day and night. We hope you don't have to visit us, but isn't it good to know that we'll be here if you do?

Fajitas & Ritas Comes To Quincy

The grand opening of Quincy's newest restaurant, Fajitas & Ritas on 1245 Hancock St., was scheduled to take place Wednesday at 5 p.m. with a celebration featuring Mayor William Phelan, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, and other members of the community.

Fajitas & Ritas is a "Tex-Mex" style restaurant that features a number of specialties including a variety of fajitas and margaritas. Owner Brad Fredericks runs two other Fajitas & Ritas branches -- one on 25 West St. in Boston and the other on 48 Boylston St. in Brookline.

Citizens Bank of Massachusetts and the Quincy 2000 Corporation provided the financial support for Fredericks' Quincy venture. Citizens supplied a direct small business loan of $150,000 while Quincy 2000 assisted in the purchase of $45,000 worth of equipment for the restaurant.

"We think it's a great addition to the downtown and have already received a lot of inquiries about the opening of the restaurant," said Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000. "There is a lot of demand for this type of cuisine."

Said Thomas Hollister, president and CEO of Citizens Bank of Massachusetts: "We appreciate the positive effects businesses like Fajitas and Ritas have on our communities. For that reason, Citizens continues to be New England's number one small business lender."

In addition to its fajitas and margaritas, the restaurant's menu will also feature "Tex-Mex" specialties ranging from quesadillas and burritos to tequila wings and tostada salads. The restaurant will also serve as a location for private parties.

For more information about the new restaurant, contact Andrea Cale at (617) 725-5513.

Today's Needs Include Space For Home Offices, Modern Technology Lifestyle Changes Have Influenced Home Design

(NU) — Have you ever driven through a neighborhood and wondered what factors influenced the unique design of a home? Today, the home is no longer just a place to eat or sleep; it is a safe haven and a reflection of homeowners' lifestyles.

Over the years, many factors have modified home design.

World War II influenced homes of the 1950s. Economically built, they averaged 1,200 square feet or less with two bedrooms and one bathroom. A low price of $11,000 enabled soldiers returning from war to experience "The American Dream."

The split-level evolved in the 1960s as the need for separate formal, informal and sleeping areas arose. Designed for optimal space efficiency, these homes averaged three bedrooms and two bathrooms. The average cost was $23,330.

The heightened environmental awareness of the 1960s influenced homes of the 1970s. Some homes included innovative solar energy panels. Averaging $26,600 and 1,585 square feet, most homes featured three bedrooms, and one and a half or fewer bathrooms.

Inflation dramatically increased the average price of a home in the 1980s. With approximately 1,750 square feet, the average cost was $105,770. Homes had three or more bedrooms and two or more bathrooms.

Economic revitalization made the 1990s a decade of affluence. By 1997, two out of three Americans owned a home. The average home cost $149,800 and had 2,095 square feet with three bedrooms and two bathrooms.

Today, more Americans work from home, increasing the need for home offices and modern technology. As a result, two-story houses with at least three bedrooms and two bathrooms are more popular than ever.

While design schemes have changed over the decades, carpet has continued to play an important role in home decor for more than 55 years.

DuPont first introduced nylon carpet fiber in 1947 and residential carpet gained popularity. This innovative fiber made residential carpet more affordable, enabling more Americans to bring home the benefits of carpet. In an effort to exceed consumer expectations, DuPont continues to advance its carpet fiber technology by providing protections against static, stains, soiling and crushing. Today, carpet is available in styles and colors to fit any decor.

For more information about DuPont Stainmaster, the most recognized brand in residential carpet, visit www.stainmaster.com or call 1-800-4-DUPONT.

Bathroom Remodeling Increases Home Values

(NU) — The nation's decorating dialogue has changed dramatically from yesterday. Today, it often takes two for a "redo" and a new survey conducted by Harris Interactive/

Yankelovich partners for EXPO Design Center found that 71 percent of Americans disagree with their significant others about something when it comes to home decorating. Couples say their main decorating disagreements focus on color, style and quality, the survey found.

It's no secret that homeowners hope to resell their homes for substantially more than they paid. But what some may not realize is the best way to do that is to pour money back into the home.

So what should you redo to increase your home's value? Recent studies show that bathroom remodeling is one of America's most popular and best returns on investment for major home improvements.

To learn how to remodel your bathroom quickly and inexpensively, visit www.rebath.com.

REAL ESTATE

Making Home Sweet Home Even More Affordable

(NAPS) — The desire to own a home remains powerful. Fannie Mae's National Housing Survey shows that owning a home is one of the top three lifetime goals of American families.

To help make the dream of homeownership come true for more families, Fannie Mae in March 2000 launched a six-point plan:

- The Mortgage Rights Agenda to protect mortgage consumer rights.
- The National Minority

Homeownership Initiative to increase the number of minority homeowners.

• The Opportunity for All Strategy works to increase homeownership rates of and housing support to targeted groups such as new immigrants and women heads of households.

• The American Living Communities Plan will invest a total of $3 billion in inner cities and older suburban areas.

• eHomeownership, which uses technology to increase affordable housing.

• The Affordable Rental Housing Leadership Initiative to finance multifamily housing.

Fannie Mae helped more than 4.2 million families in 2001, including serving 680,000 minority households. The national minority homeownership rate of 49.5 percent currently remains far behind the 74.4 percent rate among white Americans.

"Fannie Mae is determined to expand minority homeownership," said Franklin D. Raines, Fannie Mae's chairman and CEO. "We have pledged to provide $420 billion in housing capital to serve three million minority Americans by the end of the decade."

Besides providing affordable mortgage products through lenders, Fannie Mae also partners with local non-profit organizations to provide counseling for first-time buyers. Without counseling, first-time homebuyers — especially those with less than ideal credit — may wind up paying a significantly higher interest rate for their mortgage.

"We are committed to bringing flexible, low-cost housing capital to families and communities that have been overlooked, underserved and overcharged," Raines said.

Fannie Mae is putting homeownership dreams within reach of new immigrants and minority families through an array of flexible mortgage products. These include mortgages that require as little as a $500 contribution from the borrower toward closing costs. Others provide flexible qualifying guidelines that consider alternative sources of income such as rent and part-time employment.

For more information about Fannie Mae's affordable mortgage products, and a list of nonprofit organizations and lenders in your area, call 1-800-7-FANNIE (1-800-732-6643).

Wood Floors, Decks Can Be Eco-Friendly

(NU) — If you're a wood enthusiast, your home is likely filled with it — from your kitchen cabinets to your bedroom furniture to your wood floors and outdoor deck.

However, even though the benefits of wood are plentiful, there is an environmental price to pay: the depletion of trees from the world's forests. Did you know that each person on the Earth uses, on average, 23.5 cubic feet of wood per year?

If you are looking to improve your home with a wood floor or deck, now there's a way you can be sure no live trees are harmed.

In reservoirs behind many dams, there are millions of acres of forest trapped underwater that were not cleared prior to flooding. Aquatic Cellulose (OTCBB:AQCI), an earth-friendly company incorporated in Reno, Nev., has found a way to safely recover those trees and make use of them to preserve living forests and protect the environment.

In early 2000, Aquatic Cellulose began operation at Tukurui Reservoir in Northern Brazil, a timber project valued at more than $1 billion. Formed in 1982 by one of the largest dams in the world, Tukurui Reservoir covers more than 450,000 acres of inundated rainforest, where 36 different species of tropical wood have been identified. Among those include Brazilian cherry, walnut, teak and mahogany.

The wood is no longer living. However, it has been perfectly preserved for the past 20 years. You may not think this wood would be good, but it is. The fresh water actually protects the wood from exposure to the sun, insects and natural decay, and thus, under ideal conditions, can remain preserved indefinitely.

Aquatic Cellulose uses a patented robotic technology to safely and efficiently locate, cut and recover the submerged timber without the use of divers. At the heart of this inventive concept in logging is the Aquatic Timber Harvester, the brainchild of AQCI's Chief Executive Officer Gary Ackles. The ATH is a robotic machine that clamps on the tree, then neatly cuts it in seconds with a powerful saw and lifts it to the surface.

SPORTS

Quincy Bounces Back, Wins Three

After dropping its first four games — the first two by lopsided scores — the Quincy Legion baseball team has bounced back with competitive play to stay in the hunt for the postseason.

Quincy played six straight one-run games last week, winning three of its last four to improve to 3-5 this season.

Quincy played at Canton Tuesday and it hosted Weymouth yesterday (Wednesday). Tomorrow (Friday) night at 8 it hosts Canton and Sunday night at 7 it battles rival Morrisette for the second time this year.

On Monday night at Adams Field, Quincy rallied from an early 5-0 deficit against Milton to pull out an exhilarating 6-5 victory in extra innings.

In the seventh, Mike Feetham (3 hits) ripped a dramatic two-out, two-strike single that scored Wayne Moynihan (triple) to tie the game and send it into overtime.

In the eighth, Dennis Thomson reached on a single and stole second on a heads-up hustle play. Chris Lockhead, who had been in a slump entering the game, promptly lined the game-winning single to right field. He also belted a two-run double in the sixth.

On the mound, Thomson silenced Milton after the third inning and struck out seven in a complete-game performance.

Fifteen-year-old Dave Jaehning smacked two singles and played a strong game filling in at third base. Left fielder John Fidalgo and catcher Steve Williams had strong defensive games. Joe Fitzpatrick laid down a nice sacrifice bunt and helped out by catching the final three innings.

Last Saturday, Quincy suffered a 3-2 loss at Braintree, perhaps a bit tired from playing its fourth game in four days.

The powerful Braintree squad, which had been averaging 15 runs per game, scored one in the first inning, but Feetham kept them off-balance for most of the game by mixing his fastball, curve and change-up.

Quincy took a 2-1 lead in the fifth with some "small ball." Bryan Thornton doubled down the left field line and advanced to third on Moynihan's infield single. Charlie Vidoli squeezed in one run with a beautiful bunt and Feetham's sacrifice fly to deep right field gave the his team the lead.

Braintree, however, responded in its half of the fifth with two runs for a 4-3 lead. Quincy threatened to tie or take the lead by putting a runner on third base in the sixth and loading the bases in the seventh, but it was unable to deliver the clutch hit.

Fidalgo and Pat Jaehning collected two hits apiece and Thomson made a nice catch in right field to keep the game close.

Last Friday, 15-year-old Dean Sandomato overcame a shaky start to lead Quincy to a 3-2 victory over Stoughton at home. After yielding a triple, double and single, good for two runs, to the first three batters, Sandomato got the cleanup hitter to line into a double play and he cruised the rest of the way, blanking Stoughton on two hits.

In the bottom half, Moynihan (3 hits) crushed the first pitch he saw off the right field fence for a triple and scored on a wild pitch to put Quincy on the board. In the fourth, Pat Jaehning tied the game with a single to left-center that scored Feetham (single).

In the fifth, Dave Jaehning singled, moved to third on Moynihan's double and scored the winning run on a wild pitch.

Last Thursday, Quincy pulled out an exciting 3-2 win over Cohasset in a game that was originally scheduled for last Monday. On that day, Quincy trailed 7-0 in the fourth inning, fortunately, Mother Nature intervened with lightning and torrential rain to cancel the game.

Cohasset faced a completely different team this time around. On the hill, Thornton scattered four hits and struck out eight to propel Quincy to its first win of the season.

Quincy grabbed a 2-0 lead on Dave Jaehning's RBI double in the fourth inning and Feetham's RBI single in the fifth.

Cohasset evened the score at 2 in the seventh, but Quincy stormed back in the bottom half. Moynihan (2 hits) walked, stole second and third, and scored the game-winner on Vidoli's perfectly executed squeeze bunt.

Right fielder Mark Maher saved at least three runs with a sensational running catch with the bases loaded in the sixth inning.

Last Wednesday, Quincy fell to undefeated West Roxbury, 4-3. Fidalgo, who hadn't pitched since Little League, baffled the opposition with an assortment of slow change-ups, sharp curves and an occasional fastball.

Quincy seized a 3-0 lead on RBI singles by 14-year-old Drew Loud, Moynihan and Pat Jaehning. Feetham added a triple and a single.

Unfortunately, Fidalgo (9 strikeouts) tired after a quality effort and gave up a run in the sixth and three more in the last inning as Quincy suffered a heart-breaking loss.

Morrisette Bows Without Big Hit

By CHRIS POISSON

After winning four of its first six games, the Morrisette Legion baseball team has skidded with three losses in three days.

Clearly, the inability to come up with the big hit has plagued Morrisette in this recent stretch.

On Monday night, Morrisette suffered a 7-2 loss at West Roxbury. On Sunday it fell to Milton, 8-5, and last Saturday it lost to Stoughton, 4-3.

"We're going to be OK," said manager Ray Cattaneo.

"We're not getting any breaks. We're getting men on base, but nothing happens. We're not getting the clutch hits. We're not throwing runs away. We just have to do the little things here and there."

Morrisette (4-5) traveled to Stoughton yesterday (Wednesday) and tonight (Thursday) at 8 it hosts West Roxbury and Saturday night at 7 it hosts Braintree. On Sunday, it faces rival Quincy for the second time this season at 7 p.m. at Adams Field.

"We still have 11 games left to play," Cattaneo said.

"We're shooting for the playoffs. We just need a little confidence to get going."

Morrisette held a 2-0 lead against West Roxbury, but it was unable to produce any more offense for pitcher Steve Pizzi, who picked up the loss despite throwing the ball well with eight strikeouts in five innings.

Holding a 4-2 lead, West Roxbury scored three runs in the sixth to seal the game.

"Up until then we played well; we were doing OK," Cattaneo said. "We played decent. If we keep playing

Dick Queeney, John Green Inducted Into Semi-Pro Football Hall Of Fame

Quincy residents Dick Queeney and John Green were inducted into the American Football Association Semi-Pro Football Hall of Fame last Saturday at the 22nd annual dinner in Canton, Ohio.

Queeney, 55, played in the Eastern Football league for 12 years, a member of the Hyde Park Cowboys for seven years. He was a running back, receiver, punt returner, kickoff returner and defensive back. He also played football at Roslindale High School and Northeastern University.

Green, 66, coached the Hyde Park Cowboys of the EFL from 1982-1985, winning the championship '82. He was a two-time Coach of the Year award winner.

Green also coached the Charlestown Town team of the Boston Senior Park League from 1971-1977, and at Charlestown High School for 33 years.

MORE THAN YOU CAN CARRY?

As you make vacation plans and think about packing up the family vehicle, do not necessarily assume that a large cargo area means you can fill it to overflowing. In fact, some vehicles with large cargo areas have relatively low load capacities (the maximum combined weight of cargo and people that the vehicle is designed to carry safely). Vehicle owners should be aware that overloading can compromise safety by degrading handling, stressing the brakes, and possibly overheating the tires to the point of tire failure. Most automobile manufacturers provide load capacity data for cars (usually on a doorjamb sticker), but not for pickup trucks, SUVs, or minivans. It pays to check with the manufacturer if you are unsure.

Before you start out on that vacation trip make sure your car is in top working order. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck, our ASE Certified service technicians have the skills to handle it. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Overloading an SUV poses a special concern because it may raise its already high center of gravity, which may pose a rollover risk.

She performed a three-minute freestyle dance routine at auditions held at the Comedy Connection in Faneuil Hall Marketplace recently.

Morrisette Bows Without Big Hit

Milton pushed across two more runs for a 7-3 lead and added another run in the seventh. Morrisette scored a pair in the seventh to close out the scoring.

Brian O'Hanley (RBI) and Don Cook each had a pair of hits. Rob Muollo drove in two runs and Pat Bregoli and Steve Pizzi had an RBI apiece. Dom Delgado, Craig Keenan and Ray Marchand had hits.

In the Stoughton game last Saturday, Morrisette held a 3-2 lead in the fourth inning but Stoughton rallied for a pair of runs in the fifth en route to its first victory of the season.

Morrisette had the tying run at third base with two outs in the seventh but was unable to get the runner home.

Cook tossed the first four inning, striking out five and allowing one run on four hits. John O'Connell, who picked up the loss, yielded two runs in his three innings of relief work.

Neal Gavin had a pair of hits. Joe Priscella, Liam Powers and Pizzi each had an RBI, while O'Hanley added a double and Cook a single.

Last Thursday, Morrisette defeated Canton, 12-8. Muollo pitched the first two innings before Delgado relieved him. Delgado notched the win, allowing one run on six hits in 4 2/3 innings. Pat Duff recorded the final out of the game.

Morrisette held a slim 5-4 lead before it exploded for seven runs in the sixth inning to break open the game.

O'Hanley went 2 for 4 (triple, double) with three

RBI. Duff went 3 for 4 (double) with a pair of RBIs and Pizzi went 2 for 3 (triple, double) with an RBI. Cook added an RBI triple. Tom Hughes, Craig Keenan, Bregoli and Muollo all had hits.

Last Wednesday, Morrisette stumbled to Cohasset, 4-1. Boyle earned the loss despite allowing only run on four hits in seven innings.

Morrisette took a 1-0 lead in the third. O'Hanley (1 for 3) knocked in Pizzi, who had reached on an infield hit and moved to second on a passed ball.

In the fourth, Boyle allowed one run on a leadoff triple and an RBI double. He then loaded the bases with two outs, but the defense couldn't bail him out as it committed an error allowing two runs to score and a passed ball let in another.

Last Tuesday, Morrisette knocked off Weymouth, 4-3. John O'Connell allowed three runs on eight hits in seven innings to earn the win.

Weymouth scored two runs in the first inning, but Morrisette evened the score in the fourth on O'Hanley's 380-foot home run to center field.

Weymouth grabbed a 3-2 lead in the fifth inning, but Morrisette rallied for a pair of runs in the seventh. After Gavin led off with a walk and Priscella reached on a pinch-hit bunt single, Hughes moved both runners into scoring position with a sacrifice bunt. Muollo then walked to load the bases and Pizzi followed with a two-run double to left-center.

All games will be played in the afternoon and the level of competition is Cleveland (intermediate). Cost is $595 per team, $550 for New England Sports Den teams.

For more information call New England Sports Den at 1-866-EARLY-AM or visit its Web site (www.nesportsden.com).

Solid Pitching, Defense Key For Wollaston

Mike McLaughlin banded out three hits, while Gary Dalton and Chris Dolbear each had a pair. Dan Cosgrove made a great catch in left field with two outs in the seventh inning.

Backed by pitcher Steve Reardon, Wollaston knocked off Norwood, 10-4, to improve to 2-1. Reardon allowed just four hits and three walks while fanning 10. McLaughlin again had three hits. Chris Trietti and Andy McAllister had two apiece.

Wollaston dropped its second game of the year against Weymouth, 3-1, as it couldn't come through in the clutch. Mark Lopez struck out seven but also walked seven in 3 1/3 innings. Ryan Conley pitched well in relief, fanning seven with no walks to close out the game.

Down 2-1 after four innings, Wollaston stormed back for a 4-2 win over Braintree to improve to 3-2. Dalton, supported by an errorless defense, notched the win, giving up only four hits and punching out seven. He also had two hits and two runs scored.

Wollaston followed that performance with a 7-4 win over Braintree, rallying from a 4-0 deficit after three innings. Tam struck out 11 to pick up his first win and he added two hits at the plate. Cosgrove and Matt MacNeill each had two hits and two runs scored.

Wollaston topped Canton, 9-2, for its third straight win. The defense committed just one error for the second straight game and Conley tossed six strong innings, yielding only four hits and two walks while striking out five. Dolbear whiffed two in one inning of work.

Offensively, Dolbear belted a two-run triple and Matt Dondero and Chris Kirshner also added two RBIs apiece. Tam had two hits.

Quincy Senior Babe Ruth Win Three

Plymouth-Norfolk

The Quincy Senior Babe Ruth team has reeled off three straight victories to begin the season.

Due to the large number of players who tried out for the Quincy teams, ages 16-18, another team was formed and joined the new Plymouth-Norfolk County league.

On Sunday, Quincy swept both ends of a doubleheader, topping Hanson, 6-4, and Duxbury, 1-0.

Against Hanson, Eddie DeWitt picked up the win and Mike DeAngelo earned the save. Walter Perry delivered a clutch two-out, two-run single in the fifth inning. Mike Merlis also had an RBI single.

Against Duxbury, Paul Copson tossed a complete-game shutout and received tremendous defensive support. Jon Mendez scored the winning run in the first inning.

In the season opener last Thursday against Norwell, Ian Jorgenson pitched Quincy to victory, retiring the first 17 batters on the way to a complete-game, three-hitter with 10 strikeouts.

Tim Desaulniers, Mendez and Copson each had a pair of hits, while Malcolm Lynn, Scott Flaherty, Brendan Craig, Eric O'Dea, Jake Smith and Steve Sacchetti had one apiece.

Sean Stone Throws No-Hitter For Keohane's

Junior League Baseball

In his first appearance of the year, Sean Stone fired a no-hitter to lead Keohane's to an 11-0 win over the Lions in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Junior League action.

Stone, usually the center fielder, faced 19 batters, striking out 13 and walking only two. He was the third player for Keohane to toss a no-hitter this year, joining Tommy Conley and Joe Lousarian.

Anthony Alibrandi ripped a bases-loaded triple to spark a six-run, first-inning explosion.

Keohane finished the season with an 18-4 record. The league playoffs began Tuesday and conclude Wednesday, July 3.

New England Sports Den is seeking teams for its first annual Summer Adult Hockey Tournament to be held at Quincy Youth Arena.

The tourney will run for two weekends, July 13-14 and July 20-21. All teams are guaranteed two games with the top four teams returning the second weekend.

Those Stinging Insects

There's a buzz in the air and it's not a friendly one. Now that summer is here, legions of stinging insects have begun their carnivorous assault on outdoor activities across America. These hostile marauders often leave in their wake: widespread fear, painful stings and even death.

If you find yourself under siege, resist the temptation to launch a counter strike. This type of retaliatory action is best left to the professionals. If you become a sting victim, a trip to the hospital may be in order.

According to the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology, most insect stings result in a normal reaction. Symptoms include pain, swelling, itching and redness confined to the sting site. Recommended treatment includes gently disinfecting the area, using ice to reduce the swelling and using topical steroid ointments or oral antihistamines to relieve the itching.

Sometimes a normal reaction can be rather large extending well beyond the sting site (a sting on the wrist may cause the entire arm to swell). If this situation persists for more than a day or two, a physician should be consulted.

For 1 to 2 percent of the population, an insect sting reaction will be allergic in nature. This type of reaction is characterized by hives, itching and swelling in areas other than the sting site; tightness in the chest and difficulty in breathing; dizziness or a sharp drop in blood pressure; unconsciousness or cardiac arrest.

An allergic reaction can occur in minutes after the sting and may be life threatening or even fatal. Immediate medical attention is required and may involve the administration of certain drugs and in some cases intravenous fluids, oxygen and other treatments.

Because there is a 60 percent likelihood of a reoccurrence upon re-sting, allergic patients should seek follow-up care from an allergist. This specialist will evaluate a patient's allergic condition and may prescribe an insect sting kit for emergency treatment and/or immunotherapy; a highly effective vaccination program for lifelong protection against allergic reactions.

It was recently shown in a study published in the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology that most people who are allergic to insect stings who undergo a two-year vaccination program will have a prolonged benefit and a permanent loss of allergy. This is good news for the 2 million Americans who suffer from potentially life-threatening allergic reactions and the crippling fear associated with them.

For those interested in learning more about allergic reactions to insect stings, a free brochure written by the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology is available by calling 1-800-23-STING.

WHITE FILLINGS

Not only are composites (white fillings) more aesthetically appealing, but they also offer functional advantages over traditional amalgam (silver) dental fillings. Composites are physically and chemically bonded to the sides of the teeth, thereby resisting secondary decay as bacteria cannot get between the filling and the tooth. They bond also holds the filling in the mouth, which means that only the decayed tooth substance has to be removed during restoration. Amalgams, on the other hand, require more extensive removal and undercutting of healthy tooth to prevent the silver filling from falling out. Composite bonds also hold the sides of the prepared tooth together and replace up to 82.3% of the tooth's structural integrity, while amalgam merely occupies the space.

Together we can decide which filling would be better for your dental situation. We will be happy to discuss any oral hygiene concerns you may have. Any time you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust, too, is a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Composite fillings are made of plastic resin and a filler of finely ground glass-like particles.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Of all God's gifts to man, laughter is one of the most subtle and is one of the most precious. It has neither nationality nor religion. As an equalizer, it has no equal. Even science which can do so many things cannot teach us to laugh. It has been said that mirth is from God, dullness from the devil. When we laugh we agree with God that all is good.

It would be a pretty inhuman world without laughter, but it would be a pretty frivolous world without serious thought, meditation and occasional weeping. Yes, one of the most wonderful gifts God has given man is the gift of humor; the ability to laugh and to see the funny side of things.

Humor can take the antagonism out of differences. It can promote a congenial atmosphere. It opens the line of communication and breaks down barriers. Some people can't express humor even though they appreciate it, just as some people appreciate good music even though they can't carry a tune...

Laughter is not the final solution to life's problems, but it eases many a difficult situation. A very wise person once commented that the most utterly lost of all days, is that in which you have not once laughed...

Have you had your laugh today?...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Information you need might be coming in sporadically, but at least what you're getting is valuable. Continue to wait until more is available before acting on that career move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue on an upbeat cycle, and with that strong Taurine energy you should see favorable results from your hard work. A pleasant surprise awaits you in your private life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding needs more time to be worked out. Don't give up on it just yet. Remain open to providing explanations, if called for. Another friend offers good advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Fast action can correct a seemingly minor problem that has taken on some unexpectedly difficult aspects. Stay with it until it's resolved. News on a more positive note is due soon.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some snags could cause delays in those plans you're eager to see put into operation. But be patient. The Clever Cat will soon have good reason to celebrate a job well done.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let that Virgine sensitivity disuade you from being the hardheaded realist you should be at this time. Your goals are in sight. Stay focused on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive aspect opens up, allowing you to make some important changes in a personal situation. Remember to seek balance and avoid extremes as you proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good week to get out and enjoy the fine times you missed while you were so deep in those workaday projects. Be sure to share it with that special person.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Work and play are in balance this week. However, expect news that could tip things toward the workplace for quite a while. But all to a good end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're more productive on the job than you have been in some time. That's good. But be careful not to overlook some situations developing in your private life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been doing a lot for others (as usual). But now it's time to focus on your needs, including finally going on that long-delayed trip you've been hoping to make.

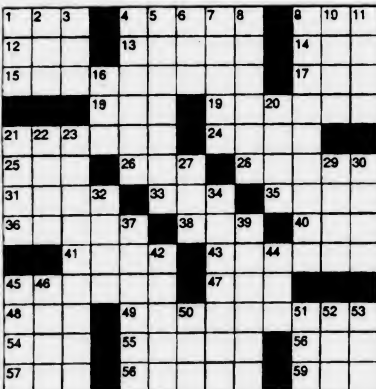

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's all smoothly going on 'twixt you and that very special person in your life. But a colleague causes some disruption on the job that you might be called on to help settle.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are sensitive to the needs of others. But you're no pushover. You would make a fine teacher, psychologist or minister.

THE PROPOSED SALE of a 12-acre parcel of land once part of the former Fore River Shipyard and currently owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) was a topic of discussion for the Quincy Point Business and Professional Association (QPBP) at a recent meeting held in the community room of Roche Brothers Supermarket. Here state Sen. Michael Morrissey details the Legislature's role in the sale process to audience members, including, from left: Dana Ahern, Ahern Communications, QBPBP treasurer; Thomas O'Brien, O'Brien Hyundai, QBPBP president; William Walker, Harbor Express, QBPBP vice president; James Felci, WJDA Radio, QBPBP secretary; and Mayor William Phelan. MWRA representatives also attended the meeting and presented information on the sale process.

Senate Passes Bill To Speed Fire Department Response Time

State Senator Michael Morrissey announces the senate's passage of legislation to allow fire department personnel to listen to emergency 911 calls as they are received by central 911 dispatchers.

The legislation is modeled after the successful program in the city of Quincy that has brought response times by the Quincy Fire Department below the state average.

"Quincy's procedure of allowing its fire department to listen to emergency 911 calls and immediately dispatch fire personnel to certain emergencies is the only system of its kind in the state," said Morrissey.

"I have heard from many firefighters urging passage of this bill as quickly as possible because it will save lives," added Morrissey. Senate Chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Government Regulations,

In Quincy, firefighters monitoring emergency 911 calls can only listen to the call and cannot speak on the line. In addition, if the call does not affect the fire department, fire department personnel hang up immediately, thereby freeing the line for other incoming emergency calls.

"This legislation is critical to emergency personnel because it cuts out the lag time between when central dispatch receives and records an emergency call for help and then routes that call to the fire department," said Morrissey.

The legislation is now under consideration by the House of Representatives after its recent passage in the senate.

staff. He emphasized that the current schedule — which calls for two pickups per month for the months of July, August, September, and October — was "somewhat flexible" and could be changed "depending on how Mother Nature treats us," adding that weekly pickup could begin "once those leaves come down."

Fink also reminded councillors and residents that yardwaste is accepted at the DPW's 55 Sea St. headquarters Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m.

until 3 p.m., a practice Raymond labeled "illogical" and impractical for most city residents.

Speaking in favor of weekly yardwaste pickup were Mac Gorman of Davis St. and her neighbor, Thomas Callahan. "This issue affects every single homeowner, including yourselves," said Gorman, who has been involved since yardwaste collection became an issue two years ago.

Under the current schedule, curbside collection of yardwaste will take place on regular trash days during the weeks of July 8, July 22, Aug. 12, Aug. 26, Sept. 9, Sept. 23, Oct. 7, and Oct. 21. It will then be picked up weekly from November 4 through Dec. 13.

The collection of yardwaste became an issue in 2000 when BFI, citing a 1991 state law only then enforced, refused to collect grass clippings and other yardwaste. The ensuing debate over the issue eventually led to a solution where city crews were assigned to pick up yardwaste.

Attempts by The Sun to reach the mayor for comment were unsuccessful.

Annual 'Family Fun Day' July 3 In Houghs Neck

In connection with the Houghs Neck Community Council (HNCC), the "Third of July Committee" has once again organized a celebration of our nation's independence which will take place Wednesday, July 3 from noon to 3 p.m. on Edgewater Beach in Houghs Neck.

The committee will provide food, drink, and various games for children, including a basketball tournament and beach games for various ages (4-6, 7-9, 11-13). Prizes, including T-shirts and patriotic ribbons, will be awarded. There will also be booths offering face painting and temporary tattoos.

BFJ's Wholesale will provide a booth for children to make patriotic magnets for the patients of Dana Farber Hospital.

There will be a nominal fee for food and drink. All sports, games, and activity booths will be free. Winners of the basketball tournament will be recognized on a "Family Fun Day" plaque donated by the Trahan Family.

There is no rain date.

Local businesses contributing to the event include: Bernie's General Store, Bib's Gas Station, Louis Crossing, Houghs Neck Package Store, Sea St. Auto, Sea St. Getty, and Play It Again Sports.

In addition, local Roche Bros., Stop and Shop, and Shaws supermarkets have donated food for the event and Coca Cola and Pepsi have both provided drinks.

After Family Fun Day, the Edgewater Beach community will host those who wish to remain to watch the annual fireworks display in Weymouth.
